Government	6pm	9/12/2023	:46	At the state capitol today, the assembly passes a 3-billion-dollar income tax cut plan but it's one that Governor Tony Evers has already promised to veto. The measure which passed on a party-line vote in the republican controlled body would lower taxes by about a percentage point for individuals making up to about 300-thousand dollars and married couples making up to about 400-thousand dollars a year. It would also utilize about 4 billion dollars of the projected surplus to exclude the first 150-thousand dollars from a couple's retirement income from taxes. Republicans say it would combat inflation and keep more retirees living in Wisconsin but democrats echo Governor Evers' concerns that the cuts aren't sustainable and they should focus more on child care or more targeted tax relief.

Government	Daybreak	9/25/2023	:43	This morning we're learning more about the bill to change the way Wisconsin draws its voting maps, a bill that's now before the state senate. Viroqua republican representative Loren Oldenburg says he hasn't yet heard from senate leadership on whether the bill will be taken up following last Thursday's late-night vote. The vote was largely along party lines as democrats criticized the speed and timing with which it was introduced given there's now a lawsuit on the current maps likely headed for the now liberal-leaning state supreme court. Representative Oldenburg says amendments came from concerns addressed by democrats. That includes requiring a simple bipartisan vote of the legislature to approve any maps drawn by a non-partisan committee. Representative Oldenburg says he's hopeful the senate takes up the matter as he's heard from a senate democrat who he says is interested in the bill.

Education	6pm	9/26/2023	2:09	After a more than three year pause interest on student loan debt started accruing again at the beginning of the month and payments on those balances will resume on October first. ABC's Tim Pulliam has some tips for the millions of Americans who are affected. Earlier this year the supreme court struck down President Biden's student loan debt cancellation plan and now after more than three years Americans with student loans will have to start paying those debts again. Emily Irwin, senior director of advice at Wells Fargo, recognizes the difficult position borrowers are in. She says it's time to get organized, make a detailed list of your loans, including the loan provider, outstanding balance, and interest rate. Distinguish whether it's a private loan or publicly funded through the federal government. For the latter, she recommends setting up automatic payments. Next Irwin says to re-examine your budget. Look at your income and your expenses and allocate a new bucket to student loan payments. Tackling loans with the largest interest rates first can mean paying less money in the long run but at the very least she says to make the minimum payments. And if you're unable to there are resources available. You can start with student aid dot gov to research repayment programs such as an income driven plan and look into what types of deferment or forbearance options may be available to you based on a change of circumstance over the last three years. Irwin says the last thing you want to do is miss a payment which can impact your credit score and affect things like your ability to borrow money for a car or home.

Wave of Deceit

Texas housewife Laura Day seemed to have it all: a large home on the water, a loving marriage with her husband, David Syring, and a close relationship with her 6-year-old stepson, Taylor Syring. But, when Taylor drowned on a beach trip with Day under suspicious circumstances, police discovered her shocking criminal past, and the façade of her picture-perfect life quickly came crashing down. A two-hour “20/20,” in collaboration with Plum Pictures, features ABC News anchor John Quiñones’ interview with Day from prison, nearly a decade after her first-degree capital murder conviction for Taylor’s death. In the interview, Day opens up about what she claims really happened that day and her past crimes of bigamy and murder while also maintaining her innocence in Taylor’s death, alleging it was an accident. Truth and Lies: The Family Manson

It was one of the most gruesome crime sprees of the 20th century that shocked and haunted the nation. As Leslie Van Houten is released from prison this week, “20/20” explores Charles Manson, his cult of devoted followers and the grisly murders in Los Angeles that he instructed his members to carry out. Amidst an era of sex, drugs and rock and roll in 1969, Manson’s followers killed seven people in two consecutive nights, including actress Sharon Tate, who was more than eight months pregnant at the time, in the home she shared with her husband, Roman Polanski. The terrifying and violent acts instantaneously eliminated a sense of safety and security for many people across the country. After serving 53 years for her role in the murders, Leslie Van Houten, a former cult member, was released from prison this week. This episode includes ABC News’ interview with Van Houten from her time in prison and takes a look at the details surrounding her release. The program includes footage from ABC News’ interviews with Manson, in his last network television interview from prison, and former cult member Patricia Krenwinkel, who is serving a life sentence for the murders masterminded by Manson. The documentary explores the crime scene footage and features interviews with law enforcement, first responders and the production crew who met Manson during his final TV interview. The special also features interviews with Debra Tate, Sharon Tate’s sister; family and friends of the victims; actors who worked with Sharon; Mike Love of the Beach Boys, who met Manson before the killings; reporters who were in the courtroom during the trial and more. The Dating Game Killer

In 1968, Rodney Alcala lured a young girl outside the iconic Chateau Marmont hotel in Hollywood and into his car, which marked the beginning of his reign of cross-country attacks that spanned over a decade. Posing as a professional photographer, Alcala often used his good looks and charm to trap his victims. But perhaps his most brazen move came in 1978 when he made a chilling appearance as a contestant on the hit show “The Dating Game” and won. Through first-hand accounts from investigators, victims, eyewitnesses and even his court-appointed psychologist, “20/20” reports on one of the most notorious serial killers of modern times. Home Sweet Murder

When Mark and Shaun Staudte fell ill and died suddenly within months of each other, it seemed as though the Missouri family experienced a spurt of horrible luck. When Sarah Staudte developed similar symptoms soon after, landing her in the hospital, investigators and friends of the family grew suspicious: were these tragedies just bad luck or products of malicious intent? “20/20,” in collaboration with Plum Pictures, features contributing anchor Deborah Roberts’ prison interview with Diane Staudte, mother of four and mastermind behind a sinister plot to poison her husband and two children. Diane talks about her relationship with her family and her feelings about the tragic events and alleges that outside influences forced her to falsely confess to the police despite having no evidence to support that claim. The program includes recordings of police interrogations with Diane and her daughter Rachel Staudte, who pleaded guilty to helping her mother in her disturbing scheme to pick the family off one by one. It also features an interview with Sarah from the ABC News archives about how she is healing after her mother and sister's betrayal. (OAD: 2/25/22)

She also reveals intimate details about life after the incident, including her mom’s excruciating recovery; the family’s move to California to try and escape the media frenzy; her battle with drugs, alcohol and depression; how she turned her life around; and her relationship with her parents. How did a bizarre confession derail the investigation of the first murder committed by Keith Hunter Jespersen, the notorious “Happy Face Killer,” and allow him to remain on the loose, killing at least seven more women? A two-hour “20/20” reports on how after authorities discovered the body of Taunja Bennett in the Columbia Gorge in 1990, 57-year-old Laverne Pavlinac confessed to the police that she took part in the crime. In a shocking twist, Pavlinac’s confession turned out to be false to escape what she described as an abusive relationship with Sosnovske. With reporting by “Nightline” co-anchor Juju Chang, “20/20” dives into how Pavlinac was able to dupe police and features audio from the couple’s confessions, police interviews, and from the hidden microphone installed in Pavlinac’s apartment when she tried to convince Sosnovske that he was involved in the murder.
