IV. Issue: Disaster Prep/Drought

Program Title: Morning Newscast

Type / Description: With all eyes on Hurricane Harvey, the morning news announcer discussed disaster preparedness efforts in California. Disaster Preparedness experts are advising residents to have a plan and supplies on hand for the "big one." They're advising residents to have enough supplies for their families to survive a week or two with no help from the government. Their advice is to have enough food, water, batteries, flashlights, and medication in a place where you can grab it quickly if you have to evacuate. They also say residents should be up to date on all shots especially tetanus shots in case of cuts or scratches while evacuating - it is less likely to lead to a dangerous infection.
