Monday: The issue on this broadcast, which was a repeat, aired excerpts from a Connecticut General Assembly organizational meeting for a committee overseeing emergency services in the state. Mike D' Agostino was the speaker, and the host was Paul Kretschmer.

Tuesday: The issue of this program was how to help schools in third world countries thrive during a pandemic, and what they can in turn, teach those in the first world. From Mission Network News, Katie Hearth interviewed Dean Vander Mey on how the situation is shaping up in Africa and what people here can do to advance development of education in those countries. The host was Paul Kretschmer.

Wednesday: On this program, the issue was how the next Connecticut State Government was developed and what it includes, new and old. To discuss the budget, State Revenue Commissioner Mark Boughton and Office of Policy & Management Director Melissa McCaw were the guests. The host was Paul Kretschmer.

Thursday & Friday: The issue of this program was the expected conclusion of Sheff versus O'Neill. This case dates back almost 30 years and was the outgrowth of a minority parent suing the state for an unequal education for her child as a result almost 100 percent minority enrollment in Hartford and most Caucasian student in suburban schools. Speaker were parent Elizabeth Sheff and current state attorney general William Tong. The host was Paul Kretschmer.

Saturday: The issue on this broadcast was an interview with former NFL football player and current evangelist Joe Jackson. He told his personal story of seeking and winning a place in professional football, finding himself after his career of sports ended, and how he took his personal faith and redirected his life to serve for God. The host was Gerry Williams.
