46.1	Business & Industry	12pm	4/1/2022	1:29	Queen City News at Noon	A Canadian company, Tiny Mile created Geoffrey, a delivery robot who has come to the Queen City, his first time doing business in the United States. Geoffrey was spotted the first week of March in Plaza Midwood along 11th Street outside of Uptown for testing. Starting next week, businesses can sign up to use Geoffrey as a courier for deliveries within a 3.72 mile radius. Leaders at Tiny Mile say Geoffrey is much cheaper than when restaurants use Uber Eats or DoorDash for delivery. For now, this is a Charlotte only project that businesses can use within their system already designed for local delivery. Tiny Mile's wants to focus on sustainable delivery on a neighborhood level rather than a something on a larger scale.

46.1	Business & Industry	8am	4/4/2022	1:21	Queen City News Now at 8am	A rapidly escalating bird flu outbreak in the U.S. is causing a surge in egg prices. The virus outbreak, the worst in 7 years, is hitting Midwest egg-laying flocks. Prices are being driven higher by the disease's spread and the coming Easter holiday, when demand for eggs is high.
46.1	Government (National)	12pm	4/6/2022	1:34	Queen City News at Noon	Senate Republicans argue they can't support funding more efforts to combat COVID-19 while lifting pandemic immigration restrictions. Missouri Senator Roy Blunt and the rest of his GOP colleagues blocked Democrats' attempt to begin debate on a $10 billion Covid compromise, over a Trump-era policy that allows authorities to immediately expel asylum seekers and migrants for public health reasons. At least 10 Republicans in the 50-50 split Senate would have to support the additional Covid funds. While some Democrats indicated they may be on board with tying Title 42 to the bill,

						Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer shot down the idea. Title 42 has been harder to justify as other pandemic restrictions have eased. The CDC announced earlier this month that it would lift the ban in May. Administration officials have warned the government can no longer fund testing and treatments for people without insurance, and money is also running low for boosters and vaccines focused on specific variants.
46.1	Government (National)	12pm	4/8/2022	1:27	Queen City News at Noon	The nation's first Black female vice president called it an honor to preside over Thursday's Senate vote to confirm the first Black female Supreme Court justice, Ketanji Brown Jackson. Three Republicans voted to confirm Jackson.

Also, it's let to rates rising. Charlotte ranks near the top in the country for this kind of corporate buy-up. Outside investors with corporate backing come in and offer cash for homes, in some cases, an entire neighborhood. Then, those properties are rented out. It's been a problem for a while now. Some neighborhoods are starting to take a stand with HOA rules limiting rentals - something experts believe may wind up happening on a wider level. Homeowners unhappy with the practice cite the affect on property values and the potential for blight if the properties are not kept up.

Officials say they're expecting close to 90 absences today. The transit system has been short on drivers all week, leading to delays across the city. CATS leaders are blaming the issue on a labor shortage. They suggest looking at the CATS Pass app for all updates on routes.
