

Date: April 13, 2007

To: Darlene Lee

---

Fr: Brenda Salgado

Re: Quarterly Report January 1, 2007 to March 31, 2007

Story: Waikoloa after the Quake

Reporter: Guy Hagi

Date: February 6, 2007

We revisit the Waikoloa Elem and the three-story condo building damaged by the October 15, 2006 earthquake. We update repairs on both structures. At the Waikoloa School, students are back in class and everything looks pretty much back to normal. But if you look closely - you can see scars left on the school's walls. Over at the Paniolo condo complex, the building was red tagged right after the quake. Some residents are still waiting for much needed repairs and have been renting elsewhere.

---

Story: Pa'auilo after the Quake

Reporter: Guy Hagi

Date: February 7, 2007

The Big Island's irrigation ditches have endured since the turn of the century, but they couldn't stand up to the 6.7 temblor that shook the Big Island in October 15, 2006. KGMB 9 crew traveled up the Hamakua Coast, through Waimea, to North Kohala to check on local farmer and found that people are still struggling without water.

Page 2
Quarterly Report
January 31, 2007 to March 31, 2007

Story: Aging Software
Reporter: Jim Mendoza

Date: February 8, 2007

Despite the warnings, teenagers continue to get hooked on tobacco. They know what smoking does to their lungs, now they can see what it does to their looks. It's called smoker's face and it's not a pretty site.

---

Story: Sex Abuse inside the House
Reporter: Kim Gennaula

Date: February 21, 2007

Sex assaults on children. We see the scary stories on the news of abductions and sex assaults...and teach our kids to stay away from strangers. But the truth is 85 to 90 percent of all child sex assault happens right in the home and by someone they know and trust. An O'ahu girl shares her story of years of abuse by her stepfather. She finally worked up the courage to turn him in. She shares her story with us.

---