TheCity of estimates damage to homes wasmore than 13 million dollars. Of thosewho has losses, 80 percent were withoutflood insurance. Many of them weren't ina designated flood zone. City Hall statesthat the city's response after the stormwas unprecedented. WAVY coveredseveral Chesapeake residents who havenot yet received the money from the Cityand investigates the reasons why. |
| 17      | Community        | 6:00pm | 10/6/17  | 80 seconds  | WAVY News 10 at 6pm | WAVY-TV was on hand to cover the JTWalk for ALS. Over the last 10 years, thewalk has raised millions of dollars. It'sgone to ALS research and projects likeCamp Grommet, a new 70-acrehandicap-accessible adventure camp inthe city so the results are visible. Thisyear the goal is 1.4 million and 2700walkers will help get there.  |

All across Virginia and here inHampton Roads the foster care system isshouldering that burden - working to fixthe problem and create a hopeful future.In Virginia, the number of childrenexposed to drugs in utero increased 21percent from last year. So far this year -more than 1540 babies have been bornaddicted in the Commonwealth - roughlyhalf are in the foster care system. The UpCenter helps place the children. That maynot seem like all that much. But in 2010statewide the number of youth inVirginia's foster care due to parental drugabuse was 497. This year so far thatnumber is 787 children. Experts say theopioid epidemic has increased thatnumber dramatically. Governor TerryMcAuliffe announced that Virginia has |
