Re: Deceptive and Defamatory Advertisements on Your Broadcast Station

Dear Sir or Madam:

I write to bring to your attention a deliberately false and misleading advertisement that an outside group calling itself "Patriot Majority USA" is running on your broadcast station ("the Advertisement"). The Advertisement attempts to deceive voters regarding Congresswoman Mia Love's campaign fundraising practices, repeatedly accusing the Love Campaign of "illegally" raising funds for the 2018 primary election.

The supposed basis for these false statements is an August 2018 communication from the Federal Election Commission to the Love Campaign known as a "Request for Additional Information."<sup>1</sup> But such a Request is hardly evidence of "illegal" activity, as the McAdams Campaign and its allies very well know from the McAdams Campaign receiving a Request of its own earlier this year.<sup>2</sup> A Request for Additional Information is, just as it sounds, a simple request from the Commission that provides the filer with an "opportunity to correct or explain information in [a] report for the public record."<sup>3</sup> As a Commission spokesman has said, the Request to the Love Campaign was only "routine" and not indicative of any pending action by the Commission.<sup>4</sup> To claim otherwise is entirely false.

The Love Campaign responded comprehensively to the Request, noting several facts that the Commission was likely unaware of previously, such as Congresswoman Love's effort to gather signatures for Utah's 2018 primary election.<sup>5</sup> The Campaign also referenced relevant precedent where the Commission previously ruled that a federal candidate was allowed to raise

For your reference, a "candidate" with respect to a given election for purposes of Federal Election Commission rules is an individual who has "made expenditures in excess of $5,000." 11 C.F.R. § 100.3(a)(1). Congresswoman Love spent well in excess of this threshold on primary-election activities.

and retain primary-election contributions, even where a primary election was not ultimately held, since candidates in Utah have “no choice but to prepare for both the primary election and the party convention at the same time because of the short time frame between the party convention and the primary election.”<sup>6</sup>

Importantly, Mr. Michael Dobi, the Senior Campaign Finance Analyst from the Commission who originally sent the Request to the Love Campaign, informed the Love Campaign yesterday that the position of the Commission’s Office of General Counsel is that the Love Campaign was legally allowed to raise primary-election contributions and that it may retain all primary-election contributions it received before the date of the Convention, which squarely rebuts Patriot Majority’s assertions.

The false claims bankrolled by Patriot Majority do not constitute a “candidate use.” Under Columbia Broadcasting Sys., Inc. v. Democratic Nat’l Comm., 412 U.S. 94 (1973), and Nat’l Conservative Political Action Comm., 89 FCC 2d 626 (1982), your station is not obligated to air any advertisements from outside groups, such as Patriot Majority, as outside groups have no guaranteed right of access to air their advertisements on your station. Your broadcast station is therefore not protected from legal liability for airing a false and misleading advertisements sponsored by Patriot Majority. Moreover, broadcast licensees have a legal responsibility to review and to eliminate any false, misleading, or deceptive materials contained in advertising. Failure to do so can be grounds for revocation of a station’s license. See Cosmopolitan Broad. Corp. v. FCC, 581 F.2d 917, 927 (D.C. Cir. 1978).

Your station is hereby on notice that the Advertisement is false. Patriot Majority intends only to deceive voters and defame Congresswoman Love’s reputation. Your station should not be complicit in this misconduct. Friends of Mia Love therefore respectfully demands that your station immediately cease airing the Advertisement. Please contact me at your earliest convenience (202-862-5046 or msanderson@capdale.com) to advise as to your station’s actions with respect to the Advertisement.

Hello, Mr. Sanderson:

I am writing in response to the question you raised with Kathleen Guith regarding Friends of Mia Love.

The Reports Analysis Division ("RAD") sought guidance from the Office of General Counsel regarding whether Friends of Mia Love could retain the 2018 primary election contributions it received through April 21, 2018 given that Ms. Love did not participate in the primary election. Last year, the Commission reviewed a similar question in the Friends of Mike Lee Request for Consideration of a Legal Question and determined that Friends of Mike Lee could retain contributions designated for the primary election given the unique facts of that case. See Letter from Lisa J. Stevenson, Acting General Counsel, to Cleta Mitchell (Aug. 1, 2017).

Upon our review of the Friends of Mia Love question, we concluded that the substantive facts at issue were indistinguishable from those presented in the Friends of Mike Lee Request. We, therefore, concluded that Friends of Mia Love could retain the primary election contributions it received prior to April 21, 2018, the date Ms. Love became the nominee at the party convention. RAD Analyst, Mike Dobl, correctly informed you of our analysis and conclusion and properly advised that Friends of Mia Love is not required to take any corrective action regarding the primary election contributions at issue.

Please let me know if you have any other questions.

Subject: Clarification of Issue for Friends of Mia Love

Ms. Guith:

I received a call on Monday from the Reports Analysis Division concerning my client, Friends of Mia Love. Friends of Mia Love had received a Request for Additional Information in August 2018 concerning its raising of primary-election funds during the 2018 election cycle

During Monday's call, the Reports Analysis Division Analyst (Michael Dobi) stated that he had consulted with the Office of General Counsel. He said that the Office of General Counsel was advising the Reports Analysis Division not to require any further corrective action to Friends of Mia Love's public filings because the Office's position was that Friends of Mia Love was able to raise and retain primary-election contributions received before April 21, 2018, which was the date of Mia Love's party nomination at the Utah Republican State Convention. (Friends of Mia Love is already redesignating and/or refunding any primary-election contributions received after the Convention.)

Can you please confirm that this is the Office of General Counsel's position? I need to clarify for my client whether Friends of Mia Love "remains obligated to take corrective action to resolve an issue that has arisen during the report review or audit process" under FEC Notice 2011-11, given the 15-day deadline for it to seek consideration on a question of law in the event that it remains so obligated.

Thank you for your assistance.

Best,

Matt

Yesterday, you informed Sue Carlin and me over the phone that you had consulted with the FEC's Office of General Counsel about Friends of Mia Love's response to your August 2018 Request for Additional Information. Re: Patriot Majority USA Advertisement

Dear Station Manager:

We write to respond to a letter you received from counsel for the Mia Love Campaign regarding an advertisement that is currently running on your station. All of the claims in the ad are true, and your station should continue to air it.

First, we note that Congresswoman Love does not assert that all of the funds she raised for the primary election are legal—she cannot, as she has already agreed to refund or re-designate $380,000 of the funds raised for the nonexistent primary election.<sup>1</sup> She does not object, in other words, to the ad's claim that she has raised funds "illegally" or that she amassed "illegal campaign cash." Her objection is limited to the amount of the campaign funds that newspapers have described as "illegally" raised. While Congresswoman Love's letter describes this advertisement as "defamatory," the Supreme Court of Utah has repeatedly ruled that "Insignificant inaccuracies of expression do not defeat the defense of truth."<sup>2</sup> There seems to be no disagreement about the fundamental thesis of the advertisement: that Congresswoman Love raised campaign funds that are illegal.

Second, we note that most of the advertisement's claims are in fact verbatim quotes from newspapers. We are not aware of any newspapers cited that have retracted their claims.

Congresswoman Love's only argument is that they were told in a telephone conversation with someone at the Federal Election Commission ("FEC") that it has changed its longstanding interpretation of federal law to vindicate her. Of course, there is no record of this conversation. When newspapers tried to corroborate her account, the FEC refused to publicly support her position.<sup>3</sup> FEC officials have told the press that the agency "seldom end[s] probes in a phone call,”<sup>4</sup> that it was only a “possibility” that the Love Campaign even had a discussion with one of its analysts,<sup>5</sup> and that phone conversations are not part of the “public record.”<sup>6</sup> Emphasizing that the Love Campaign’s characterization of its alleged phone call does not represent official FEC policy, one FEC official said, “I don’t know what the conversation was between them. I wouldn’t be able to characterize it.”<sup>7</sup>

Under federal law, candidates may raise up to $2,700 per individual per election.<sup>8</sup> An “election” includes a “general, special, primary, or runoff election” and “a convention or caucus of a political party which has authority to nominate a candidate.”<sup>9</sup> While it would be theoretically possible for a candidate to raise funds for three elections—a primary, a convention, and a general election—the federal regulations make clear that “a primary election which is not held because a candidate was nominated by a caucus or convention with authority to nominate is not a separate election for the purposes of the limitations on contributions.”<sup>10</sup> So a candidate may only raise funds for three elections if she is actually facing three elections; if she has already been nominated by convention and will not face a primary, she may only raise for two elections—the convention and the general election.

On April 21, 2018, Love was nominated for Utah’s Fourth Congressional District seat in the U.S. House by the Utah Republican Party with the following declaration: “Mia Love advances - No primary.”<sup>11</sup> She had been unopposed at the convention.<sup>12</sup> And she knew that she faced no other primary challenger after the March 15, 2018 deadline to declare candidacy for the primary election passed.<sup>13</sup> In fact, she didn't even appear on the ballot for the Utah primary election, because Utah does not list unopposed candidates on the primary election ballot.<sup>14</sup> Still, Love raised $1.1 million for a primary election on which she never even appeared on the ballot, including money raised after March 15, when she knew no other candidate would be on the primary ballot, and April 21, when she secured the nomination through the convention (unopposed).

The Federal Election Commission has again and again affirmed that the law does not permit candidates to raise separate funds for a primary that never takes place.<sup>15</sup> Thus, Love was not permitted to raise the primary funds once she knew no primary would take place. Under certain conditions, a candidate may re-designate funds received for a primary to a general election, but the candidate must do so within 60 days of receiving the contribution.<sup>16</sup> Congresswoman Love has missed the 60-day deadline for much of her $1.1 million haul, and she is not legally permitted to keep those funds.

In its letter to you, the Love Campaign asserted that an FEC employee had told the campaign that he had spoken with the FEC General Counsel, who said, "the Love Campaign was legally allowed to raise primary-election contributions and that it may retain all primary-election contributions it received before the date of the Convention." But several layers of hearsay are not enough to overrule the clear legal precedent here. And the FEC has refused to publicly corroborate this claim.<sup>17</sup>

To put the lack of evidence for Congresswoman Love's position in context: if Patriot Majority USA attempted to place an advertisement on your station with a claim backed only by a phone conversation between counsel and a government agent—a conversation the agency later refused to corroborate—your station would rightly refuse to air it. That same standard would require you to see some corroboration from the agency, either in conversation with reporters or in writing, before removing an advertisement from your rotation.

The First Amendment plays a vital role in protecting the debate over contested issues of public importance, such as the qualifications of candidates for office. The Supreme Court recognizes that "debate on public issues should be uninhibited, robust, and wide-open."<sup>18</sup> In fact, the "First Amendment affords the broadest protection to [] political expression in order 'to assure unfettered interchange of ideas for the bringing about of political and social changes desired by

If the FEC has changed its position on candidates raising funds for nonexistent primary elections, we are happy to review any written legal authority the campaign can provide. Unless and until the campaign produces such evidence, your decision to accept the advertisement should remain undisturbed. To be clear, the false statement within the Patriot Majority advertisement that merits your immediate attention is that Mia Love “collected more than $1 million in illegal campaign cash.” This statement is made via audio from :09 to :12 in the advertisement.

- This statement is accompanied by a citation to a September, 11 2018 Salt Lake Tribune article (<https://www.sltrib.com/news/politics/2018/09/10/mia-loves-campaign-refund/>) that reported on the Federal Election Commission’s initial sending of a Request for Additional Information to the Love Campaign. This statement by Patriot Majority is not a direct quote from the Tribune article, and it is not even supported by the Tribune article. The article says only that the “Federal Election Commission is questioning whether Rep. Mia Love, R-Utah, raised more than $1 million illegally for a primary election that she never expected to face.” The headline is just as clear—it says only that “FEC says Mia Love’s campaign may have raised more than $1 million illegally for a primary election she never faced.” The article does not support the statement in any manner.
- Your station is, as of yesterday, on notice that this statement is false. A Federal Election Commission official, on behalf of the agency’s Office of General Counsel, stated to the Love Campaign in a writing that has been provided to you: “Friends of Mia Love is not required to take any corrective action regarding the primary election contributions at issue.” The FEC official’s written statement that concerns all “the primary election contributions at issue” could not be more plain. It is, in fact, better than a (hypothetical) written confirmation from the agency saying that “Mia Love did nothing illegal.” This is an even clearer statement than that. Not only did Friends of Mia Love not “collect more than $1 million in illegal campaign cash,” the agency official is saying that the Love Campaign is not even “required to take any corrective action,” such as a report amendment or adjustment. This demonstrates that Patriot Majority’s statement is false.

I am emailing on behalf of my client, Friends of Mia Love. You will find attached as a supplement to my earlier letter written correspondence with the Federal Election Commission's Office of General Counsel, concluding that "Friends of Mia Love is not required to take any corrective action regarding the primary election contributions at issue." This further confirms that the accusations contained in the Patriot Majority ad are false. Please remove the false ad from your station immediately.

Rep. Mia Love's campaign admits to improperly raising primary election funds

By Andrew Kaczynski and Nathan McDermott, CNN
Updated 3:20 PM ET, Mon September 10, 2018

(CNN) Rep. Mia Love's campaign has informed the Federal Election Commission that it will refund or redesignate less than half of what the government says was more than a million dollars improperly raised for a primary that was never expected to happen, according to documents reviewed by CNN.

The commission sent Love a letter in August saying the Utah Republican's campaign had violated federal guidelines about money for primaries. In Utah, candidates are not allowed to raise such funds if they have no primary, according to the FEC and experts specializing in election law. On Friday, Love's campaign responded to regulators, telling the FEC they would refund or redesignate some, but not all, of that money. CNN's KFile reached out to Love, her campaign, her campaign treasurer and her campaign manager on Thursday about the contributions. They did not respond to CNN's request for comment. After publication, Love's campaign said in a statement they did prepare for a primary challenge by gathering signatures to appear on the primary ballot. Love's campaign said they planned to redesignate about $370,000 and may refund less than $10,000 in donations.

In April, Love secured the nomination to seek a third term for her seat in Utah's 4th congressional district at Utah's nominating convention. In Utah, if a candidate receives such a nomination at a convention, like Love did, then no primary is held. At no point prior to April's convention did Love face a primary challenger or the threat of one. But Love raised $1,153,624 and designated that money for a primary, according to the letter from the FEC to Love. Even after Love secured the nomination at the convention, she raised an additional $372,468 specifically designated for the primary that her campaign knew would not take place.

Experts say the money raised is a serious violation of FEC rules.

"It's a big deal, it is a big deal," said Ann Ravel, who served as FEC Commissioner under President Barack Obama. "If you're raising primary funds and you have no primary, on its face, it does seem to be inappropriate and it's a lot of money."

The FEC's letter to Love's campaign described the problem with the primary funds and said the contributions would have to be refunded or designated for the general election. Redesignation is a process in which funds can be moved to a general election fund, so long as it is done within 60 days of receiving the contribution.

But all of the donations to Love were made more than 60 days ago. FEC spokesman Christian Hilland could not comment on the specific case, but said that violating that 60-day rule could prompt penalties.

Love's campaign lawyers responded on Friday to the FEC, saying they would refund or redesignate contributions, but only those received after she was nominated at the convention on April 21. Love's campaign will have to notify donors their money is being moved to be used in the general election and those donors will be able to request refunds. If primary contributions received exceeded the maximum $2,700 donation allowed for a general election, then that money would need to be refunded.

"It seems clear that any contribution designated for the primary election received after the convention would have to be refunded or redesignated," said Brendan Fischer, the director of federal reform at the Campaign Legal Center, an organization that supports campaign finance reform. "I think there is an argument that, Mia Love knew earlier than the convention that it would be an uncontested primary, but their letter suggests there may have been some ambiguity. So they might be able to get away with it but it's certainly problematic because of this sort of quirk in Utah law that allows a candidate to raise money above and beyond the federal limits that would apply in elections in almost any other state."

The campaign told the FEC they would not be refunding the money that it received before the convention, citing a similar situation involving Utah Sen. Mike Lee's 2016 re-election campaign.

In that case, Lee was allowed to keep money he raised for a primary that didn't occur. That year, Lee raised money for a possible primary challenge, but he ended up as the only candidate with enough signatures to get on the ballot. In that instance, the FEC ruled Lee could keep his money because of the "unique facts" of the case in which he expected a primary challenge.

Love's campaign, unlike Lee's, however, appears to have not prepared for any primary challenger and Love ran unopposed and even Love's lawyers admit the differences between the situations.

According to Paul S. Ryan, vice president for policy and litigation with government watchdog Common Cause, a key difference between Love and Lee is that Lee's campaign worked as if it was expecting a primary challenger, and raised money accordingly, while Love's campaign had no expectation of a primary challenger.

"It's a really important factual distinction that makes Mia Love's claim on this primary money even weaker than Mike Lee's claim on it," Ryan said. "I'm realizing after reading their response, reading a little bit more about the Mike Lee matter, that this is a more definitive attempt by the Love committee to game the contribution limits. That's what it strikes me as now."

In response to the FEC, lawyers for Love said they would have to get a further opinion from the FEC's counsel or commissioners to see if the FEC would take the same opinion on their donations raised before the convention as Lee's donations. They cited a conversation they had with an FEC election official when preparing their response where that official said the FEC's response to Lee applied only to his specific case.

It is unclear if the FEC will accept Love's rationale for keeping the pre-convention donations or will say all the money will have to be refunded or redesignated. Working in Love's favor is that there are currently two vacant seats on the six-seat commission, so any decision would have to be unanimous.

"They are probably betting that there's no way there are four votes on the FEC to come after them for this, that's part of what's in the background here," Ryan said. "So I think they're really pushing the boundaries of the law in order to game the contribution limits predicting that they will get away with it, and it's like we have correct protection, but just because you can get away with something doesn't make it right."

FEC says Mia Love's campaign may have raised more than $1 million illegally for a primary election she never faced

By Lee Davidson

Published: September 10

Updated: September 11, 2018

The Federal Election Commission is questioning whether Rep. Mia Love, R-Utah, raised more than $1 million illegally for a primary election that she never expected to face — while Love is contending what she did was legal based on past FEC decisions.

Still, Love's campaign says it will refund or redesignate more than $370,000 she raised after clinching the Republican nomination at the state GOP convention in April — but is fighting to keep more than $1 million accepted before that point for a possible primary fight.

Her Democratic opponent, Salt Lake County Mayor Ben McAdams, said it shows Love is "gaming the system." At a hastily called news conference, he said the donations were part of "a culture of corruption" and called for her to return all the money.

Dave Hansen, Love's campaign manager, said the agreed-to redesignation or refunding of part of the money "is a normal thing" for funds donated for a primary after it is clear that it will not be held. "But that is not a violation of law or anything like that."

Love's campaign argues that the FEC allowed Sen. Mike Lee, R-Utah, to keep money he raised planning for a potential primary in 2016 — which did not occur — and "we just did the same thing."

The controversy comes, as Hansen said, because "we have a unique system here in this state" to determine whether a primary will be held. That includes two separate paths for a candidate to qualify for a primary, through the caucus-convention system and/or by collecting signatures.

That creates the possibility of three separate elections: a convention, a primary and a general election. For each one faced by a candidate, individual donors may give up to $2,700 and political action committees may give $5,000.

No Republican challenger ever filed against Love. The GOP state convention formally nominated her April 21. However, Justin Lee, state elections director for Lt. Gov. Spencer Cox, says no one else could run as a Republican — even if a convention attempted to draft him or her — if a prospective candidate had not filed before the March 15 deadline.

Love's campaign is offering to refund or redesignate only those donations it received for a primary after the convention.

As first reported by CNN, the FEC sent Love a letter in August saying her campaign appeared to violate federal guidelines for raising money for primaries, and sought more information.

"Since the candidate will not participate in the 2018 primary election, any contribution received for this election must be returned to the donors or redesignated to another election" with written permission of donors, the FEC said.

It added that if donations for the primary led any contributors to exceed overall donation limits to the Love campaign, they must be refunded.

Love raised $1,153,624 and designated that money for a primary, according to the letter from the FEC. Even after Love secured the nomination at the convention, she raised an additional $372,468 specifically designated for the primary.

Love's campaign responded with a letter last week contending that she did the same thing that the FEC had allowed Lee, the senator, to do in 2016.

Lee, at the time, said that he raised money to fend off challengers that might appear in a primary. His one filed Republican challenger withdrew his candidacy a couple of weeks before the 2016 convention. The FEC allowed Lee to keep the primary money citing "unique facts" of that race.

Love's campaign wrote to the FEC, "The 'unique facts' of the 2016 matter involving Sen. Lee have not changed," and she raised money and planned strategy to fight potential challengers." Unlike with Lee, no Republican challenger ever filed against her.

Also, Love's lawyers conceded that FEC officials had warned that the Lee decision applied only to his case and that Love would need to get permission or a ruling from the FEC for her own contest.

McAdams did not raise donations for the primary, knowing he faced no in-party opposition after eliminating four challengers at the state Democratic convention.

He said at his news conference Monday that after the March 15 filing deadline, "Everybody in Utah knew that Mia Love would not have a primary opponent. Yet for months, she continued to illegally raise money, claiming it was to protect herself against a primary election opponent she knew full well did not exist."

McAdams called it part of a "culture of corruption" in which Love feels "she is above the law." He referred to other incidents, including a complaint to the FEC against her [McAdams also faces one], allegations that Love sent a "fake reporter" to ask McAdams questions, and sending mailers falsely implying support from local newspapers.

"Utahns know that when you break the rules, you need to make it right," McAdams said. "In this case, that means returning the illegal contributions — all $1 million of it so that Utahns can trust in the fairness of this election."

After McAdams' news conference, Love's campaign issued a written statement saying the FEC has not ruled that it broke any laws — it just sent a letter asking questions — and "now that we are getting closer to the election he [McAdams] is going to extremes to grasp at straws" to criticize Love.

It said FEC complaints have also been filed against McAdams, and said last week he attended a fundraiser with special-interest groups — after airing an ad criticizing their influence as he showers fully clothed because they make "you feel dirty." Love's campaign said, "Ben McAdams is dirty and now we know why he needs the shower."

Love and McAdams both reported having $1.2 million in cash June 30, their latest campaign disclosures show.

Because the 4th District contest is the only close major race in Utah — and among those watched nationally as Democrats attempt to win back control of the House — Love's questionable donations are attracting national attention.

CNN quoted Ann Ravel, who served as an FEC Commissioner under President Barack Obama, saying, "It's a big deal. ... If you're raising primary funds and you have no primary, on its face, it does seem to be inappropriate and it's a lot of money."

CNN noted that it is unclear if the FEC will accept Love's rationale for keeping some of the primary donations. Working in Love's favor is that there are currently two vacant seats on the six-seat commission, so any decision would have to be unanimous.

"They are probably betting that there's no way there are four votes on the FEC to come after them for this, that's part of what's in the background here," said Paul S. Ryan, vice president for policy and litigation with the watchdog group Common Cause.

"So I think they're really pushing the boundaries of the law in order to game the contribution limits, predicting that they will get away with it," he told CNN. "But just because you can get away with something doesn't make it right."

Rep. Mia Love's Campaign Gamed Primary Fundraising Laws, FEC Finds

GOP congresswoman's campaign will return or reclassify less than a third of funds called into question

Posted Sep 10, 2018 9:01 AM
Griffin Connolly

Rep. Mia Love's re-election campaign copped to improperly raising money for a primary race that it knew was unlikely to take place, the campaign's lawyers wrote in a letter to the Federal Election Commission.

The GOP congresswoman's campaign was responding to a letter from the FEC in which the commission scrutinized $1,153,624 Love raised and classified as primary election funds for her 4th District seat in Utah.

Love will return less than a third of the money, $372,468, because the rest was raised before she officially secured her party's nomination at the state GOP convention in April, her lawyers wrote to the FEC, CNN reported.

In Utah, the individual fundraising limit for primary races exceeds the federal limit for general races and primary races in most other states, so candidates who have primaries can theoretically rake in fatter checks from individual contributors.

Experts have argued that Love knew she would not face a primary even before her nomination at the convention because she did not have any prospective challengers.

"It's a big deal, it is a big deal," Ann Ravel, an FEC commissioner under President Barack Obama, told CNN. "If you're raising primary funds and you have no primary, on its face, it does seem to be inappropriate and it's a lot of money."

Love, her campaign, her campaign treasurer, and her campaign manager did not respond to CNN's requests for comment on the matter.

In their response letter Friday to the FEC, Love's lawyers said the campaign would refund or re-designate as general election donations the primary funds raised after the nominating convention.

If any of those donations exceeded the $2,700 federal limit for general elections, the campaign will need to refund the excess amount.

Love's Democratic challenger, Salt Lake County Mayor Ben McAdams, trailed her by just 3 points in a recent UtahPolicy.com poll in what is expected to be one of the most competitive House races this fall.

President Donald Trump carried Utah's 4th District over Hillary Clinton in 2016 by 7 points, but he garnered just 39.1 percent of the vote there.

GOP congresswoman broke campaign finance law, but she wants to keep the money

Mia Love is citing a loophole to say she should be able to blow past campaign finance limits.

JOSH ISRAEL
SEP 11, 2018, 4:44 PM

Federal campaign finance law generally limits individual donations to political candidates to $2,700 for each election the candidate runs in. Practically, this means wealthy supporters can give House and Senate candidates, at most, $5,400 each campaign cycle. But due to her state's unusual system and a not-very-analogous Federal Election Commission precedent, Rep. Mia Love (R-UT) is seeking to boost that to $8,100 her 2018 re-election — citing a primary in which she did not run.

Thanks to the Republican Party's assault on federal campaign law enforcement, Love — who calls herself a "tireless advocate of the need for personal accountability" on her official campaign website — will also likely get away with it. While her campaign admitted this week it illegally accepted contributions in excess of the legal limit and did not return them within the 60 day window, it says it plans to effectively keep most of that money.

Here's what happened: Utah is one of a small number of states that has the possibility of more than one nomination process. If a candidate garners at least 60 percent of the vote at a party nominating convention, they advance to the general election. If they do not, they must run in a primary. Federal election law treats each of those as a separate election with separate contribution limits.

In 2016, for instance, Sen. Mike Lee (R-UT) raised and spent money for a primary in which he never had to run. Because he had no way of knowing that he would win the nomination at the convention, the Federal Election Commission agreed to let him keep some of the money that was raised but not spent. The determination was made, without much explanation, over the recommendation of the career staff at the agency.

Mia Love's campaign, by contrast, decided to take advantage of that loophole to raise money for both the convention and primary — even though there was little indication that she would face any serious challenge. Even after it became clear she would not face a primary — and even after she won the nomination at the convention — she continued to raise money for her non-existent primary race. When the Federal Election Commission's career staff questioned it, Love's lawyers announced that they would simply keep the money raised before the convention and would refund or re-classify the money raised afterwards.

Brendan Fischer, director of the Federal Reform Program at the non-partisan Campaign Legal Center, told ThinkProgress that he does not think this comports with campaign finance law. But, the agency responsible for enforcing these laws appears to be asleep at the switch.

"I think that if there were a functioning FEC, they'd realize they'd opened a big loophole with the Lee matter and say 'Once a candidate knows they're not gonna run in the election, they can no longer keep money raised for that non-existent election,'" Fischer said. However, given that two seats are currently vacant on the six-member Commission and action thus requires unanimous agreement by the two Democrats and two Republicans, "It seems pretty unlikely the FEC's gonna do anything about this," he added.

Paul Seamus Ryan, vice president of policy and litigation at Common Cause, echoed this assessment. "I think Mia Love and her team [are] probably banking on the dysfunction of the Federal Election Commission in pushing the boundaries of the law and that they are confident they will get away with this precisely because it's such a broken agency," he told ThinkProgress.

Ryan noted that even if Love is correct in her assessment that she can raise extra money under the Lee loophole, she violated the law requiring her to address the post-convention funds within 60 days of the convention.

"That strikes me as a clear violation — albeit a more minor violation than the violations I believe occur in keeping the primary money in excess of what was actually spent," he said. "It's a violation, there should be enforcement, [even if it's] less serious than an effective 50 percent increase in the contribution limit that results from just keeping this primary money."

Any enforcement, he said, is unlikely. "I'm not a betting man, but if I were, I wouldn't bet on any enforcement from this FEC, even for clear violations," he added.

Ryan and Fischer both agree — assuming Love gets away with this — that, moving forward, other candidates will likely use her approach in Utah and across the country.

"We've seen in other areas of federal campaign finance law examples in which one candidate, committee, campaign gets away with some clear violation, the FEC doesn't do anything, and everyone starts to do it," Ryan said. "I wouldn't be surprised if we saw that here."

Love's campaign finance controversy echoes Enid Waldholtz in 1994

Written by Bob Bernick, Contributing Editor
Created: 11 September 2018

The headline reads: "Utah Republican congresswoman battles FEC over $1 million donations."

But it is not Rep. Mia Love's problems with the FEC this election year.

It is 1995, and the FEC's case involves former GOP Rep. Enid Greene of Utah's 2nd Congressional District.

There are significant differences, of course, between the two Federal Election Commission issues with each candidate.

Still, the two instances involve whether $1 million was given legally to each woman's campaign.

Love and her campaign manager, Dave Hansen, say she did nothing wrong, and any problems with FEC rules can be straightened out by reclassifying some of the donations to her 2018 re-election campaign.

Back in 1999 when then-Enid Greene, now Enid Mickelson, and her father Forrest Greene, paid a $100,000 FEC fine, Greene said her former husband, Joe Waldholtz, was to blame for taking $1 million illegally from her father and putting it into her successful 1994 2nd District race.

However, it was clear after she decided to retire from the U.S. House in 1996 that Enid Greene knew of her father's $1 million donation – which later turned out to be illegal.

In any case, now Love, a Republican congresswoman from Utah, has her own problems with the FEC.

In a detailed statement this week, Love's campaign spokesperson said the CNN article about her FEC problems was oversimplified and slanted.

Hansen says the more than $1 million – all donations following FEC rules – can be reclassified through paperwork, with more than $300,000 being either returned to donors or have the donors agree to place their donations in a different category on FEC forms.

Back in 1994, it was clear that Enid Greene needed her father's $1 million to run aggressive TV and radio ads the month before the election.

With that advertising, she was able to defeat then-Democratic Rep. Karen Shepherd – who told me at the time (I was the Deseret News political editor) that she feared she would be "swamped" by the $1 million expenditure by Enid Greene.

One reason Love won't return the $1 million to donors this year (which she says she doesn't have to) is because it would cripple her re-election campaign with less than two months before Election Day.

Both Love and Democratic her challenger, Salt Lake County Mayor Ben McAdams, are gearing up for a knock-out TV and radio advertising fight.

The new UtahPolicy.com Dan Jones & Associates poll finds Love 3 percentage points ahead of McAdams, 49-46 percent.

Politically speaking, Love can't afford to turn back $1 million now – even if later she should face some kind of FEC action against her 2018 campaign.

And where are Greene/Mickelson and Shepherd today?

Well, both are in the news in 2018.

Mickelson, a former Republican National Committeewoman from Utah, chaired a raucous section of the April state GOP convention, dealing with delegate boos and verbal outbursts over party rule changes.

And Shepherd is one of the signed sponsors of the Better Boundaries initiative that will be on the Nov. 6 ballot – seeking to set up an independent redistricting commission in Utah.

Mia Love Paying Back Government For Posh D.C. Party

Fri, 09/04/2015 - 8:43am

Rep. Mia Love has decided to reimburse the federal government for two flights to Washington, D.C.âs most glamorous party, having first used her official congressional account to pay for the trip. The move comes after The Hill, a D.C. publication, noted she charged two flights and parking or taxis worth more than $1,100 on April 25 and 26.

The same weekend Love and her husband, Jason, were spotted taking a picture with famed astrophysicist Neil deGrasse Tyson at the White House Correspondents Dinner.

The event is a mix of celebrities, politicians and reporters, pre-parties, after-parties, tuxes and gowns, all capped with the president telling jokes.

A House member's office account should not be used for events that "are primarily social in nature," according to the congressional handbook.

Richard Piatt, Love's spokesman, blamed "a staff member" for buying the tickets using the government funds and defended the move by saying "The trip included time for official business in the office as well as for the correspondents dinner that weekend."

He cast her repayment as a move made out of an abundance of caution.

"Rep. Love takes the use of taxpayer money very seriously, and in order to ensure there is never a question about the proper use of funds, Rep. Love will reimburse the government for those flights," he said.

Love holds the only Utah seat that Democrats nationally are targeting. Doug Owens is running his second campaign against Love and he keyed in on the flight reimbursement.

"It's disappointing that Mia Love attended a fancy party in D.C. and stuck taxpayers with the bill," he said. "We deserve better."

Mia Love, GOP Congressional Candidate In Utah, Used Office Email For Politics

04/25/2014 02:25 pm ET Updated Apr 25, 2014

Michael McAuliff

WASHINGTON — Mia Love, the Republican front-runner for one of Utah's seats in Congress, earned a minor reputation for disorganization two years ago when she lost to incumbent Rep. Jim Matheson (D). Now, a series of emails obtained by HuffPost suggests that may have spilled into violating rules against mixing campaign and official business.

A string of messages — provided to HuffPost by Democrats who got them through open-records requests — show that Love, who was then mayor of Saratoga Springs, Utah, would occasionally receive campaign queries on her mayoral account and deal with them directly, rather than switching to a campaign or personal account.

Although apparently infrequent compared with the amount of political communication that goes on in a campaign, Love's discussions of politics on her city account potentially violate Utah laws that say "a municipal officer or employee may not use municipal equipment while engaged in political activity." It could also violate the federal Hatch Act, which restricts mixing politics and official resources, if Love's city got any federal funding.

Some of the emails are as simple as Love forwarding queries she got from potential volunteers, donors and well-wishers to campaign staffers to deal with. In one case, she discusses how she could help Mitt Romney's presidential campaign in Florida. In another, she forwards the letter from a lawyer for the Democrats asking the city for the email records.

One string of emails setting up an interview with The Hill newspaper last August starts off in normal scheduling territory, but Love makes it political by suggesting she's using the outlet to set up a fundraising opportunity. "I think this was one that would help us tap into the black community nationally," Love writes at one point in agreeing to an interview with Niall Stanage. "It's all positive and hopefully we could raise some funds from it."

She also sent official business messages for her campaign's use, such as a press release touting her budgeting and an endorsement of a mayoral candidate that had to be tweaked to better tout Love's accomplishments.

Perhaps the most problematic discussion is a back-and-forth over an interview with conservative radio host Tammy Bruce that Love hoped to use for fundraising. "Would you mind asking her if she could help us raise funds during the show," Love asked a campaign staffer last June. "Let her know that [Sean] Hannity and [Glenn] Beck will be doing something similar."

One of Love's advisers, David Hansen, who is included in many of the emails, downplayed the significance, saying all they really showed was how careful Love has been to keep politics and her city work separate.

"Mayor Love was extremely meticulous in dealing with city vs. political business," Hansen said. "After reviewing literally thousands of documents, this is all the [Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee] could come up with?"

He noted that Love appears to be responding to something in all the cases, not initiating discussions.

"Most of them were scheduling issues where there may have been a question of whether or not the issue was city business or campaign business," Hansen said. "They were forwarded on by her to get that resolved. As you know, most political discussions run to long email threads. There was none of that in these documents. If the threads were longer, they were carried out on her personal email."

"This is nothing more than the DCCC attempting to justify their expense of requesting all the documents they requested and trying to drum up an issue when there is no issue there," Hansen added. "It's nothing more than a negative, dirty tricks campaign against her. Hopefully you won't want to be a part of their effort."

"Plain and simple, there is nothing there," he said.

Indeed, such issues don't often lead to official punishments, but in Love's case they could feed the perceptions of some that disarray cost her the chance to become the first African-American Mormon woman in Congress in 2012, when she lost to Matheson in Utah by fewer than 800 votes with Mormon Romney at the top of the GOP ticket.

FEC email stirs more controversy in 4th District race

By Lisa Riley Roche, KSL | Posted - Oct 18th, 2018 @ 12:13pm

SALT LAKE CITY — Rep. Mia Love's campaign released a copy of an email Thursday from the Federal Election Commission stating contributions received for a primary election before the GOP's April convention could be kept.

The email comes after the FEC declined to comment on the issue after Love directed reporters to contact the agency to confirm details of a call with an analyst and members of her campaign.

Love had said in a statement just before Monday's debate with her Democratic challenger, Salt Lake County Mayor Ben McAdams, that her campaign had been informed by an unnamed analyst they were "legally allowed" to raise the money.

"Ben McAdams will apparently say and do anything to get elected," Love said in a statement, a reference to her opponent using the issue in his campaign advertising. "He should apologize to the voters for his misleading tactics."

Love's primary fundraising is the subject of a complaint filed with the FEC by the progressive Alliance for a Better Utah.

Judith Ingram, a press officer with the FEC, told the Deseret News earlier this week any discussion about Love's fundraising by an analyst would have no effect on the complaint.

The email released Thursday states that the analyst, Mike Dobi, "correctly informed you of our analysis and conclusion and properly advised that Friends of Mia Love is not required to take any corrective action regarding the primary election contributions at issue."

The email was written by Danita Aberico, a compliance advice attorney in the FEC's policy division general counsel's office.

At issue is some $1 million raised by Love for a June primary election because no Republicans ran against her. Love's campaign has contended she should be able to keep money raised through the convention where she was formally nominated.

After receiving a letter from the FEC questioning the fundraising, Love's campaign said $370,000 in contributions collected after the convention would be redesignated for the general election and just over $10,000 would be refunded to donors.

The email released Thursday does not refer to the redesignations or refunds. A spokeswoman for Love's campaign, Sasha Clark, said earlier this week that previous FEC filings were amended to reflect the changes but she did not provide details.

The Washington, D.C.-based lawyer hired by Love's campaign to deal with the FEC issue, Matt Sanderson, said in a news release it would be "unprecedented" for the agency to pursue the alliance's complaint.

He called the complaint "a zombie filing. It technically exists, but it's dead."

Re: Patriot Majority USA Advertisement

Dear Station Manager:

We write to respond to your inquiry regarding our advertisement, and specifically the claim that Rep. Mia Love “collected hundreds of thousands in illegal contributions.” This claim is not only true, it is undisputed between the Love Campaign and Patriot Majority USA.

Rep. Love collected over $380,000 worth of contributions designated for a nonexistent primary election after April 21, 2018, when Rep. Love became the Republican party nominee during the party convention.<sup>1</sup> To remedy the collection of these hundreds of thousands of dollars in illegal contributions, Rep. Love has already agreed to either return or seek re-designation of the funds from the donors for the general election, promising the FEC: “Friends of Mia Love will refund, or process re-designations for, all contributions designated for the primary election that were received after April 21, 2018, which will be reflected on the subsequently filed amended reports.”<sup>2</sup>

The email that the Love Campaign has produced from Danita Alberico, dated October 17, does not address contributions collected after April 21, 2018, because the Love Campaign has already conceded that those contributions were illegal and has promised to remedy those illegal contributions by returning them or re-designating them.<sup>3</sup> It therefore remains true that Rep. Love collected hundreds of thousands in illegal contributions.

The First Amendment “affords the broadest protection to [] political expression in order ‘to assure unfettered interchange of ideas for the bringing about of political and social changes desired by the people.’”<sup>4</sup> In the context of licensing requirements, the FCC recognizes that “the
