Bill Whitaker talks with the host of CBS's "The Late Late Show" about his favorite Carpool Karaoke guest, changing his show due to the COVID-19 pandemic, and his new Netflix project with Meryl Streep.

“Weekend Roundup” – Saturdays at 5 p.m.

April 17th - All 50 states halt the distribution of the Johnson and Johnson vaccine after six women developed blood clots, which resulted in at least one death. Correspondent Allison Keyes speaks with Vanderbilt University Medical Center infectious disease professor Dr. William Schaffner. In this edition of the Kaleidoscope, Allison speaks with Bishop Richard Howell Junior, who has opened the historic Black Shiloh Temple as a "safe space" for people to process their feelings about the Chauvin trial, the police shootings of black individuals, and the protests that followed.

May 15th - A major step in the fight against the coronavirus. Earlier this week, the CDC announced that fully vaccinated people do not have to wear masks outdoors, or in most indoor settings. Allison gets the details from CBS News Medical Contributor Dr. David Agus. The cyber-attack on the Colonial Pipeline has caused gas shortages across the south. CBS's Jim Krasula tells us what he is hearing from drivers. In this edition of the Kaleidoscope, a discussion about mental trauma in the Asian American and Black communities. Allison speaks with University of Albany professor and psychotherapist Dr. Alex Pieterse about what he is hearing from patients.

May 22nd - Confusion over the CDC's latest mask guidance, saying fully vaccinated people do not need to wear face coverings in most settings. CBS News Chief Medical Correspondent Dr. Jon LaPook joins host Allison Keyes to explain. 100 year ago, Tulsa, Oklahoma was the scene of one of the worst race massacres in US history. In this week's edition of the Kaleidoscope, Allison speaks with Paul Gardullo, who is a curator at the Smithsonian National Museum of African American History and Culture, who has been working to make sure the nation never forgets what happened.

May 29th - families are taking to the air, roads, and rails to come together for Memorial Day weekend, thanks to the COVID19 vaccines. CBS's Errol Barnett reports. KCBS Radio reporter Tim Ryan has the latest on the San Jose mass shooting, where 9 people and the gunman died. In the Kaleidoscope we hear from 89-year-old former Ambassador and civil rights statesman Andrew Young. Mr. Young was there when Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated and helped draft the Civil Rights Act of 1964 as well as the 1965 Voting Rights Act. He tells Allison how he is feeling a year after the murder of George Floyd.

June 5th - the Department of Justice says it will handle ransomware attacks the same way it tackles terrorism cases. CBS's Jeff Pegues has the latest. During his remarks in Tulsa, where a white mob destroyed the Black Greenwood community, President Biden announced plans to target racism in housing in communities of color. In this week's Kaleidoscope, Allison gets a breakdown from Lydia Pope, head of the advocacy group, the National Association of Real Estate Brokers.

June 12th - President Biden and other world leaders met face to face in England for the G-7 Summit, for the first time since the beginning of the Covid-19 pandemic. CBS's Vicki Barker gives Allison the latest from London. On June 19th, 1865, the enslaved people in Texas learned slavery had been abolished two years after President Abraham Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation. In the Kaleidoscope, Allison speaks with Greg Carr, the Howard University Chair of the Department of Afro-American studies, who explains the history of Juneteenth, which is now being celebrated across the country. designed to bring young college graduates back to their hometowns to lend their talents to their under-resourced communities.

June 19th - President Biden Thursday signed a bill making Juneteenth a federal holiday. It commemorates June 19, 1865, the day enslaved Blacks in Texas finally learned that they were free. That was more than 2 1/2 years after President Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation. Rep. Sheila Jackson Lee (D-TX), who has long supported this legislation, held the gavel and formally declared its passage in the House. She joins Allison to talk about how she is feeling, and what this means.
