Jay Newton Small- Political Correspondent, Time Magazine; Author, Broad Influence:

How Women Are Changing The Way America Works

Melissa Caen- Contributor, CBS SF ("Mornings with Melissa"); Host, "The Cheat Sheet"; Attorney—Moderator

The year 2016 will be one of the most historic years in politics: It marks the potential for the first female president of the United States, and the 100th anniversary of the first woman elected to Congress. Additionally, in 2016, single women will be one of the most pivotal voting groups heading into the general election, being courted by Democrats and Republicans. At the centennial of the first woman elected to Congress (which was three years before women legally earned the right to vote), their presence and influence in Washington has reached a tipping point that affects not only the inner workings of the federal government, but also directly influences how Americans live and work. Jay Newton-Small will discuss how women make an enormous impact once they reach critical mass (20–30 percent) in the private and public sectors.

Here's a chance to get his unfiltered views on Republicans, Democrats, media, race relations and the country as a whole. Related to his new book, he'll also give his take on what the Founding Fathers and such notables as Ronald Reagan, Eleanor Roosevelt, Thurgood Marshall, Martin Luther King and Betty Friedan would think of America today.

COMMONWEALTH CLUB

Steve Phillips- Civil Rights Attorney; Senior Fellow, Center for American Progress; New York Times Best-selling Author, Brown Is the New White

In conversation with Stacey Abrams- House Minority Leader, Georgia General Assembly; State Representative, 89th House District

The U.S. population has fundamentally changed, says Steve Phillips, and a new American voting majority has been created by progressive people of color along with progressive white voters. Phillips says these two groups make up 51 percent of all eligible voters in America, and that majority is growing larger every day. By failing to properly appreciate this reality, progressives are at risk of missing this moment in history—and losing. Phillips' new book is a searing indictment of the Democratic Party's practice of courting white swing voters and a discussion of how America's changed demographics have revolutionary implications for U.S. politics in 2016 and beyond.

Andy Karsner-Managing Partner, Sustainability, Emerson Collective

Tom Steyer-Member, Breakthrough Energy Coalition

Countries and corporations united in Paris to forge a global climate deal to reduce carbon pollution while continuing to expand the economy. Now comes the hard part.

California is pushing ahead with green policies and technologies that are creating jobs and markets. But in today's highly stratified society, many people don't have access to the benefits of cleaner jobs and products. How can average people engage with the clean economy? Is climate about more than pretty faraway places and exotic species? Can the United States transition to clean energy by using existing technology or does it need some big breakthroughs to break the death grip of fossil fuels?

This will be a broad-ranging discussion with a veteran of the George W. Bush administration now working for Laurene Powell Jobs and a business leader focused on making climate a ballot-box issue. They will share their vision for transforming the world by driving innovation and unleashing the power of clean energy.

In 25 years as a “60 Minutes” correspondent, and prior to that as CBS News White House correspondent, she has interviewed the likes of Margaret Thatcher, Boris Yeltsin, Yasir Arafat, and virtually every top U.S. official. Here’s a rare chance to hear Lesley Stahl unedited—on politics, media, the challenges facing women, and her own personal rise to success. She’ll also discuss what she says is her most transformative life experience: becoming a grandmother. Ms. Stahl says the therapeutic effects of grandchildren on grandparents and families in general are eye-opening.

In her professional life, Lesley Stahl covered Watergate, the assassination attempt on President Reagan, and the 1991 Gulf War. Her “60 Minutes” pieces have encompassed terrorist capabilities to hack the U.S. infrastructure, a profile of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, an inside look at Guantamo Bay Prison, and China’s huge real estate bubble.
