Coverage Highlights

Special project: Making Noise

This sound-rich 4-part podcast series captures the largely untold story of a local- and Black-owned concert promotion company that has radically expanded access to Nashville's live performance stages for R&B, hip hop and soul artists. The documentary-caliber storytelling draws from more than 30 interviews, previously unreleased archival videos, and deeply informed insights from senior music writer Jewly Hight. The project is also the first crossover podcast between WPLN and WNXP, and aired on both, and led to a culminating community event on March 3, 2024.

Breaking news: January winter storm

Our most significant breaking news effort this quarter was a deadly winter storm that disrupted life in Middle Tennessee for a week. Our staff diligently covered the unfolding event and the ripple effects on K-12 students, the energy grid, road systems, and even the Nashville Zoo's animals. Much of this coverage was picked up nationally.

Covenant School shooting anniversary

WPLN's coverage of the one-year anniversary of the mass shooting at the Covenant School delivered heartfelt and analytical stories over the course of four days, with features on how private school security has changed; how Covenant families have grown as advocates; and how gun policies have tended not to evolve in the aftermath. And WPLN told these stories to the nation through three feature-length stories and timely Newscast spots on the anniversary date.

The controversy at Metro Arts

This body of work from Char Daston included 7 stories in March alone, including several that delivered new information to the community about the struggles of Metro Arts to administer grants to local arts and culture organizations. This accountability reporting is highly relevant to the community and has also clearly explained the political infighting within city agencies.

Politics and long-tail stories

Tennessee's legislative session has kept the entire staff busy. Highlights include consistent coverage of some of the most pressing unfolding issues, including the expansion of school vouchers, the overhaul of the board of Tennessee State University, the drumbeat of bills targeting LGBTQ Tennesseans, and new Republican-led measures related to guns and criminal justice.

On This Is Nashville, "Gun Week" took up a politically difficult topic and highlighted the subject from multiple angles.

Elections also loomed large, including Super Tuesday and local elections. Alexis Marshall and Blaise Gainey delivered an authoritative four-part series on the Sumner County Constitutional Republicans, and their intentions to take control of the school board and to exert more influence over access to books in public libraries.
