Monday: The issue on this broadcast was an introduction of the Alzheimer's Association generally and the Connecticut chapter in particular. Veronica Gallardo provided basic information about the organization, that it serves those with the malady and especially family friends of those with Alzheimer's. The host was Steve Tuzeneu.

Tuesday & Wednesday: The issue on this broadcast was an introduction to Joe Young of Hartford whose self-named company is a major entertainment innovator and producer of features such as "Hartford's Got Talent." Joe Young was interviewed about his life and ministry through his organization by Gerry Williams.

Thursday: The issue on this broadcast was back to school for parents as they prepare to send their children back to classes. From Focus on the Family, Dan Huerta explained how to prepare children for the schedules and discipline of classes as opposed to summer time off. He also explained how parents can oversee their children and the influencers that may conflict with the Christian faith. Anissa Porticelli was the host.

Friday: The issue on this broadcast was "wind power" and the guest was Alan White who heads a company that manufactures a low profile generator that resembles jet engines on an airplane that stands closer to the ground and is better accepted by neighbors. Paul Kretschmer was the host.

Saturday: The issue on this broadcast was "Spyware for Your Phone." The choice of an app on this occasion was installed by the state of Massachusetts on the phones of citizens without their knowledge or consent. Attorney Sheng Li explained how the app was installed and re-installed if the owner of the phone discovered and deleted it. Paul Kretschmer was the host.
