The large footprint of Latino millennial eligible voters reflects the oversized importance of youth in the U.S.-born Latino population and as the main driver of growth among Latino eligible voters over the next two decades. (The median age among the nation's 35 million U.S.-born Latinos is only 19.) Between 2012 and 2016, about 3.2 million young U.S.-citizen Latinos will have advanced to adulthood and become eligible to vote, according to Pew Research Center projections. ELECTIONS 2016	Noticiero Univision	1/29/2016	5:30 P.M.	1:49	Republican front-runner Donald Trump kept his word, skipping the final GOP presidential debate before the Iowa Caucuses and holding an event that he says raised 6-million dollars for military veterans groups. He was still the talk of the debate on Fox News, the focus of the first question and mentioned by his rival 7 times in the first 10 minutes. Without Trump the other candidates got more exposure, but that might not be such a good thing. While Marco Rubio, Rand Paul and Jeb Bush seemed to come across well, one of the leading candidates in Iowa polling, Ted Cruz, didn't fare so well.

GOVERNMENT	Noticiero Univision	1/7/2016	10:30 P.M.	2:23	President Barack Obama tore into the National Rifle Association on Thursday as he sought support for his actions on gun control, accusing the powerful lobby group of peddling an "imaginary fiction" that he said has distorted the national debate about gun violence. In a prime-time, televised town hall meeting, Obama dismissed what he called a "conspiracy" alleging that the federal government - and Obama in particular - wants to seize all firearms as a precursor to imposing martial law. He blamed that notion on the NRA and like-minded groups that convince its members that "somebody's going to come grab your guns." Obama defended his support for the constitutional right to gun ownership while arguing it was consistent with his efforts to curb mass shootings. He said the NRA refused to acknowledge the government's responsibility to make legal products safer, citing seatbelts and child-proof medicine.

ZIKA	Despierta America	1/27/2016	6:00 A.M.	2:12	The president emphasized the need to accelerate research efforts to make available better diagnostic tests, to develop vaccines and therapeutics, and to ensure that all Americans have information about the Zika virus and steps they can take to better protect themselves from infection," the White House said in a statement. The virus has been linked to brain damage in thousands of babies in Brazil. There is no vaccine or treatment for Zika, a close cousin of dengue and Chikungunya, which causes mild fever and rash.
ZIKA	Noticiero Univision	1/26/2016	10:30 P.M.	2:09	The outbreak of Zika virus in Brazil and other countries has raised concern that the pathogen could start spreading widely in the United States, as well. But federal health officials and other infectious disease specialists say so far that seems unlikely. There are several reasons for Bell's cautious optimism that isolated cases that show up in the U.S. could be contained. The first is that the two species of mosquitoes that could be capable of transmitting the virus, Aedes aegypti and Aedes albopictus, live mostly in the southern, more tropical parts of the U.S. That makes it likely that transmission would be limited primarily to these areas. And for various reasons, the chain of events and conditions the virus needs in order to spread is more easily disrupted in the U.S. than elsewhere.
ZIKA	Noticias Univision 32	3/1/2016	5 & 10 P.M.	1:00	Utah public health officials have received confirmation from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) that a Utah resident has tested positive for the Zika virus. The patient, a child between the ages of two and 10 years, recently traveled to an affected country before returning to Utah. The child exhibited symptoms, including the typical rash, and has not experienced any complications.
