One of those laws is that a company that has 25 employees or more must pay their employees a minimum of $12 an hour and a company that has less than 25 employees must pay their employees $11 an hour. Segment 2: If a business owner hires a son or daughter, that business owner can legally pay them below the minimum wage because there are other factors as a parent such as providing food, shelter, transportation, etc., that allow for a lower wage. There is a standard of pay for every employee in California except for field workers. Laws are more in favor of the rancher than that of the employee of the rancher. For a standard employee in California, overtime is reached after working 8 hours in one day or more than 40 hours in one week. A field worker must work more than 10 hours in one day or more than 60 hours in one week in order to get over. An employee will receive time and a half once overtime has been reached. Segment 3: If there is a case where an employer is not fairly compensating an employee, then the employee can contact the Department of Fair Employment and Housing and a Labor Commissioner will evaluate the situation. The employee also has the option to hire a lawyer to investigate the situation.
