DESCRIPTION: BLUE CODE/MIDNIGHT REPORTER: MARIA CELESTE

In Health today: It seems that the possibilities of surviving a heart attack can depend on the time! Researchers in Virginia studied the records of 86,000 adults who experienced a heart attack while in the hospital and found that those who had the heart attack after 11pm had lower survival rates than the others. And those who survived were more likely to have neurological complications. The same result was found for weekends. Experts believe that the cause is due to there being less medical personnel in hospitals at night and on weekends.

DESCRIPTION: BELLY FAT REPORTER: VANESSA HAUC

In Health Today: A new study reveals that a big belly can increase your risk of dementia, something very disturbing considering that 50% of Americans have an excess of belly fat. The researchers who conducted the study in California with thousands of people between 40 and 45 years old, concluded that 16% developed dementia. Even those with a normal weight but with a pronounced belly had higher probabilities of developing dementia although the risks increase by 200% for those who are overweight and have a large belly. Experts have concluded that this proves that belly fat affects the brain.
