QUARTERLY ISSUES – PROGRAMS LISTS

Covering the Period

January 1, 2019

Through

March 31, 2019

Community Needs and Issues List – WKCF – CW18, Hearst Orlando

Based upon CW18's involvement in its community and input from community leaders and various organizations, CW18 has determined that the following issues are the concerns of the community:

1. CRIME

Below the surface of everyday life mischief and mayhem plague America's urban cities and counties.

2. PERSONAL/PUBLIC SAFETY:

With a high murder rate and crimes on the rise in Central Florida, viewers need to be informed of the dangers and how they can protect themselves and their children. Plus, with more and more people on city streets and highways, viewers need to be aware of driving risks and ways to avoid them.

3. ECONOMY

As the economy recovers, communities are growing but hesitant. Our viewers are interested in how to participate in better economic times while keep investments safe. They are also very observant of how our leaders and local companies are being responsible with their spending.

4. GOVERNMENT & POLITICS

Local, State and Federal Governments struggle to meet the needs of constituents amidst a tough economy and intense parties in political battles.

5. HEALTH

Knowledge is the key to long life and discipline the way to healthy living. Experts work out the minds and bodies of the American people.

6. OPIOID EPIDEMIC

Drug overdose deaths and Opioid-involved deaths continue to increase in the United States. Most drug overdose deaths (more than 6 out of 10) involve an Opioid. We now know that overdoses from prescription Opioids are a driving factor in the 15-year increase in Opioid overdose deaths. Since 1999, the amount of prescription Opioids sold in the U.S. nearly quadrupled, yet there has not been an overall change in the amount of pain that Americans report. Deaths from prescription Opioids have more than quadrupled since 1999 and heroine has become the drug of choice in many communities. Hearst and all their stations are bringing awareness to this national epidemic through specials and news reports, offering details on the need for laws to change and help families who are suffering from the effects of this epidemic.

7. SOCIAL-FAMILY

As Central Florida expands and grows so comes growing pains. It is important that the process of development includes collective actions and solutions generated by leaders and residents in our communities. Our stations provide information and stories that bring those issues and proposed changes to the public, so they can be part of the narrative.

8. EDUCATION

Central Florida's education is a hot topic in Florida government and viewers are concerned about overcrowding, funding and ways to get parents more involved. Education is the key to preventing crimes and drug and alcohol abuse.

9. WEATHER

Central Florida is known as the "Lightening Capital of the World". The weather continues to be an intense topic because of the danger's tornadoes, hurricanes, wild fires, thunderstorms, lightening and flooding can impose.

SUMMARY: A Nationwide Food Recall is Happening Right Now. Butterball is recalling their ground turkey products because they may be contaminated with salmonella. The pre-packaged trays containing Butterball everyday fresh ground turkey were processed on July 7, 2018 with a sell or freeze by date of July 26, 2018. The company says because they were packaged 9 months ago, it is highly unlikely any of the product will be found in retail stores, but it is possible YOU may have it in your freezers at home. The establishment number "Est. p-7345" will be on the label.

SAFETY

:15 AD COUNCIL – EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS “Ember”

The new PSAs illustrate the importance of preparing for tomorrow as “you never know when the day before a natural disaster the day is before.” They direct audiences to Ready.gov-Today, where Americans can find local disaster preparedness information, a downloadable family emergency plan, emergency kit checklists, and other preparation resources.

:30 AD COUNCIL – EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS “Not Sharing”

The PSAs highlight the need for Americans to prepare in advance for emergencies. Created pro bono by New York-based advertising agency Deutsch Inc., the PSA’s depict the aftermath of a disaster and show the importance of having a plan in place in the event of a disaster. Audiences are directed to start their family emergency plans at Ready.gov and Listo.gov, which provide extensive resources for preparing for emergencies.

:30 AD COUNCIL – TEXTING & DRIVING PREVENTION “Just Drive”

This campaign targets adult drivers with a focus on texting and driving prevention. Adults live in a connected world where multi-tasking is the norm. This manifests in the car where they recognize texting and driving is dangerous but do it anyway. The average text takes drivers off the road for nearly 5 seconds. When traveling at 55 mph, that enough to cover the length of a football field. The message being conveyed is that texting while driving isn't multitasking, it's essentially driving blind.

SUMMARY: Democratic Presidential hopeful Amy Klobuchar made a stop in Florida over the weekend. The Minnesota Senator stumped in the Tampa area. She is the first of 12 officially declared candidates to visit Tampa Bay. Klobuchar says her two main campaign issues are climate change and infrastructure. She called Florida ground zero for dealing with those issues and believes more investment is needed. <"You're going to see more people voting in the 2020 election in Florida I predict than you've ever seen before. You're gonna see a lot of interest. And when I saw here in Tampa when we're talking to people about climate change they get that this isn't just a Democratic issue this is an economic issue for the entire state of Florida."> Klobuchar says she'll be making more trips to Florida during the 2020 primary.

MATTER of FACT

CW18 – Sunday's at 8a and ESTRELLA TV – Sunday's at 7:30a

JANUARY 6, 2019

This week on Matter of Fact with Soledad O'Brien, is the Supreme Court becoming too partisan? Justice Sonia Sotomayor says no. She joins Soledad for a rare interview to discuss how damaging extreme partisanship is on democracy, how the Supreme Court rises above it (yes, she says the justices are all good friends), and how teaching children civics can help ensure the country's democratic future.

Plus, Hamilton is set to premiere in Puerto Rico next week with Lin Manuel Miranda reprising his role as Alexander Hamilton. It's the first time Miranda has played the title character since he was on Broadway more than 2 years ago. He tells Soledad he's excited and a little nervous, but he says it's important to support Puerto Rico as the island continues to rebuild after Hurricane Maria.

In our weekly segment, “we’re paying attention, even if you’re too busy”, a new year means new laws. Thousands of them are taking effect right now around the country. We’ll look at a few that could spark changes nationwide, including a law to lower the drunk driving limit, raise the minimum wage, and increase gender equality on corporate boards.

And finally, every day brings new images from NASA’s Ultima Thule. Right now, the space blob looks like a lumpy snowman, but NASA is hoping it will shed light on the origins of the solar system. It took NASA 13 years and 4 billion miles to reach Ultima Thule, which is past Pluto on the edge of the solar system.

Those stories, this week on MATTER OF FACT with Soledad O’Brien.

JANUARY 13, 2019

This week on Matter of Fact with Soledad O’Brien, the narrative around immigration in America today is not what it used to be. Stories of hope, and harrowing escapes from poverty and persecution were once told publicly and with pride as immigrants recounted their journey to America. Today, the U.S. government is shutdown, a casualty of the bitter battle between Congress and President Trump, who wants to build a barrier on the southern border. Soledad talks to Andrew Tisch, co-chairman of Loews Corporation, and Mary Skafidas, Loews investor relations head, about their new book, “Journey’s: An American Story,” which details the immigration experience in the U.S. Plus, an autistic teen’s tense moments with a police officer turned into a teachable moment for an entire police force. Correspondent Diane Roberts introduces us to Jake Edwards, the Autism Ambassador for the Montgomery County Police Department in Rockville, Maryland. He’s helping police recognize traits of autism to potentially save lives.

Renee Adolphe had a successful career, owned a home, had two cars. She was living the so-called “American Dream.” So why did she give it all up to live in an impoverished community in Brazil? Correspondent Leone Lakhani tells us once Renee moved to Salvador, Bahia she discovered she wasn’t the only American in town and she also learned why Bahia is nicknamed “Black Rome.”

What’s that in the air? It could be more mercury. In our weekly segment, “we’re paying attention, even if you’re too busy,” we look at a push to weaken regulations on toxic emissions from coal power plants. Mercury exposure is linked to developmental disorders, respiratory illnesses and cancer. So why is the Environment Protection Agency making easing up on restrictions?

And finally, sky watchers are over the moon about three celestial happenings this month all at once. The moon will look bigger, then a total lunar eclipse will tint the moon red, and we’ll have a full moon, nicknamed the “Wolf” moon. Put them together and you get a “Super Blood Wolf Moon.”

Those stories, this week on MATTER OF FACT with Soledad O’Brien.

JANUARY 20, 2019

This week on Matter of Fact with Soledad O’Brien, November’s midterm elections didn’t just usher in the most diverse Congress in history, but also changed the electoral map ahead of the next Presidential election. Colorado traditionally voted Republican in Presidential elections, but the GOP just suffered their worst election defeat in modern state history. Newly elected Governor, Democrat, Jared Polis, tells Soledad that the voting shift in his state means President Trump could have a hard time winning there in 2020.

Plus, a disturbing part of the immigration debate that’s been getting little coverage: Millions of visa requests by adult men seeking to bring their child brides to America. Thousands of these visas have been approved, the girls have been as young as ten years old. But Fraidy Reiss, who escaped a forced marriage when she was a teen, is trying to close the legal loophole.

And we revisit Merida, Mexico, which has become home to a growing number of American women who have left the U.S. after their undocumented spouses were deported. They tell Matter of Fact, life away from their families in the U.S. is difficult, but that you can’t help who you fall in love with.

In our weekly segment we like to call, “we’re paying attention even if you’re too busy”, the Trump administration can’t change the upcoming census to ask if people living in the U.S. are citizens. A federal judge in New York ruled the question is unlawful. But expect the decision to be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

And finally, a small town in Maine is getting a lot of attention for an icy phenomenon. A record-breaking ice disk has formed in the Presumpscot River in Westbrook, a suburb of Portland. In aerial photos, the ice disk looks to be a near perfect circle. As people flock to the river to catch site of the disk, we’ll explain what causes these rare arctic formations.

JANUARY 27, 2019

This week of Matter of Fact with Soledad O’Brien, can you change a neighborhood without changing the people who live there? One bold gentrification experiment promises to do just that with redevelopment projects totaling more than $800 million dollars. Will it work? Or will Louisville become the next Brooklyn, New York – upgraded but unaffordable for the locals?

Plus, more mayors have their eyes on the White House. They may have 2020 vision, but are voters ready to see someone leap from Main Street to Pennsylvania Avenue? Soledad talks to Steve Benjamin, the mayor of Columbia, South Carolina and the President of the United States Conference of Mayors, about why so many local leaders say they’re ready to run the country.

And are you afraid to be fearless? Tech pioneer and philanthropist Jean case says one person can change the world in five simple steps, if they’re willing to get out of their comfort zone. She talks to Soledad about her new book, “Be Fearless.”

In our weekly segment we like to call, “we’re paying attention even if you’re too busy”, “brace yourself for sticker shock. Hospitals are now required to publish prices online. Now we know a “LAY CLOS / HND/FT = 2.5 CM” costs $307 dollars. What?! How did a law designed to make hospital prices more transparent leave everyone more confused?

Finally, trade tensions may be high between the U.S. and China but that won’t eclipse a collaboration to explore the moon. Instead of competing against China’s space agency, NASA wants to work together to study moon colonization. Is this Lunar love fest one small step or a giant leap in the right direction?

This week on MATTER OF FACT with Soledad O’Brien.

FEBRUARY 3, 2019

This week on Matter of Fact with Soledad O’Brien, Congress passed the Equal Rights Amendment back in 1972, but nearly 50 years later the states still haven’t ratified it. Why is there so much opposition to protecting women’s rights in the U.S. Constitution? Democrat Congresswoman Jackie Speier (D-CA) talks to Soledad about her new legislation that she hopes will finally get the ERA over the finish line, and Republican Tom Reed (R-NY) explains why he is co-sponsoring the bill.

Plus, for decades the Department of Justice has known that flawed forensic work done by one of the FBI’s top analysts may have sent innocent people to prison. People like Elmer Daniels. He was wrongfully convicted of rape as a teen, and spent 39 years in prison, until his case was dismissed back in December. He joins Soledad along with his Lawyer, Emeka Igwe, to talk about his case and how many more people are unjustly behind bars.

And, Author Stephanie Land joins Soledad to discuss her new memoir, “Maid”. Stephanie shares her story of how she went from what she calls a life of suburban privilege to one of poverty, living in homeless shelters as a young, single mother. Stephanie says she hopes her book will shed light on the struggle of the working poor to pull themselves out of poverty.

In our weekly segment, we're paying attention even if your too busy, some leading scientists want to raise awareness about climate change by not talking about "climate change". They say "climate change" has become focused on who-or what-is causing climate change and isn't focused on the impact and the urgent threat.

And finally, airport parking can come with a lot of headaches, like trying to find your keys or remembering where you parked your car, well now a new robot could eliminate the hassle. It's called Stan and it's a robotic parking valet that will park and return your car right to you. In addition to the convenience for drivers, it's also expected to save a lot of space in already crammed airport parking lots.

This on MATTER OF FACT with Soledad O'Brien.

FEBRUARY 10, 2019

This week on a special edition of Matter of Fact with Soledad O'Brien, she takes viewers to the U.S. – Mexico border in Hidalgo County, Texas for an in depth look at President Trump's proposed border wall. Soledad gets the perspective from the people who live and work at ground zero in the fight over immigration.

First, we speak to three landowners who own property along the Rio Grande. A new border wall system would cut through their land. At least one family tells us they're going to fight to keep their property united. But another landowner says the section of border fencing already on his property has reduced the number of illegal crossings and he welcomes expanding the barrier. And out third landowner is in the middle. He points the finger at Washington, D.C. saying Republicans and Democrats are using immigration as a political football, and its people on the border who are caught in the middle.

Next, we get two perspective on the wall. Border Patrol Chief Manuel Padilla is the head of the Rio Valley Sector, the busiest crossing point in the southwest. We go on a ride along with his agents as they search for illegal immigrants. Padilla says very simply: "the wall works." But the Mayor of McAllen, Texas disagrees. Jim Darling tells Soledad his city, the largest in Hidalgo County, relies on an open relationship with Mexico. He says there is no immigration crisis there, and that McAllen benefits economically from its business ties with Mexico.

And 70 miles north of the border lies the Falfurrias checkpoint in Brooks County. It's the last border patrol checkpoint in the Rio Grande Valley. It's also where most migrant deaths happen. The sheriff's department here has recovered the bodies of 44 immigrants so far this year. As the sheriff tells us, "once you get into that stage of dehydration it's just a matter of time before you die."

Once the immigrants have been detained and processed by CBP they are given a bus ticket and a "promise to appear" letter from the federal government. Then they are on their own. For many. They are sick, don't speak English, and have no money. So, the bus station in McAllen has turned into a respite center. Sister Norma Pimentel is there to help them on their journey. Both Mayor Darling and Chief Padilla praise Sister Norma for the work she and her volunteers do. As Padilla says, she lives her faith.

And finally, we take you inside the Santa Ana Wildlife Refuge. This is one area where you won't find a wall. That's because Congress stipulated earlier this year that any money approved for border security, could not be used to build a wall in the refuge because it would threaten the endangered species that live there.

That's it for our special edition of MATTER OF FACT* with Soledad O'Brien from Hidalgo County, Texas.

FEBRUARY 17, 2019

This week on a Matter of Fact with Soledad O'Brien, is the war on drugs over? Baltimore City's State's Attorney, Marilyn Mosby, say she will no longer prosecute anyone for the possession of marijuana. Mosby is following chief prosecutors in other big cities like Philadelphia, New York, and Chicago who say prosecuting for using pot is a waste of police resources. Mosby also says marijuana drug arrests unfairly penalize people of color. She joins Soledad and says her prosecutors will instead focus on going after violent criminals.

And did you turn on your tap today? If you did, consider yourself lucky. 1.6 million Americans don't have access to basic running water. And millions more are exposed to contaminated tap water. DigDeep, a nonprofit is not only building clean water systems in underserved communities, they are also launching a new year-long research project with Michigan State University. The goal is to determine just how widespread America's dirty water problem really is. Soledad speaks with DigDeep founder George McGraw.

Plus, a dozen high school students in Rhode Island are suing their state. They say they were never given a proper civics education and that's keeping them from fully exercising their rights as American citizens. The students hope the lawsuit will make it to the U.S. Supreme Court. If it does, they may find some support from Justice Sonia Sotomayor. She's an advocate for civics education and says it could help heal the country deep partisan divide. Hear more from Soledad's recent interview with Justice Sotomayor.

In our weekly segment, we're paying attention even if you are too busy, you heard about the U.S. government's $22 trillion national debt? There's another number that is even more frightening for economists. 7 million Americans are more than 3 months behind on their auto loan payments. That's also a new record. Economists worry it shows Americans are once again taking on debt that they simply can't afford.

Finally, have you heard of Africatown? This tiny town in Alabama is fighting to protect its place in American History. Africatown, which lies just north of Mobile, Alabama, was founded by the last known slaves shipped to America. In 1860, domestic slavery was still legal in the U.S., but it was illegal to import new slaves. On a dare, an Alabama businessman bet he could evade authorities and safely dock a slave ship in Alabama. The business man was caught, and the slaves were freed five years later. They pooled their money and brought the land on which they would establish Africatown. Their descendants hope to turn Africatown into a major tourist destination.

That's all on this week of MATTER OF FACT with Soledad O'Brien.

February 24, 2019

This week on Matter of Fact with Soledad O'Brien, 73% of Americans believe climate change is happening. It's a record high fueled in part by the fact that many people say they have experienced the impact of climate change personally. Especially those who live along the coasts. Soil erosion, ocean acidification, and powerful waves are all signs of the sea temperature rising – a result of climate change.

Dr. Ayana Elizabeth Johnson, a marine biologist and founder/CEO of the non-profit Ocean Collectiv tells Soledad that if we don't take steps right now to improve the health of the oceans, we'll see more and more people forced to leave coastal cities and risk becoming climate change refugees.

Plus, we revisit the story of the St. Frances Academy Panthers. This football team from a pre-dominantly African-American Catholic High School in Baltimore has gone from winless to national champions. Their success is due in large part to their coach. A wealthy hedge fund manager named Biff Poggi, who decided to invest millions into building this powerhouse team and inspiring players to succeed on and off the field. Poggi says the students have overcome many challenges, but there was one challenge no one expected. Many teams in their league refuse to play them. We find out how the St. Frances Panthers have become a league of their own.

Are you ready for a digital detox? Most people spend more than 4 hours a day on their smartphones and very little of that is talking. Instead we spend time on social media, playing games, and watching videos. If you want to take back control, Georgetown Professor Cal Newport can help. He joins Soledad to discuss his new book, Digital Minimalism and offers a plan on how to use technology intentionally. Professor Newport says it will not only make you happier but could also make you more successful.

In our weekly segment “we are paying attention even if your too busy” after decades of decline, the Centers of Disease Control say more and more teens are now taking up tobacco. More than a million teens took up smoking last year. The CDC blames the popularity of e-cigarettes for the vaping epidemic. They say many kinds – and parent – may think vaping isn’t that bad, but a single liquid pod used in e-cigarettes can contain as much nicotine as a pack of cigarettes. The FDA says it’s working with e-cigarette companies to keep their products away from underage teens.

And finally, would you be willing to let someone spy on you if it made you more productive? That’s the premise behind FocusMate, a new website for people who work from home. People sign up and get paired with another user. They agree to share their computer webcam with that user as an accountability tool. The founder describes like having a study partner. Users report it’s “bizarrely effective” but say a downside is that you must get dressed to work from home.

That’s it for this week’s MATTER OF FACT with Soledad O’Brien.

This week we have a special edition of Matter of Fact with Soledad O’Brien from Puerto Rico. When Hurricane Maria made landfall, it left 3,000 dead, caused $100 billion in damages and left most of the island without power for nearly a year. It was the biggest blackout in U.S. history. Now people are looking for their own way to power Puerto Rico. And they’re not waiting on the government’s help. Soledad travels to one of the hardest hit areas, still in recovery, to talk to families like the Corderos and Colons who are relying on the sun. Can their solar power plan really protect them when the next hurricane hits?

Are politics still getting in the way of progress? President Trump has repeatedly clashed with Puerto Rico’s elected leaders over federal assistance, with the White House recently considering diverting disaster relief funds to finance the President’s “border wall.” Soledad sits down with Governor Ricardo Rosello who says it is time for the island to become the 51st state because he’s tired of Puerto Ricans treated like “second class citizens.”

In the wake of Hurricane Maris, Puerto Ricans have found new strength in an old tradition: music. Bomba and Plena, are two of Puerto Rico’s oldest music traditions dating back to the 17th century when African slaves were first brought to the island. Since then, Bomba and plena have been used to express people’s emotions and inspire political change, all while moving Puerto Ricans to dance. After the hurricane, Bomba and Plena once again became an outlet for anger and frustration, but also resiliency. We hit the streets and the dance clubs where this historic beat goes on.

In our weekly segment, “we’re paying attention even if you’re too busy”, even before Hurricane Maria, Puerto Rico was facing an emigration crisis. Driven by debt and later by Hurricane Maria, 530,000 Puerto Ricans have left the island since 2010 and many say they won’t return. Where have they settled? The East Coast, including Florida and New York, have been the most popular destinations.

And finally, have you heard of “Monkey Island?” Just 38 acres, Cayo Santiago, aka “Monkey Island,” may be small, but it’s huge in the field of primatology. That’s because its only residents are a colony of about 1,000 rhesus macaques. Since the 1930’s scientists from universities around the world have flocked to Cay Santiago to study the monkeys. When the hurricane hit, most of the monkey’s survived, but much of the vegetation on the island was wiped out. Since the hurricane, researchers have noticed changes in how the monkeys interact with each other, how they’ve adapted to lack of shelter, and their overall social structure. Scientists say observing how the monkeys are responding to a climate disaster, may teach humans how to respond to similar threats in our own future,

Join Soledad O’Brien from Puerto Rico for a special edition of MATTER OF FACT.

MARCH 10, 2019

This week on Matter of Fact with Soledad O’Brien, some central issues for the 2020 Presidential election are shaping up, with both wings of the parties pushing their own litmus tests. For progressives,

“Medicare for All” is the primary season’s rally cry. Congresswoman Pramila Jayapal (D-Washington) is the chair of the Medicare for All Congressional Caucus. She joins Soledad to outline her proposal for universal healthcare, defend the $33-trillion dollar price tag, and explain why she won’t endorse a Democratic Presidential candidate who doesn’t support “Medicare for All.”

And for conservatives, abortion has become a key focus of President Trump’s re-election campaign. But are scientific facts getting lost in the inflammatory political rhetoric? Soledad breaks down the medical facts with OB/GYN Dr. Jennifer Gunter and finds out if political strategy is working with Republican strategist, Holly Turner.

Plus, Soledad investigates the vanishing of Native American women and girls. Native American women are murdered ten times more than non-Native women. Most of them disappear without a trace, leaving their families searching for justice on their own. It’s a story that has gotten very little national media attention and some of the women whose daughter have vanished, tell us they’ve never spoken out about their anguish before, but are doing so in the hopes of raising awareness of these crimes.

In our weekly segment, “we’re paying attention even if you’re too busy”, a Maryland cross is the center of a Supreme Court battle. The cross was erected to honor local soldiers killed during World War One, but it currently sits on public land. That’s prompted a legal challenge from groups that say the cross violates the Constitution’s Establishment clause. The case is being watched over carefully by other states which have similar monuments. A Supreme Court decision is expected in June.

And finally, has streaming finally killed the video store? After more than 30 years, only one Blockbuster video store is left standing. Perth, Australia announced it is shutting its Blockbuster franchise, which leaves the store in Bend, Oregon as the last one left in the world. The owner says his store has become a bit of a tourist attraction and that he has no plans to go out of business.

That’s it for this week’s MATTER OF FACT with Soledad O’Brien.

MARCH 17, 2019

This week on Matter of Fact with Soledad O’Brien, social media has given anyone with a twitter account the ability to become a political power player but is removing the traditional establishment gatekeepers a good thing? Soledad sits down with Bruce Mehman, Republican Strategist and author of an influential political report, to discuss the good and bad of what he calls the era of “permission less politics.”

Plus, when Elizabeth Warren announced she was running for President, she chose to do it in Lawrence, Massachusetts. The red brick buildings behind her were a reminder of the former mill town’s labor roots. But Lawrence is famous for another reason. It’s New England’s first Minority majority city. We travel to Lawrence for a look at how immigration over the past century has shaped this town’s past, present and future.

And there is a new health threat facing recent veterans from the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. Millions were exposed to toxic smoke from massive open-air burn pits. These pits burned military waste that included everything from lithium batteries to insecticide. Black smoke covered nearby camps and now thousands of veterans are reporting health issues. Soledad speaks to 2 women at the forefront of the fight to raise awareness about the dangers of burn pits. Bonnie Carroll is a presidential medal of freedom winner and founder of TAPS, the Tragedy Assistance Program for Survivors, which supports those dealing with the death of a military family member. Colleen Bowman’s husband Rob was exposed to burn pits when stationed in Iraq. He later died after an 18-month battle with cancer. She says the military needs to do more to address this growing health emergency.

In our weekly segment, “we’re paying attention even if you’re too busy,” America is facing a recycling crisis. For 30 years, America has shipped its recycling waste to China for sorting. But China recently said, “no thanks.” What’s America to do? With American wasting more trash than ever, and our recycling infrastructure outdated, could a landfill tax be heading your way?

And finally, we'll take you to a new exhibit at the Newseum that looks at its key moments in America's gay rights movement. The exhibit, called "Rise Up: Stonewall and the LGBTQ Rights Movement," examines what happened at New York's Stonewall Inn 50 years ago, and how it inspired a movement. Key historical moments include 1978 assassination of Harvey Milk in San Francisco, Congressman Barney Frank's public come out in 1987, and the fight for marriage equality.

That's it for this week's MATTER of FACT with Soledad O'Brien.

This week on Matter of Fact with Soledad O'Brien, the devastating floods in the Midwest are just the latest hardship to hit America's farmers. They've also been struggling with falling commodity prices and rising tariffs, with many losing farms that had been in their families for generations. As a result, farmers aren't just facing a financial crisis but a mental health one as well. Our correspondent, Jessica Gomez visits a small Wisconsin town reeling from one farmer's suicide to find out how they're working together to prevent further tragedies.

Plus, while the attention of climate change has been focused on coastal communities, last week's bomb cyclone that triggered catastrophic flooding along the Missouri and Mississippi rivers, showed the Midwest is also dealing with the impact of climate change. Jim Angel is the former state climatologist for Illinois and tells Soledad that once rare, this type of flooding could become the new normal in the wake of global warning.

And, what's it like being an undocumented immigrant in America? The answer depends on the color of your skin. At least that's what Maeve Higgins says. As an Irish immigrant who overstayed her tourist visa, working as a nanny in New York, Maeve says she never faced any immigration backlash or fear of deportation. Now in the U.S. legally, Maeve is a comedienne and author who writes about her experiences in a new book called The Good Immigrant.

In our weekly segment, "we're paying attention even if you are too busy", it's time to ask the same question that pops up every Presidential election cycle: Why don't we have a popular vote? Colorado became the latest state to sign onto a new pact seeking to bypass the electoral college. We'll look at the history of the electoral college and explain why getting rid of it won't be easy.

And finally, as many of you have heard, Soledad lost her mother, Estela, this week. Estela Marquetti was just a teenager when she left Cuba and arrived in the U.S. where she lived with the Oblate Sisters of Providence in Baltimore. This week we look at the history of the order which is the first Roman Catholic sisterhood established by the descendants of African slaves. And we'll also find out why the Oblate sisters are hoping for a miracle.

That's it for this week's MATTER of FACT with Soledad O'Brien.

This week on Matter of Fact with Soledad O'Brien, March Madness is back, and so is the debate over paying college athletes. A new survey finds more Americans think athletes should be compensated beyond just an academic scholarship, but how do you force the NCAA to change? Ethan Thomas, a former NBA and NCAA basketball star tells Soledad there are more rumblings that college players could go on strike. Will that hit this year's FINAL FOUR?

Plus, several police shootings involve people with some kind of mental disability. It's putting renewed attention on the need for police to receive more training on de-escalation and crisis intervention skills. Our Correspondent Diane Roberts, profiles Jake Edwards, a Maryland teen who is giving police special training inspired by his own personal experience.

And in November, Florida voters approved changing the state constitution to restore voting rights to more than a million former felons. But now, state lawmakers have introduced two new Bills that could put those rights on hold. One of those measures would require those with felony records to pay off court fees before they could vote. Is this a modern-day poll tax? Our Constitutional Law Expert, Jennifer Daskal from American University in Washington, returns to Matter of Fact to breakdown the rules.

In our weekly feature, “we’re paying attention even if you’re too busy”, a new fight over an old issue is heating up in Washington again. We are talking about the Affordable Care Act, a.k.a. Obamacare. The Trump Administration is asking a federal judge to strike down the entire ACA. At the same time, Democrats this week introduced a new measure to strengthen the ACA. Consider this the beginning of a big fight over healthcare ahead of the 2020 election.

And finally, how far would you go for the perfect selfie? Authorities in California say people are going too far to capture the beauty of the State’s Poppy Super Bloom. So many people are trying to capture pictures of the bright orange blooms, they’re trampling all over the delicate wildflowers. It’s gotten so bad, conservationists have launched the hashtag #Don’tDoomTheBloom to remind people to stay on designated trails.

That’s it for this week’s MATTER OF FACT with Soledad O’Brien.

SUMMARY: Officials in the Florida Keys are taking a stand on two sunscreen chemicals that scientists say are hurting the coral reef ecosystem. Last night -- the Key West city commission voted to ban the sale of sunscreens that contain oxy-benzone and octi-noxate. Researchers say the two chemicals cause bleaching, DNA damage and death of the corals. The ban goes into effect in 20-21 -- aimed at protecting the only living coral reef in North America. Last year -- Hawaii became the first state in the country to ban over-the-counter sunscreens that contain the two chemicals.

SUMMARY: Starting in February, people in Deltona will no longer be able to leave their recycling at the curb for pick up. The city has voted to suspend the recycling service because of a tax increase. The Mayor says it would cost more than double what it would cost to put recyclables into a landfill. She says the main problem is that no research proves recycled material is being re-used. Deltona residents called the change disappointing.

SUMMARY: The South Florida student who defended her SAT scores after being accused of cheating -- is dropping her fight. Yesterday -- Kamilah Campbell's attorneys said the high school senior is considering another retake of the SAT. Last month -- Campbell said she believed test administrators held up one of her scores because it was too high of an improvement from her first score of 900. Testing officials said they were investigating because her answers were too similar to other test takers. She has concerned the delay would keep her from applying to colleges and scholarships on time.

SUMMARY: Florida teachers could get a bonus thanks to Governor Ron DeSantis. He wants to give nearly 45-thousand teachers an extra 9-thousand dollars. It's all part of the Governor's plan to help the State retain and recruit teachers. DeSantis wants state lawmakers to set aside 422-million dollars for the program. He also says he wants to eliminate the college entrance exam requirement from the "Best and Brightest" teachers' program.

SUMMARY: A U.S. Senator is proposing that student loans be paid directly from paychecks, just like taxes. Republican Senator Lamar Alexander of Tennessee says here's how it would work...if you lose your job or don't make enough you wouldn't pay anything, and it wouldn't affect your credit score. He also says if you don't like that plan-- you can opt for the existing ten-year loan repayment plan schedule. He believes it will help people pay off student debt faster.

CW18 - WEATHER

DATE: 1/21/2019

NEWSCAST: 7a

LENGTH: :56

SUMMARY: Several emergency shelters opened overnight because of the cold weather. The Coalition for The Homeless of Central Florida in Orlando said it wouldn't turn away anyone looking to escape the cold last night. The shelter activated its cold night plan ... allowing overflow guests to sleep on cots and get a hot dinner and breakfast. Though the temperatures aren't quite freezing, shelter administrators say this cold can still be dangerous. < (**John Hearn/CEO, Coalition for the Homeless of Central Florida**) 02:52-03:07 "It may not be eminent death, you know subject to freezing but it's cold. It can lead to additional sicknesses. When you've been on the streets already you can already be in a weakened condition so cold weather impacts you even more." > Several other shelters across Central Florida opened their doors for the cold weather... including those in Lake, Brevard, and Marion counties. If you'd like to help the Coalition for the Homeless of Central Florida ... they need the basics like underwear and socks.

SUMMARY: The crowd at the NFL's Pro Bowl had to deal with cold and wet weather yesterday in Orlando. Our crews were there as people began to leave as early as half-time during the game between the N-F-C and the A-F-C. This is the second year in a row the weather has put a damper on this game for fans. Both last year and this year, there was heavy rain throughout the game. The difference this year is the cold -- it felt like it was in the 40's. <17:48:45 just from the get go right when we stepped in we went straight into mud...everything has been wet and cold and it hasn't been a good time. (so, you are out of here) I'm out of here; it's half time and I'm out of here.> This is the third year of a three-year contract Orlando had to host the Pro Bowl. Some sports commentators say yesterday's weather might hurt Orlando's chances at getting a new Pro Bowl contract in the future. The A-F-C won the Pro Bowl 26 to 7.

SUMMARY: From Coast to Coast -- the United States is bracing for dangerous winter storms. 105 million people are facing winter weather alerts. Parts of the Pacific Northwest have already seen historic snow fall numbers. Streets have turned into slopes from the Midwest - to the Northeast. The wintry mix of snow or freezing rain is grounding flights - even causing one in Indiana to slip off the runway yesterday. It even snowed in Maui. The worst of the storms is expected to push in this morning.

NEWSCAST: 7a

LENGTH: :27

SUMMARY: That winter weather threat continues from the Northwest to the Northeast. Up to a foot of snow has been reported in parts of Wisconsin and Minnesota. In Chicago - ICICLES were falling from one of the city's skyscrapers! And snow isn't the only concern...lots of areas are dealing with flooding. Forecasters expect the Ohio River to crest above the flood stage in Cincinnati. Right now, that system is moving east - expected to dump up to a foot of snow in New England.

SUMMARY: Today - parts of the United States are cleaning up after bouts of severe weather. A "Bomb Cyclone" slammed the plains and mid-west with heavy winds and snow. Snow, flooding, and violent wind gusts all tracked across different states at once. In Colorado, the snow trapped more than one-thousand drivers on the roadways. In Nebraska, the flood waters left chunks of ice behind. A funnel cloud in Kentucky was caught on camera...just one of several. One First Responder says he got caught up in it. < (Sgt. Ryan Willcutt / McCracken County Sheriff's Office:13-:19) "Spun my car to the side and just kind of put my head down and covered my head and just kind of prayed for the best."> The storm may have contributed to one death. Colorado State Patrol Officer Daniel Groves died after being struck by a vehicle while responding to an emergency.
