Hear Together	Hear Together: St. Luke's Legacy Center	4/1/23-5/30/23	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 49 times.	90 seconds	St. Luke's Legacy Center Foundation envisions a space to enhance the quality of life for minorities for generations. With three locations, the Foundation was built on everything Maggie Walker represents. From the St. Luke Penny Savings Bank to the St. Luke Harold, Walker was the first woman to charter a bank in the United States. Focusing on the economic advancement of African Americans in the community, St. Luke's Legacy Center Foundation aims to provide a holistic, wrap-around approach to skills within the family unit that community members might not have had access to in the past. The five pillars of health that the Foundation addresses are mental, financial, physical, social-emotional, and community health. We spoke with Corinne WyCarter, CEO and President of the St. Luke Legacy Center Foundation, and Nikki Shaw, CCO and co-founder, for this Hear Together profile. You can listen to the audio link below.

Hear Together	Hear Together: Foxfield Races	4/1/23-6/12/23	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 58 times.	90 seconds	The Foxfield Races have been a part of Albemarle County since 1978, and before that it was an airport strip. From the very beginning, Mrs. Tejeda, the original owner, wanted the property to be a vehicle for community support. She started the races to welcome people from the community to her land and encourage them to give back to local philanthropic, charitable partners. For this Hear Together profile, we spoke with Kelsey Cox, Executive Director of Foxfield Racing. After years of giving back to the community, Foxfield is now a 501(c)3 nonprofit! In 2020, Foxfield worked with property owners and the county to ensure that the 178.65 acres will be conserved and preserved for years to come. Other events on the property, like 4Ks to support medical facilities, continue to follow Mrs. Tejeda's wish of being a vehicle for community support and engaging people throughout the year-Foxfield is no longer just the two iconic steeplechase races, but a community-wide support organization. You can listen to the full segment at the audio link below and learn more on Foxfield's website.
Hear Together	Hear Together: Clever Communities In Action	4/1/23-present	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 82 times.	90 seconds	Clever Communities in Action focuses on the promotion and placement of culturally affirming literature in Title 1 schools in Hampton Roads in order to improve literacy rates, build community, and heal traumas inflicted by systemic racism within the African-American community. Providing youth with stories and characters that represent their own lived experience not only leads to an increased interest in reading, but to better outcomes in learning overall. Clever Communities in Action's programming has expanded to include a L.A.A.W Scholars program, a visiting author series connecting students to African American authors, and more. We spoke with Founder and Executive Director, Starr Armstrong, for this Hear Together profile. Listen at the audio link below.
Hear Together	Hear Together: The Read Center	4/2/23-present	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 74 times.	60 seconds	Most of the time, when people hear about services for literacy they assume it's only for children. The Read Center serves individuals ages eighteen and older who have low level reading skills but want to make a difference in their lives and their family's lives. We spoke with Nausha Brown Chavez, Advocacy Specialist for The Read Center in Richmond, for this Hear Together profile. Having the courage to call is an inspiration. Needing the service and wanting to improve, wanting to fight against the odds, does not mean people should be ashamed. To change the mindsets of people who want to achieve their goals for themselves or for their families, you can make the call to utilize The Read Center's services or volunteer to help better the lives of others. You can listen to the full segment at the audio link below and learn more on The Read Center's website.

Hear Together	Hear Together: Public Housing Association of Residents	6/10/23-present	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 19 times.	90 seconds	People often have a negative image of public housing, but Joy Johnson, chair of the board at PHAR, wants the greater community to get to know the intelligent and hardworking people who work in public housing and reverse the stigma. PHAR stands for Public Housing Association of Residents, a community organization that is made up of and supports residents in Charlottesville. PHAR's mission is to educate and empower low-income residents to protect and improve their communities through collective action. Their organization is working towards the redevelopment of public housing, a positive environment for its residents and a vibrant, resident focused future. By attending conferences and spreading the word, Johnson learned how to transition PHAR from a social club to a city-wide nonprofit organization in 1998. PHAR currently represents 376 households and you can become a member immediately when you sign a housing lease – the organization would be happy to represent you. More information can be found on PHAR's website.
