ISSUE:

Is the use of police body cameras good for the Pueblo community?

Discussion of Issue:

The aftermath of violent protests in Ferguson and New York have raised the discussion of police brutality and the fear citizens have when confronted by law enforcement. The Pueblo Police Department recently implemented the use of body cameras. Several issues arose for discussion including officers forgetting to turn the cameras on, questions about citizen privacy and access to view footage recorded on the body cameras.

Programming: KTSC-FM addressed this issue through several different kinds of programs, including public affairs discussions, news stories, and PSA'S. The following are illustrative examples of such programming:

- a. T-Wolf Talk                      10/04/15                      8:30 a.m. – 8:57 a.m.
Pueblo Police Department Captain Eric Bravo and discussed the department's implementation of body cameras used on all police officers. They reviewed the changes in the community's perception of the police force; the views of police officers after protests took place in Ferguson and New York, and the need for police departments to be accountable and transparent in their operations. They also reviewed privacy concerns by pedestrians and the accessibility of these videos. (Local).
