Education	Boston-based violist Ashleigh Gordon is the Brattleboro Music Center's inaugural Artist-in-Residence. VPR Classical's Helen Lyons caught up with Gordon learn more about her plans for her two-year residency. The two discussed education, equity, musical reliance, and how those live in Vermont communities. Broadcast during Classical Music with Helen Lyons.	10/29 at 8:30am, 8mins 47 sec.

Education	Timeline is VPR Classical's classical music education feature. In a new series, Timeline explores how the music of underrepresented and marginalized communities informs how we approach music education and performance in Vermont. In this episode: Since the dawn of the Romantic era, composers have used their music as a means to express their individual nationalities and their hopes for their culture. Today, composers are still finding new ways to incorporate their ethnic identity and cultural heritage in the tradition of classical music; as evident in the works and influence of contemporary South African composer Neo Muyanga. Broadcast during Classical Music with Walter Parker, James Stewart, and Helen Lyons.	10/11, 10/13, 10/15 at 5:30p, 10a, and 8:30a; 3 min 40 sec
Education	Timeline is VPR Classical's classical music education feature. In a new series, Timeline explores how the music of underrepresented and marginalized communities informs how we approach music education and performance in Vermont. We continue our series of episodes about African composers with an exploration of the life, music and legacy of Nigerian composer Olatunji Akin Euba. Broadcast during Classical Music with Walter Parker, James Stewart, and Helen Lyons.	10/18, 10/20, 10/22 at 5:30p, 10a, and 8:30a; 3 min 54 sec

Vermont Issues	Last year, the Vermont Symphony Orchestra's long-time music director, Jaime Laredo, stepped down after over 20 years with the orchestra. Now, the VSO has several candidates to fill that position. They'll be coming to Vermont, meeting with the orchestra and the audience, as well as conducting concerts this coming season. The first, conductor, Akiko Fujimoto, is conducting the orchestra's October 30th concert that's taking place at the Flynn Center in Burlington. VPR Classical's James Stewart talked with Fujimoto about the upcoming concert, the future of the VSO and Akiko's passion for musical education. Broadcast during Classical Music with James Stewart, Classical Music with Walter Parker, and Classical Music with Helen Lyons.	10/25, 10/27, 10/29, 4mins 26sec
