the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion.

There are a number of reasons why the number of children in the world is increasing. One of the main reasons is that the number of children who are surviving to the age of 5 has increased significantly in the past few decades. This is due to a number of factors, including improved medical care, better nutrition, and a decrease in the number of children who are dying from preventable diseases.

Another reason why the number of children in the world is increasing is that the number of children who are being born is increasing. This is due to a number of factors, including a decrease in the number of children who are being aborted, and an increase in the number of children who are being born to women who are younger than in the past.

There are a number of other factors that are contributing to the increase in the number of children in the world. These include a decrease in the number of children who are being adopted, and an increase in the number of children who are being born to women who are older than in the past.

The increase in the number of children in the world is a cause for concern. This is because it is putting a strain on the world's resources, and it is increasing the number of children who are living in poverty. It is also increasing the number of children who are being abused and neglected.

There are a number of things that can be done to help reduce the number of children in the world. These include providing better medical care, improving nutrition, and increasing the number of children who are being adopted. It is also important to provide education and training for women, so that they can have more control over their own lives.

The number of children in the world is a complex issue that requires a multi-faceted approach. It is important to understand the reasons why the number of children is increasing, and to take steps to address the underlying causes. Only then can we hope to reduce the number of children in the world and improve the lives of those who are left.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people, and the need to ensure that the health care system is able to meet the needs of older people. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a strategy for the health care system to meet the needs of older people, and the Health Service Research Unit (2000) has set out a research agenda for the health care system to meet the needs of older people.

The Health Service Research Unit (2000) has identified a number of research priorities for the health care system to meet the needs of older people. These include: (1) the need to improve the quality of care for older people; (2) the need to improve the access to health care for older people; (3) the need to improve the health of older people; and (4) the need to improve the lives of older people.
