46.1	Health/ Healthcare	12pm	1/6/2022	1:36	FOX 46 News at Noon	There are some key differences between PCR and rapid tests. For the most accurate results, medical experts say go with a PCR test. PCR tests can detect the virus' presence up to 48 hours prior to your symptom onset. Rapid testing may also be less effective at picking up the spreading Omicron variant. The FDA said antigen tests can still detect the new variant - but data have shown they have reduced sensitivity But rapid tests are still valuable - especially if you are symptomatic. So if you get a rapid test, a positive test at home, you know to self-isolate, you know to seek further testing to get that confirmation. But if a rapid test comes back negative when you're showing symptoms, that's when you need to be skeptical of your results and seek out

Some school officials say the safest place for children is in a school building and they don't want to get in the way of preventing children in-class learning. Last week, over 5400 schools nationwide were without in-person learning.
46.1	Education	12pm	1/14/2022	1:01	Queen City News at Noon	The decision to skip college is becoming more of a popular one among young Americans. According to a report by the National Student Clearing House, college enrollment has dropped 7% since the start of the pandemic, which is 1 million fewer students since 2020. The hardest hit areas are colleges offering associate degrees, followed by four-year colleges.

46.1	Consumer Issues	6am	1/21/2022	1:44	Queen City News at 6am	Before the pandemic, finding movers at the last minute wasn't much of a problem. Now, finding a moving company has become much more problematic. Demand is a lot higher, as is storage space. Moving vendors are requiring a lot more lead time, the last-minute needing things three or four days beforehand doesn't work anymore. People want three to four weeks. Along with the high demand for moves, the trucking industry is facing driver shortages. The American Trucking Association estimates an exodus of about 80,000 drivers last year.
46.1	Education	9am	1/25/2022	1:01	Queen City News Now at 9am	High School diplomas are becoming a little more rare during the pandemic. Education officials across the U.S. say their graduation rates dropped between 1-2%. Experts say low social interaction between students and teachers is a main cause. Decreased motivation, and being forced to take care of other family members are also factors in the drop.

The park will be put in this grassy area near 13th street right next to the city works building. With $150k from the state, the town has been able to greatly expand the skate park's design. The new proposal has a beginner's area as well as other features that skaters asked for. The conversation about a skate park started more than 10 years ago after a middle school student was struck and killed by a car while skating in town. It's all a part of a recreation renaissance going on right now in Belmont. Next to the upcoming skate park, construction has already started on a brand new $13 million community parks and rec building.
46.1	Business & Industry	5am	1/27/2022	1:22	Queen City News at 5am	Local area restaurants are still experiencing many issues due to the pandemic and the tight labor market. Along with food shortages from supply chain problems, many have open positions they can't fill. Some are offering signing bonuses and other perks to attract new employees. Others are focusing on keeping the staff they have by offering better pay. To pay a higher wage, many are adding a COVID service charge of 15-20% to purchases. Many hesitate to raise prices higher, but feel they need to offer more competitive wages.

46.1	Health/Healthcare	5am	1/30/2022	2:00	Queen City News Now at 5am	Drugmakers raised prices by an average of 6.6% in the first few weeks of this year on cancer, diabetes and other prescription medicines. In all, about 150 drugmakers raised prices on 866 products in the U.S. through January 20th, according to an analysis from RX Savings Solutions, which sells software to help employers and health plans choose the least-expensive medicines. Due to political pressures, companies have been less bold in raising prices.
46.1	Employment	8am	1/30/2022	1:52	Queen City News Now Sunday	Since the start of the pandemic, American workers have quit their jobs in record numbers - and that's impacting the economy and the labor force in various ways. While labor force participation has edged up, it's subdued in among older Americans. In a recent AARP survey of Americans 50+, 21% of them said they retired earlier than they had planned because of the pandemic. Many of those older Americans say they won't return to the labor force and their early retirements are permanent. And AARP says those that have returned aren't going back to the same jobs they had before. A third of them found better pay, 25% said the job had the number of hours that they wanted to work. And about a quarter of them also said that it offered more flexibility like working

In the late 1900s it was illegal for Black Americans to read and write. And during segregation in the 1900s, African Americans were not allowed access into mainstream majority institutions. Several HBCUs were started by the federal government. Others were started by religious leaders (white and African American) and segregationists. Livingstone College in Salisbury was started by members of the AME Zion Church in 1879, as Zion Wesley Institute, originally in Concord. It was later moved from Concord to Salisbury on a plot of land that was once a slave plantation. Livingstone was the site of the first Black Collegiate football game, on the school's front lawn.

The Supreme Court recently took on a similar case with Alabama's voting districts and ruled in favor of the Republican controlled legislature. Lawyers say there are major differences between the two cases. Alabama challengers say their maps violated the Federal Voting Act by potentially suppressing Black voters. Judges found North Carolina lawmakers violated the state constitution by making it difficult for one block of people (in this case, Democrats) to elect their chosen representatives against a near equally sized block of Republican voters.

Black churches especially have successfully pivoted and implemented many changes to better serve their congregations. Churches are especially suited to assist people during the pandemic. First of all the church deals with the spiritual aspects of people and as an extension, the mental aspects of people. Also, many believe it's their responsibility as well to make sure that everybody has food make sure everybody has a roof over their head. Many believe the black church is the most trusted institution in the African American community and with COVID and all its unknowns, trust is in high demand for a community hit hard by COVID.

46.1	Business & Industry	9am	2/16/2022	1:45	Queen City News Now at 9am	Surveys of job seekers usually show that the one thing job seekers care about most in a job opportunity is salary. However, most job postings, or even first interviews don't mention salary, causing a lot of wasted time and effort on both employers and job seekers. ZipRecruiter's Chief Economists say they're starting to see more job postings on their site start to include salary. Other sites are starting to see similar trends. In some states, companies no longer have an option when it comes to disclosing pay. Colorado passed a wage transparency law that went into effect last month. New York City's goes into effect in May. While the trend is expected to shrink the gender pay gap, research shows it could have a negative impact on over-all wages because it puts a damper on the ability to negotiate raises.
46.1	Politics	8am	2/23/2022	1:10	Queen City News Now at 8am	The crisis between Russia and Ukraine is growing ever-more heated. 46.1	Transportation	4am	3/3/2022	1:43	Queen City News Now at 4am	This is a timeline of regular gas prices in North Carolina. Today, we are looking at an average of $3.63/gallon. That's 9 cents more than just 25 hours ago. Last week, prices were just under $3.50. Compare what we are seeing to that of just a year ago, we are paying more than a dollar more at the pump. Analysts say we could see prices hit $5/gallon by summer.
46.1	Health/Healthcare	12pm	3/7/2022	1:48	Queen City News at Noon	A team of researchers from UCSD have released 2 papers they believe identify the origins of COVID-19. Doctoral student Johnathan Pekar says all of the evidence points to the origins of the Corona virus starting at the Huanan Wet Market. Pekar says their research showed 2 people separately getting infected by 2 separate animal contacts at the geographical location of the wet market. Pekar says that casts further doubts on any lab leak. The paper leans on geography and the consistency of humans continuing to transfer the virus to animals and animals back to humans. The 2 papers have yet to be peer reviewed, Pekar says he welcomes the scrutiny.

46.1	Government (Local)	5pm	3/24/2022	1:33	Queen City News at 5pm	As businesses abruptly shut down 2 years ago and struggled to recover once they re-opened, the state stepped in to help. Using federal money, the North Carolina General Assembly tasked the Golden Leaf Foundation with administering about $83 million in loans to small businesses. But State Auditor Beth Wood says once the money went out, it's not clear if the business owners spent it appropriately. Golden Leaf is a non-profit corporation that focuses on rural and economically distressed areas. The organization said they followed the requirements set out in the law and issued more than 1200 loans. But they didn't verify how the businesses used them money because it was not required. The State Auditor has been looking into a variety of programs tied to the pandemic and says there's a recurring issue that actually goes back years. Wood says the state of North Carolina is not prepared for accountability of taxpayer dollars during a crisis.

46.1	Environment	6am	3/28/2022	1:02	Queen City News Now at 6am	Albermarle is hoping to re-open the mine on about 800 acres in Kings Mountain. The company is holding a public meeting today at 7pm at the Kings Mountain Town Hall to try to answer questions from people in the area.
46.1	Crime/Law Enforcement	6pm	3/30/2022	1:02	Queen City News at 6pm	In South Carolina, deputies arrested a man for a murder that happened nearly 24 years ago. Back in 1998, Stephanie Thompson's body was found in the woods in North Charleston. The Sheriff's Office collected DNA in the hopes that it would eventually lead to the suspect. A DNA match was found in the national database connecting police to Charles Edward Goodwin Jr. The Sheriff's Office says they are still investigating to learn exactly what happened.
