5	9/11/2015	Participation in events sponsored by community groups	A senior English major at BSU shadowed our main anchor, Natalie Hurst from about 2pm - 6pm. The student hopes to become a reporter. The student sat in on afternoon news meeting, then sat with Natalie for two hours and learned how to write scripts, book emceeing events, edit scripts and help reporters with live shots. Student then watched our 4-5 pm newscast and finally met with Kendra Martinez, our News Director. Kendra asked questions about the classes student was taking at Boise State University. Student talked about several English and writing classes. Kendra asked what Journalism courses student was taking at BSU. Student was not taking any Journalism classes. Student wanted to be a television reporter because student liked talking to people. Student wanted to know what advice Kendra had for getting into the business. Kendra said the most important thing is to get an internship at a TV station. Kendra explained that most students do that in their junior or senior years of college. Many stations will help students put together a resume tape at the end of their internship. Kendra also asked what courses Boise State offered in journalism. Student didn't know. Kendra said student needed to take some journalism courses, even if that meant going to another school. If she didn't want to be on TV, Kendra told her she could look into producing as strong writers are very in-demand. However, news directors want to know the person has an understanding of reporting – things like fact-checking, ethical and legal issues. So again, the importance of journalism courses and internships was reiterated.	2	News Director Main Anchor
