Third Quarter 2013

KSYM 90.1 FM is a student staffed and operated non-profit college radio station. The Alamo Community College District owns and houses KSYM on the campus of San Antonio College. The station serves both the students enrolled in the Radio and Television Broadcasting Program and the community to which we broadcast our programming. As a non-profit station, KSYM has a duty to provide our listeners with information on events important to our community. Priorities are given to ACCD events, other local educational institutions, local community events, and national/international events respectively.

A. Public Service Announcements:

Public Service Announcements run once every hour. They are read live or pre-recorded to play from our automated system. This category covers events and information beneficial to the community emanating from local, state, or national non-profit organizations and governments.

Problem: Lack of visitation and flowers for medical patients and nursing home residents with no extended family./ Larsen Jay was a successful and well-known video producer until a severe injury landed him in the trauma unit at the University of Tennessee Medical Center. In that first week on the ward, which Larsen describes as the hardest week of his life, he was amazed at the influx of support he received in the form of daily visitors and flowers. As soon as he was able to leave his room, he began to notice how many of his fellow patients didn't have flowers or visitors- the very thing that helped Larsen so much in those early, difficult days. Within moments, the first "Random Acts of Flowers" delivery was made. Seeing the profound impact this small gesture made compelled Larsen to quit his career and start Random Acts of Flowers in 2008. Random Acts of Flowers collects flowers from grocery stores, weddings, funerals, churches, and special events where they would otherwise be thrown away, dismantles and repurposes them. They recycle 100% of things donated and to date have delivered more than 20,000 bouquets. Length 8:28 @ 17:36

Problem: Lack of compassion among everyday adults. / Carolee Hazard began a social network movement that started with a random act of kindness and inspired countless others. The movement started when Carolee noticed a distressed woman in the grocery store who had lost her wallet. She offered to loan the woman $207 to pay for her groceries. Her good deed was repaid and then some. Carolee found herself sharing the story on Facebook and the online community fell in love with the idea of joining a spontaneous 'pay it forward' effort to feed the hungry. In no time people from all over the U.S. were joining movement. When the show originally aired Carolee's Facebook phenomenon (The $93 Club) had raised over $122,000 to feed the hungry in the San Francisco area alone! Length: ? @ 16:08

Problem: Bullying / Paula Goldberg has spent her life helping children with special needs through teaching and PACER, a nonprofit she co-founded. Then, in 2006 it became clear to her that the bullying in schools was out of control. She expanded her organization's programs to include a center to help stop this terrible trend. PACER's National Bullying Prevention Center provides resources (to kids, their families and schools) and lobbies the government for better laws. The organization shines a light on the problem while also offering support and a space for meaningful dialogue to end bullying and intolerance. Among other achievements, last year they directly assisted with 1,200 cases of bullying and had over 1.2 million visitors to their website. Length: 8:07 @ 17:20

Problem: Mobility and access to wheel chairs and crutches for disabled folks with low incomes. Ed found his calling after he befriended a young man suffering from Cerebral Palsy. At first Ed helped his friend with tasks and chores that limited mobility made difficult or even impossible but he found the work so rewarding, he knew he had to do more. In 1986 he and his wife cofounded the organization Friends of Disabled Adults and Children (FODAC). The nonprofit helps people remain mobile by providing equipment, ramps and resources. Ed officially retired from the organization several years ago, but left it in good hands and it continues to grow. To date over 25,000 wheelchairs have found new homes and over $70 million of medical and mobility equipment have been redirected to those in need. Length: 9:38 @ 23:48

Problem: World hunger / In 2003, Kristin Walter was a junior at the University of Texas who was looking for a way to get involved with an organization that addressed issues of gender inequality, particularly concerning the silencing of women. Kristin's mentor introduced her to The Hunger Project, a non-profit committed to ending world hunger through empowering women as change-makers, and Kristin knew she needed to get involved. She also knew that investing was one of the most powerful ways to give, but she didn't have any of her own money to donate. So she started making grilled cheeses and giving them away on campus as a way of starting conversation and asking for donations for The Hunger Project. At the end of the first school year of doing this, she had raised $10,000. For each grilled cheese given, they ask for a donation of "whatever feels good," giving the organization its name. Officially founded in 2005 by Kristin and her best friend Talis Apud, they've been able to raise close to $1.5 million and start chapters of FeelGood on 23 campuses around the country, engaging more than 1,500 student volunteers. Their efforts have mobilized more than 14,000 people of out chronic hunger. Length: 7:53 @ 21:57

Problem: Lack of soap in underdeveloped countries. When Derreck was a child his family fled the Ugandan war and ended up in a Kenyan refugee camp. Overnight he went from living in comfort to having almost nothing. Years later he came to the U.S. to attend college. On his first days in the country he was shocked to realize that American hotels throw away huge amounts of soap; he already knew that millions die each year due to illnesses from poor sanitation and seeing the waste of something so valuable struck a cord in him. Derreck created the Global Soap Project to end this waste, recycle and helps save lives. So far they have distributed over 250,000 bars of reconstituted soap some of the neediest in the world. Problem: Lack of fitness programs for amputees. Annie Okerlin of Tampa, Florida opened her own yoga studio and began teaching yoga classes after she received her teacher certification in 1999. In 2006, one of her first students suggested she work with an amputee he met at Walter Reed medical center in Washington DC who he thought would benefit from yoga. This student, Tom Steffens, is a decorated Navy Seal commander and yoga convert who was working with amputees at Walter Reed and thought Annie's style of teaching would be relaxing and beneficial for wounded veterans. Annie founded the Exalted Warrior Foundation when she began teaching yoga at Walter Reed in 2006. Today, she works with veterans with both seen and unseen injuries to cultivate relaxation techniques, supplement physical therapy, and facilitate a receptive and understanding community of support. Since 2006, the Exalted Warrior Foundation has worked with more than 12,000 veterans at 8 hospitals and medical centers around the country. Length: 8:52 @ 16:18

Problem: Lack of music as healing programs for kids dealing with cancer and other life threatening diseases. When Gary was age 5, his grandfather gifted him with a prized harmonica that ignited his passion for music. As an adult, he became a professional Blues and Roots musician who plays (among other things) a mean harmonica. In 1985 Gary helped a friend out with a "jam" session at a children's cancer ward. The event changed his life forever. Noticing kids attraction to the harmonica's friendly tone and simplicity he developed his unique brand of music therapy. Using the harmonica as a tool he teaches music to heal, nourish, and bring joy to children with challenges. To date, through Harmonikids Gary has personally worked with over 20,000 special needs children world-wide, in diverse venues ranging from hospitals, to detention centers, to disaster relief areas and many points in between. Problem: Clean drinking water in under developed countries and places that have faced recent natural disasters. / Jon Rose was a professional surfer for 13 years. As his career began to wind down, he started looking for ways to give back. He was inspired by his father, who worked for years on water-based philanthropy projects in Africa. Although Jon didn't want to replicate exactly what his father had been working on, he wanted to start something similar on his own as a side project. He learned that 1 out of 6 people, or 1 billion people worldwide, don't have access to clean water. He also learned that extremely affordable water filtration systems were already available. So with this in mind, he decided to take his first aid trip to Indonesia in 2009. While he was there, a major earthquake occurred and this changed everything- he knew he needed to dedicate his life to helping communities get access to clean water. Jon founded Waves for Water in 2009; since then, they've distributed more than 100,000 water filters and directly impacted more than 7.5 million people in 17 countries. Length: ? @ 19:38

Problem: Lack of access to organic and healthy foods among lower income families. / Renee Boughman worked for many years teaching history at a local community college and working as a chef in a fine dining restaurant, but she always wondered why it had to be that the best foods go to people with the highest incomes when the people of less means need it more. This thought stayed with her, and one day she and a couple of her church members were talking about how they could create something that works to feed the hungry in their small community of Boone, NC. Someone overheard their conversation and gave them an article about One World Cafe, a pay-what-you-can cafe. They thought this model would be perfect for their community, so in 2009 they started fundraising and getting the word out about creating this kind of cafe in Boone. After 3 years of preparation, they were able to open their cafe in 2012. F.A.R.M Cafe, which stands for Feed All Regardless of Means, is a low-waste, local, sustainable pay-what-you-can eating establishment that has served more than 30,000 meals to date, a good portion of which went to people in need. Problem: Spine disease in lack of access to surgeries in Africa. / For over 25 years, Dr. Rick Hodes has lived and worked in Ethiopia as the Medical Director for the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee (JDC). Over the years, he has been in charge of the health of 60,000 Ethiopian Jews returning to Israel, ministering to the critically ill in refugee camps, serving two self-started medical clinics, administering medicine on the fly in small villages, and working with kids at Mother Teresa's Mission- a home for the sick and destitute. He now primarily works with three "orphan diseases": heart disease, spine disease, and cancer. His work in Ethiopia has led him to adopt five children, treat 1047 spinal patients, 460 heart patients, and 50 cancer patients. He has treated more than 1500 patients, and saved tens of thousands of lives through his public health work, adoptions, surgeries, and medical care. Length: ? @ 20:56

Problem: Lack of socks for the homeless / Tom used to be chronically homeless-phobic; he was so afraid of the homeless that he would cross the street if he encountered a homeless person. His wife began volunteering at a soup kitchen and in 2007, she asked him to go with her to serve the homeless. He managed to get down to the shelter and spend the morning talking with the people. On the way home, Tom's wife told him that a podiatrist she knew said the homeless had tremendous health problems with their feet and lower extremities because they don't have socks; it turns out homeless people disproportionately suffer from foot-related afflictions such as swelling, blisters, skin infections, and frostbite. So in 2009, Tom gathered a few bags of socks together and distributed them at a local homeless shelter. That experience changed his life- he knew he had to be "the sock guy." Tom founded a non-profit called "The Joy of Sox" that collects and distributes socks to the homeless in 14 states and 3 countries. He and his team of nearly 100 volunteers have given away more than 120,000 pairs of socks to date, impacting more than 75,000 homeless men, women and children. Length: 7:58 @ 20:58

She makes it a habit to give to the less fortunate but has often been surprised at how hard it can be to get items to the people who most need them. This led her to start an organization that connects people wanting to give away items with nonprofits and their clients. It's all done via a really smart website called DonorsResource.org. To date the site has helped redistribute over 70,000 usable items that could have ended up in the trash. It's a win for everyone involved and makes giving easy. Length: 7:00 @ 20:22
