Story: Police in Indiana have literally been put in a hard spot because of surrounding states legalizing marijuana in some form or fashion. They're seeing a lot more of the packaged goods you'd find in Colorado. Basically their point is, until the law changes, we're going to enforce the law. Now, that doesn't mean they are targeting this sort of thing but if they find it during the course of another investigation, they'll still charge people for it.

Story: LMPD's traffic policy changes tomorrow. These new rules came after the city was in an uproar about the stop of an 18 year old back guy who was pulled from his car and handcuffed on the side of the road for 20 minutes while officers searched with a drug dog. The teen had made a wide right turn and said all along he had no drugs or guns. The officers search found nothing. New policies meant to address bias take effect tomorrow. We revisit the new rules and what the public needs to know about them along with how the officers were trained. Surprise, it's a two hour lecture with a power point and Q&A.
