MEET THE PRESS

Sundays 6:00-7:00am

2020 3rd QUARTER MEET THE PRESS TOPICS

Chuck Todd is NBC News Political Director and the moderator of "Meet the Press," the flagship Sunday Morning public affairs program and longest-running broadcast in television history.

July 5, 2020

Gov. Phil Murphy (D-NJ), Gov. Asa Hutchinson (R-AR), Dr. Nahid Bhadelia, Susan Rice, Jeh Johnson, Danielle Pletka, Peter Alexander and moderated by Andrea Mitchell

ANDREA MITCHELL: This Sunday: A growing pandemic. More than 50,000 new cases a day. States shutting down. Reversing or delaying reopenings. President Trump says the virus is being handled. And focuses instead on the culture wars. My guests this morning: Governors Phil Murphy of New Jersey and Asa Hutchinson of Arkansas and infectious disease expert Dr. Nahid Bhadelia. Plus, about face. Allies of the president now urging people to wear face masks. And Governor Abbott of Texas orders it. Also, did President Trump ignore warnings of Russian bounties on Americans or was he not told?

ANDREA MITCHELL: I'll talk to former national security advisor for President Obama, Susan Rice. Joining me for insight and analysis are: former Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson, Danielle Pletka of the American Enterprise Institute and NBC News White House correspondent Peter Alexander. Welcome to Sunday. It's Meet the Press.

July 12, 2020

Assistant Secretary for Health Admiral Brett Giroir, Superintendent of Miami-Dade County Public Schools Alberto Carvalho, Gov. Larry Hogan (R-MD), Kristen Welker, Anna Palmer and George Will

CHUCK TODD: This Sunday: Surges, shortages and schools. Covid-19 cases exploding, with shortages of beds equipment and tests. A surge driven largely by states reopening too early and by foolish behavior. President Trump still denying the crisis despite the reality on the ground. Plus: Back to school. The administration pushing for schools to reopen quickly. As educators say safety, not speed, is what matters. My guests this morning: assistant Health Secretary Brett Giroir and Miami-Dade School Superintendent, Alberto Carvalho. Also: Trump versus Mueller.

CHUCK TODD: A rare public rebuke: Robert Mueller denounces President Trump's commuting of Roger Stone's prison sentence. And preparing for a possible post-Trump GOP. I'll talk to Republican Governor Larry Hogan of Maryland, who's already considering a 2024 presidential run. Joining me for insight and analysis are: NBC News White House correspondent Kristen Welker, syndicated columnist George Will and Anna Palmer, senior Washington correspondent for Politico. Welcome to Sunday. It's Meet the Press.

Dr. Francis Collins, Gov. Mike DeWine (R-Ohio), Gov. Jared Polis (D-Colo.), Dr. Michael Osterholm, Dr. Joneigh Khaldun, Dr. Wayne Frederic and Rep. Jim Clyburn(D-S.C.)

CHUCK TODD: This Sunday, a special edition: The Covid Crisis. Cases soaring. Testing slow. More states and businesses now demanding people wear masks. But many still refusing. President Trump continuing to deny the reality on the ground, as states like Georgia set new-case records and demanding schools reopen in person despite the risk. Why does the U.S. trail the industrialized world in controlling the virus?

(Meet The Press Cont'd – July 19, 2020)

Are things about to get worse? And what can we do now to emerge from this crisis? Plus, the passing of an American hero.

CHUCK TODD: Remembering John Lewis, civil rights leader, Congressman, and the conscience of a nation. Welcome to Sunday and a special edition of Meet the Press.

July 26, 2020 – MEET THE PRESS WAS PREEMPTED

August 2, 2020

Assistant Secretary for Health Admiral Brett Giroir, Dr. Nahid Bhadelia, Rep. Karen Bass (D-CA), Andrea Mitchell, Robert Draper and Heather McGhee

CHUCK TODD: This Sunday, the surging Covid crisis. The U.S. averaging roughly 65,000 new cases a day. Twenty-one states in the so-called red zone. Amid the growing crisis, President Trump retweets discredited advice. This morning I'll talk to Admiral Brett Giroir of the White House Coronavirus Task Force and Dr. Nahid Bhadelia of Boston University. Plus, trailing in the polls, the president floats delaying the election, blaming -- without evidence -- increased mail-in voting. Many Republicans push back. Why even Mr. Trump's allies say this time he's going too far. Also, while honoring John Lewis, President Obama takes on President Trump. And who will Joe Biden choose as his running mate?

CHUCK TODD: I'll talk to a rising contender, Congresswoman Karen Bass of California. Joining me for insight and analysis are: NBC News Chief Foreign Affairs Correspondent Andrea Mitchell, Journalist and author Robert Draper and Heather McGhee of the civil rights advocacy group Color of Change. Welcome to Sunday. It's Meet the Press.

Director of the Office of Trade & Manufacturing Policy Peter Navarro, Sen. Dick Durbin (D-Ill.), Dr. Tom Inglesby, Kasie Hunt, Joshua Johnson and Rich Lowry

CHUCK TODD: This Sunday: Pandemic and politics. The US reaches 5 million confirmed COVID cases. While President Trump continues to deny the tragedy he's overseeing. Congress deadlocked. With millions losing benefits, negotiators fail again to reach agreement. And President Trump signs executive orders he claims will help those in need. My guests this morning White House Trade Director Peter Navarro, Democratic Whip, Senator Dick Durbin, and Dr. Tom Inglesby of Johns Hopkins University. Plus: Coronavirus and the Classroom. The debate over opening schools.

CHUCK TODD: We talk to a principal, a teacher and a school nurse on opening schools in the age of a pandemic. And Decision 2020: Tangled up in blue. How the electoral map has shifted with just 12 weeks to go before Election Day. Joining me for insight and analysis are: MSNBC anchor, Joshua Johnson, NBC News Capitol Hill correspondent, Kasie Hunt, and Rich Lowry, Editor of National Review. Welcome to Sunday. It's Meet the Press.

August 16, 2020

Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-VT), National Security Adviser Robert O'Brien, Kasie Hunt, Carol Lee, Jeh Johnson and Charles Benson September 6, 2020 - Ohio Secretary of State Frank LaRose, Michigan Secretary of State Jocelyn Benson, Executive Director of North Carolina State Board of Elections Karen Brinson Bell, Marc Elias, Ben Ginsberg, Clint Watts, Michael Waldman and Janai Nelson

(Meet The Press Cont'd – August 16, 2020)

CHUCK TODD: This Sunday, the new Democratic ticket. She's ready to do the job on day one. Joe Biden picks his running mate. The first woman of color ever on a national ticket. The Trump campaign struggling to find a consistent line of attack. How will this ticket fare with progressive Democrats? This morning, my interview with Senator Bernie Sanders of Vermont. Plus: Our brand new NBC News - Wall Street Journal poll on the eve of the Democratic National Convention. Also, as COVID relief talks break down President Trump says: No deal? No new Postal Service funding for mail-in voting prompting charges that he is sabotaging mail-in voting to help his re-election chances.

CHUCK TODD: And as President Trump struggles at home, he secures a big agreement in the Middle East. I'll talk to National Security Advisor Robert O'Brien. Joining me for insight and analysis are: NBC News Capitol Hill correspondent Kasie Hunt, former Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson, NBC News correspondent Carol Lee and Charles Benson, from our NBC affiliate in convention city Milwaukee. Welcome to Sunday and our coverage of the Democratic National Convention, it's Meet the Press.

Trump Campaign Senior Advisor Jason Miller, Former Democratic Presidential Candidate Pete Buttigieg, Sen. Mark Warner (D-VA), Gerald Seib, Kristen Welker and Fmr. Gov. Scott Walker

CHUCK TODD: This Sunday: Making the case. Joe Biden frames his campaign against President Trump. With a little help from his friends and his running mate. Now, it's President Trump's turn. As he signals his campaign strategy.

CHUCK TODD: My guests this morning Trump campaign senior advisor Jason Miller and former Democratic presidential candidate Pete Buttigieg of Indiana. Plus, as President Trump continues his baseless attacks on mail-in voting. House Democrats vote to block changes that slowed some postal service. And a bipartisan Senate panel details the extensive ties between Russia and the 2016 Trump campaign. I'll talk to the top Democrat on the Senate Intelligence Committee, Mark Warner. Joining me for insight and analysis are: NBC News White House correspondent Kristen Welker, Gerald Seib of the Wall Street Journal, and former Republican Governor of Wisconsin, Scott Walker. Welcome to Sunday, it's Meet the Press.

August 30, 2020

Mike Baker, Chief of Staff Mark Meadows, Rep. Cedric Richmond (D-LA), Etan Thomas, Sue Bird, Hallie Jackson, Michael Schmidt, Yamiche Alcindor and Pat McCrory

CHUCK TODD: This Sunday, after the conventions, a 65-day sprint. Republicans, attacking Joe Biden. Looking to the future. Rewriting history. And trying to make the election a choice, not a referendum.

CHUCK TODD: My guests this morning: White House Chief of Staff Mark Meadows and the co-chair of the Biden campaign, Congressman Cedric Richmond of Louisiana. Plus: deadly scene in Portland. Pro-Trump and Black Lives Matter protesters clash overnight. Gunfire erupts during one confrontation and a man was killed. We'll have the latest. Also, the police shooting in Kenosha, Wisconsin, of Jacob Blake leads to violent street scenes and the fatal shooting of two protesters by a teenage vigilante. NBA players speak up and walk out, soon to be joined by players in other major sports leagues. I'll talk to former NBA player Etan Thomas and Sue Bird of the W-N-B-A. Joining me for insight and analysis are: NBC News Chief White House correspondent Hallie Jackson, New York Times correspondent Michael Schmidt, Yamiche Alcindor, White House Correspondent for PBS NewsHour, and former Republican Governor of North Carolina Pat McCrory. Welcome to Sunday. It's Meet the Press.

September 6, 2020

Ohio Secretary of State Frank LaRose, Michigan Secretary of State Jocelyn Benson, Executive Director of North Carolina State Board of Elections Karen Brinson Bell, Marc Elias, Ben Ginsberg, Clint Watts, Michael Waldman and Janai Nelson

CHUCK TODD: This Sunday: Vote Watch. With a pandemic leading to more people preparing to vote by mail than ever before President Trump steps up his fight against mail-in balloting despite a lack of evidence. Still, many are concerned. Plus, worries over voting rights foreign meddling and a weakened Postal Service. Poll watchers, delayed results and conspiracy theories. This morning: How safe is your vote? Welcome to Sunday and a special Vote Watch edition of Meet the Press.

September 13, 2020

Former FBI Agent Peter Strzok, Chair of the Republican National Convention Ronna Romney McDaniel, NBC News Correspondent Erin McLaughlin, Dr. Michael Osterholm, Kasie Hunt, Al Cardenas and Jeffrey Goldberg

CHUCK TODD: This Sunday: The president and the pandemic. Bob Woodward reveals President Trump knew how deadly the coronavirus was. At the same time he was saying this: "Now, you treat this like a flu. One day, it's like a miracle, it will disappear." Mr. Trump on the defensive. And under attack. Even hearing from his own experts.

CHUCK TODD: My guests this morning, Republican National Chairwoman Ronna McDaniel and infectious disease expert Michael Osterholm. Plus, the man who led the FBI's Russia investigation until he was taken off the case because of his anti-Trump texts. Peter Strzok suspected then and still believes President Trump is compromised by Russia and he joins me this morning. Also, epic wildfires. A deadly wave of fires burning in California, Oregon and Washington State. Millions of acres burned, thousands evacuated and no end in sight. We'll have the latest from the scene of this latest climate disaster. Joining me for insight and analysis are NBC News Capitol Hill correspondent Kasie Hunt, editor in chief of The Atlantic Jeffrey Goldberg and Republican strategist Al Cardenas. Welcome to Sunday. It's Meet the Press.

September 20, 2020

Sen. Amy Klobuchar (D-MN), Sen. John Barrasso (R-WY), Fmr. Sec. Hillary Clinton, Andrea Mitchell, Nina Totenberg and Secretary of Health & Human Services Alex Azar

CHUCK TODD: This Sunday: Another political crisis in a year of crises. The death of Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg and the epic Supreme Court fight ahead. President Trump says he wants to replace Ginsburg "without delay." But Democrats insist the Senate should wait. President Trump hopes this will upend a race he's losing. But is there any evidence it will? I'll talk to former Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton, Democratic Senator Amy Klobuchar of the Judiciary Committee, and the third-ranking Republican in the Senate, John Barrasso. Plus: An administration at war with itself. Covid deaths hit 200,000, and President Trump fighting his own experts, on vaccines and on face masks ---

CHUCK TODD: I'll talk to Health and Human Services Secretary Alex Azar. Also: How the coronavirus is impacting President Trump's re-election chances. Our brand new NBC News - Wall Street Journal poll on Covid, leadership and where the presidential race stands with six weeks to go. Welcome to Sunday and a special edition of Meet the Press.

September 27, 2020

Sen. Roy Blunt (R-MO), Sen. Cory Booker (D-NJ), Lt. Gen. H.R. McMaster (Ret.), Fmr. Sen. Claire McCaskill, Peter Baker, Lanhee Chen and Yamiche Alcindor

CHUCK TODD: This Sunday, full court press. President Trump names Judge Amy Coney Barrett to the high court. Setting up a high stakes fight over abortion rights and the Affordable Care Act just days before the election.

CHUCK TODD: My guests this morning: Republican Senator Roy Blunt of Missouri and Democratic Senator Cory Booker of New Jersey. Plus: Transfer of power. The president is complaining about his poll numbers and refusing to commit to a peaceful transition if he loses. Facing pushback from Democrats from Republicans and raising alarms at the Pentagon. I'll talk to President Trump's former national security adviser, retired General H.R. McMaster. And - stage craft. President Trump is gearing up to launch personal attacks at Tuesday night's debate. Can Biden stay focused? Joining me for insight and analysis are: Peter Baker, Chief White House Correspondent for The New York Times, Yamiche Alcindor, White House Correspondent for PBS NewsHour, former Democratic Senator Claire McCaskill of Missouri, and Lanhee Chen, fellow at the Hoover Institution. Welcome to Sunday. It's Meet the Press.

MATTER OF FACT WITH SOLEDAD O'BRIEN

Sundays 8:30-9:00am and 6:30-7:00pm

Matter of Fact is a groundbreaking half-hour weekly program designed to be an informational toolkit for Americans. Hosted by award-winning producer, journalist, documentarian, and news anchor, Soledad O'Brien. Matter of Fact offers an analysis and perspective on current political and socioeconomic issues with a focus on the implications for Latinos and other important groups who are shaping a rapidly changing American landscape.

July 5, 2020

What does it mean to be an American? Magistrate Judge Nancy Joseph, a Haitian immigrant, now a naturalized citizen says, it means remaining hopeful about all the possibilities of what America can be. We follow her as she presides over a naturalization ceremony in Milwaukee.

Then, as cases of COVID-19 surge, pressure mounts to find a vaccine. Deliberately infecting volunteers with the virus could accelerate the search. Is it worth it? Special Contributor Joie takes us inside a controversial shortcut known as "Human Challenge Trials."

Plus, knocked down but not out. How a boxing gym in Detroit became an unlikely source of support for a community facing hard knocks during the pandemic.

And revisit our conversation with Supreme Court Justice Sonia Sotomayor about the state of civics in the country. She tells Soledad we're forgetting what we all have in common by only focusing on why we're different.

Finally, an ancient evergreen, 19 hundred years old has just been discovered in China. That's old, but still about seven thousand years too young to hold a record on age.

July 12, 2020

An uncontrollable surge in coronavirus cases leads to dire warnings from health experts. The country's faced this before during another pandemic, the flu of 1918. What can our past teach us about the present pandemic?

Plus, calculating the cost of economic recovery. Economist Heidi Shierholz tells Soledad, if congress lets a boost in unemployment benefits expire, everyone could feel the impact, even if you're still working.

Then, a crisis within a crisis, we go to Lincoln, Nebraska, inside a community of refugees struggling to stay afloat during the pandemic while still trying to feed their families back home.

And a new ruling from the United States Supreme Court decides how the president gets elected.

Finally, Soledad reflects on America's moment of reckoning on race and her recently published op-ed in the New York Times, titled "A Me Too Moment for Journalists of Color."

July 19, 2020

What are the considerations? How would social distancing work? What kinds of schedules would allow classes to move forward and parents to go back to work? Soledad is joined by Merrie Najimy, President of the 110,000 member Massachusetts Teachers Association, for a discussion of the pros and cons of re-opening schools, and the guidelines her members say should serve as the framework for decision making.

And, "A Most Beautiful Thing" is ready for a premiere. The documentary, about Chicago's first all-black rowing team, examines the issues of trauma and racism in a powerful story about how kids from rival neighborhoods on Chicago's west side come together on the water, as an unlikely rowing team. Soledad talks with filmmaker, Mary Mazzio, Arshay Cooper, the film's inspiration, and former NBA star, Grant Hill, who serves as an Executive Producer on the project. Get a sneak peek at the film, and share a conversation about how trauma and racism impacted the lives of the crew members and shaped their adult experiences. We talk about their on-camera reunion 20 years after high school, and why they decided to row again, this time with members of the Chicago Police Department.

(Matter of Fact Cont'd – July 19, 2020)

Plus, we take you back to the Detroit boxing gym that traded punches for lunches to help the families in need because of COVID-19.

July 26, 2020

We follow a COVID-19 contact tracer, rushing to stop the spread of the disease and fighting to combat the stigma surrounding a positive test result. Then we talk to an infectious disease doctor, Amesh Adalja who tells Soledad even without a COVID-19 vaccine in sight, there's still a reason to be hopeful about some of treatments we already have.

Then the United States Postal Service says it could run out of money by the end of the year. So just how did one of America's oldest and largest employers get in a cash crunch? Correspondent Joie Chen takes us to Bethel, Alaska and the shores of Eastern, Maryland to show us what a future without the post office would look like for people who rely on it.

Plus, Joe Biden promised to pick a woman as his running mate and Kelly Dittmar, a professor of political science at Rutgers-Camden says his pick could redefine the race to the White House.

And what's the proper way to honor a man who risked his life to ensure everyone had the right to vote? Democrats want to reinstate parts of the Voting Rights Act and rename it after the late Congressman John Lewis (D-GA). But Republicans are opposed to both ideas. So how will his peers remember the man often called, "The Conscience of the Congress?"

Finally, the non-profit, Pizza to the Polls wants to deliver more than hot slices come November. It started as a campaign to feed hungry voters, now the organization wants to recruit 250,000 young poll workers.

August 2, 2020

Correspondent Jessica Gomez takes us inside a rural hospital on life support. Like many other rural hospitals, Titus Regional Medical Center in Texas, was operating on razor-thin margins, now it's pushed to the brink with a surge of COVID-19 cases, insured patients, all while it has cancelled the elective surgeries that generate most of its money.

Then, with more than half of adults reporting higher levels of stress and anxiety, Dr. Vaile Wright, of the American Psychological Association tells Soledad the next curve we need to flatten will be for a mental health crisis.

Whether it's fear over foreign interference, voter suppression, fights over mail-in voting, democracy faces a big test, in less than 100 days. Matthew Weil is the director of the Elections Project of the Bipartisan Policy Center, and he tells Soledad calling this election will much different.

And, President Trump officially rolls back an Obama-era housing rule meant to combat segregation in the suburbs.

Finally, a reminder that innovation to fight COVID-19 is happening daily. We look at new facial mask that could literally save lives and a possible gamechanger in detecting the virus- an at-home test kit.

August 9, 2020

Who gets the COVID-19 vaccine first? Will there be enough to go around? Should you have to pay for it? We're tracking the timeline for a vaccine with Dr. James Hildreth, immunologist and president and CEO of Meharry Medical College. He tells Soledad we should adjust our expectations if we're hoping to see a vaccine by the end of the year.

Plus, nearly three years after Hurricane Maria left a tropical paradise powerless, Puerto Ricans who fled the island now have the power to determine the next president. Will they flip the biggest battleground state from red to blue? Special Contributor Joie Chen reports from central Florida.

Then, a once silent epidemic grows louder, after a new report documents more than 2,300 cases of missing and murdered Native American women and girls. While so many have vanished, families tell us they wonder why so little is being done about it.

(Matter of Fact Cont'd – August 9, 2020)

And it's a battle of the ages. Boomers are now outnumbered, with people over the age 40 now the majority. How will the next generation leave its mark on the country?

And finally, nothing says celebration quite like champagne. But COVID-19 has cancelled celebratory occasions worldwide. With sales flat, the champagne bubble is set to burst. Producers will decide to between destroying grapes instead of lowering the price of a bottle of bubbly, or selling them off to make alcohol, for hand sanitizer.

August 16, 2020

This month marks 100 years since women won the right to vote in America. Since then we've had three women as vice presidential candidates for major parties, and one woman at the top of the ticket. But what else has changed and what has not, since the 19th Amendment was ratified? Historians -Ann Gordon, Marcia Chatelain, and Maggie Blackhawk-join Soledad for a discussion about how women shape democracy now and how they changed it even before they could vote.

From the past to the future, how are young women inspired to vote today? Two students, Naba Rahman, a Republican, and Allison Tovar, a Democrat, talk about how the 19th Amendment shapes their political engagement today and what role gender plays in the upcoming 2020 election.

Plus, we go inside the "Rightfully Hers" exhibit at the National Archives for a look back at the 19th Amendment. With millions of documents available, how do you choose which ones make the cut? Soledad gets a special look at some of the most interesting items with curator, Corinne Porter. They include the patent for a special "gendered" voting booth and details on which women got to vote before the 19th Amendment.

Plus, how a "Night of Terror" at a prison just outside of Washington, D.C. changed history. We go inside the transformation of a former prison of suffragists turned Arts Center.

And is it suffragist and suffragette? Depends on where you live. Why did the United States reject the term suffragette while other countries embraced it?

August 23, 2020

Will your vote count? Trevor Potter runs the Campaign Election Center and was general counsel to John McCain's 2000 and 2008 presidential campaign, he tells Soledad what states need today to protect mail-in ballots in November.

While congress fights over the next stimulus package, more people are turning to food banks. But how long can they feed this need? Since losing his job, Brett Pavia walks one mile to pick up free groceries from a food bank in Milwaukee. He felt so guilty about needing help, he's now a volunteer at the food bank. Then we talk to Trinity Tran of Urban Partners Los Angeles, who runs one of the largest food banks in the country. She tells Soledad, people are now waiting in lines for seven hours, to get food.

Plus, NASCAR is not known for its diversity and it drove straight into controversy over the decision to ban the Confederate flag at races, raising the question, can the sport keep up with social change?

We meet the young driver, Blake Lothian, who's hoping to steer a new generation of fans and drivers to the sport.

And, Democrats accused Republicans of trying to "steal the election," with the use of mail-in ballots. Sound familiar? This battle over ballots is as old as the Civil War? So, what did President Lincoln think about absentee ballots in 1864?

Finally, across the country schools are closing just as fast as they're opening. So, what do kids caught in the middle of the debate feel? Two teens from New York City school us on what they think is best.

August 30, 2020

This week on Matter of Fact with Soledad O'Brien – The national political party conventions are over, and the campaigns are focusing on turning out the vote in November. Are they forgetting about a growing and energized voter demographic? The path to victory cannot afford to overlook the Latino vote, which is the largest minority voter group in the nation. We introduce you to Antonio Arellano, the Interim Director of JOLT, the largest civic engagement effort in the state of Texas. Find out why he says his generation of Latinos can turn the Lone Star State blue and decide the presidency for generations to come.

Plus, Tennessee protesters face harsher penalties, including losing the right to vote, if they camp overnight on State Capitol grounds. Effective immediately, protesters now face a Class E felony for violating the statute, punishable by up to six years in prison. And, felony convictions in Tennessee result in the revocation of a person's right to vote. We look inside the debate over First Amendment rights to peaceful assembly with Representative Jason Hodges, a U.S. Marine, first term democratic legislator in the Tennessee General Assembly, who says the measure goes too far.

And, we look at the global impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. Mass unemployment, lost wages, and an economic downturn have immigrant and refugee families in the U.S. struggling to send money and goods to families living in nations with rising food insecurity. As a group refugees send about 500 billion dollars to their families, a lifeline being cut off. Our correspondent Jessica Gomez takes us to Lincoln, Nebraska, with one of the nation's largest populations of resettled refugees, for a look at the efforts to feed families on the other side of the globe.

Then, the November election is just over two months away, and election officials across the country are bracing for an avalanche of absentee and mail-in ballots. We look to Wisconsin, a battleground state, where more than 20 thousand mail in ballots were rejected in the April primary, and where officials say they expect nearly two million requests for mail-in ballots for November. It's a pressure packed situation as we found out when we spent a day with the head of the state's Municipal Clerks Association for a personal look at the challenge of meeting the demand.

Finally, Tulsa wants you! Yes, you heard us. Tulsa, Oklahoma wants you to relocate if you can, and the city is offering a $10,000 incentive to make you stop and think about it. Tulsa Remote is recruiting remote workers and digital nomads, and they think COVID 19 might make workers consider their offer. We'll tell you what they're offering, and just how many folks have taken them up, and made the move.

September 6, 2020

Soledad has a conversation with attorney and former politician Bakari Sellers about his new memoir, "My Vanishing Country." At 22, he became the youngest, Black elected official in the country, when he joined the South Carolina State Legislature. At 35, he reflects on the forces that shaped him. His story begins February 8, 1968, 16 years before he was born. That night, highway patrolmen shot his father, Cleveland Sellers, a civil rights activist, during a protest to integrate a bowling alley. He tells Soledad that was the most important day his life.

And, her young son does not have a criminal record, yet police have stopped him more than 100 times. She opens about the fear of raising a Black son in America and how mothers have become invisible victims of police violence.

Then, in the aftermath of ongoing police shootings of black people, sociologist, Dr. Rashawn Ray tells Soledad the protests demanding justice have grown bigger, more diverse, and could mark a turning point in the larger movement in the fight against systemic racism.

Plus, as COVID-19 races through the rural town of Immokalee, FL, can healthcare workers gain the trust of the town's residents: migrant workers, many who are undocumented? Doctors Without Borders- an international aid organization- tries to stop the virus in its tracks before the workers head to other states for work.

Who's policing the police? A national discussion over police accountability grows with a focus on a legal rule called "qualified immunity," which can shield public officials even when they break the law.

And finally, the power of pictures. Some chaotic, some peaceful, some haunting, a look at portraits of protest from around the world.

September 13, 2020

This week on Matter of Fact with Soledad O'Brien. President Trump asks the Department of Justice to defend him in a defamation case brought by a woman who accused him of rape. He denied knowing her, and called her a liar. Now, she's taken him to court for defaming her character.

(Matter of Fact Cont'd – September 13, 2020)

Should government lawyers defend the case and send the bill to taxpayers? Soledad O'Brien examines the issues with Stephen Saltzburg, a law professor and career public servant who worked for Attorney General Bill Barr, and says government lawyers have no business getting involved in the President's personal legal battles.

Plus, why did George Washington want the nation's capital to be on the Potomac? New York and Philadelphia were contenders in the race to be the seat of the federal government. Washington made a backroom deal with three founding fathers to create the District of Columbia. What was the real reason for the deal? It's not a pretty story. It's the story of slavery, and the men and women who cast the monuments to a freedom they did not share.

Then, what it means to be an American. Meet Judge Nancy Joseph—who gives the oath of citizenship to new generations of Americans. It's her American story that inspires them. Judge Joseph, a child of Haiti, came to the United States at age 8, and followed her dream to become a citizen. Find out why she says the moment when immigrants take the oath is the beginning of the next great American story.

And, where will we get 350,000 poll workers before the November election? Corporate America steps up to fill the void created by COVID 19.

With older poll workers calling it quits, the need is great. Now, Target, Starbucks, and Old Navy are giving workers a paid day off to help out on election day. We'll fill you in on the companies and the innovations working to make sure you can safely cast your vote in November.

Finally, stop and smell the "sunflowers." You thought it was roses, didn't you? Wrong! A Wisconsin farmer thinks you need a little more sunshine in your life. And who doesn't? To combat the fatigue of coping with COVID-19, Scott Thompson decided to plant 22 acres of sunflowers. That's 2 million blooms on 15 fields. Now, his farm is a destination for taking selfies, and picking bouquets—all while maintaining social distance. There's a charge. But, the sunshine is free. We'll take you there for a pick me up.

September 20, 2020

When it comes to political news, how do you know what you see or hear is accurate? We're separating fact from fiction with Angie Holan of Politifact. But once voters have the facts, what happens when they filter information through a partisan lens, dismissing facts they disagree with? Soledad interviews Whitney Phillips, Syracuse University assistant professor who teaches media ethics, mis- and disinformation political communication, about how the rise of hoaxes and conspiracy theories are shaping democracy.

Then, unimaginable wildfires create unimaginable loss. And recovery from the current deadly wildfires on the West Coast will take years. It's a story all too familiar to the people who returned to Paradise, CA after a fire destroyed the town. We document families trying to piece their lives back together after one of the deadliest fires in the state history.

Plus, going for the gold. Why Chellsie Memmel, a retired mother of two, is determined to mount a comeback. We follow her quest for a spot on the women's USA gymnastics team. A spot she held a decade ago.

And if a COVID-19 vaccine was ready soon, would you take it? A large portion of Americans say, "no." Will that stop the country from stopping the virus in its tracks?

Finally, do we have company in the cosmos? Scientists want to search for life on Venus, a planet with temperatures pushing 900 degrees. The idea of life in our solar system's hottest planet may have sounded absurd, until scientists detected a gas made only by life, human or microbe.

September 27, 2020

Is voting a right or a privilege in America? Strict voter ID laws, refusal to grant absentee ballots, and purging eligible citizens from voter rolls are just a few measures of voter suppression. Attorney Janai Nelson of the NAACP joins us to talk about the legal battles happening right now to either grant or deny access to the polls.

(Matter of Fact Cont'd – September 27, 2020)

Plus, lawsuits, a congressional investigation, and threats from President Trump- the United States Postal Service had chaotic summer, to say the least. So why did the post office, an agency initially created as a public service, become a political football? Correspondent Joie Chen takes us from Bethel, Alaska, to the shores of eastern Maryland to show us the post office's past and what may be in store for its future.

Then, a seed of hope planted during the summer of unrest has now blossomed into a symbol of change for a chef who wants to help grow the number of Black farmers in America. Correspondent Jessica Gomez takes us to La Crosse, Wisconsin to trace how a random act of kindness could help people learn to live off the land.

And when it comes to the Supreme Court, how did nine become the magic number for justices? It wasn't always that way. A look at why calls from Democrats to expand the court if President Trump's nominee is confirmed before the election may not be too farfetched. But is history on their side?

Saturday, September 5, 7:30-8:00pm

Rossen Reports: Coronavirus Impact. Chief National Consumer Correspondent Jeff Rossen brings together the country's best minds from money to medical who break down late breaking developments from money to medical issues. Plus, with school back in session (or going back into session soon), Jeff sits down with children of all ages for a candid conversation about their fears, anxiety and thoughts about reopening schools. Also, we have heard the advice for months, "stay 6 feet apart." But, do you know how far 6-feet really is. It's out tape measure challenge, with eye-opening results. Major problems with the US Postal Service are making headlines—so we launch an experiment to see how bad it really is. We send letters and packages across the country from USPS, FEDEX and UPS. How long will it take for delivery? And how much does it cost? Many retailers and restaurants are now offering curbside "contactless" pickup – but does it really work? We test it out and show you how to do it safely.
