Monday: The issue on this program was helping provide clean drinking water in parts of the world where it is in short supply. The feature was a conversation on the “Bucket Ministry.” Pastor Ray McDade from the Congregational Church of Windsor Locks, CT was the guest, and the host was Anissa Porticelli.

Tuesday: The issue on this program was the topic of open air tent evangelism meetings. Dr. Steve Rocco recently held a campaign in the greater Middletown area and was interviewed by Anissa Porticelli. People may have heard of tent meetings but not be very familiar with them. This program sought to explain some of the details.

Wednesday: The issue on this program was integrating the Christian faith while providing a service to the greater community. “Meant2BE Movers” is such a business. The guests were Steve and Sue Lepack who were interviewed by Gerry Williams.

Thursday & Friday: The issue on this program was taking the census population figures and using them to determine the legislative districting at both the federal and state levels. Members of the Common Cause Connecticut explained how the figures would be used. This was a re-airing of a program first heard last year. Paul Kretschmer was the host.

Saturday: This issue on this program was the news briefing by Governor Ned Lamont regarding the work of the Connecticut General Assembly in 2022, also an election year. Governor Lamont described the successes and a few of the failures to pass legislation he favored. The host was Paul Kretschmer.
