Peer Recovery	Hear Together: Strength in Peers	4/15/22-11/15/22	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 40 times.	90 seconds	Grounded in lived experience from their peer recovery specialists, Strength in Peers helps those in the community struggling with substance use, mental health, and trauma-related challenges. By centering treatment around each individual's unique situation and needs, they help participants thrive by emphasizing their autonomy and goals. Serving Harrisonburg and Rockingham, Page, and Shenandoah Counties, Strength in Peers provides customized recovery programs, and helps connect individuals to community-based services to help with housing, employment, health care, and other challenges. We spoke with executive director Nicky Fadley for this Hear Together profile. You can listen at the audio link below, and learn more about Strength in Peers on their website.
LGBTQ services	Hear Together: Shenandoah LGBTQ Center	5/22/22-present	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 89 times.	90 seconds	Built on a model of community collaboration, the Shenandoah LGBTQ Center has centered the voices of LGBTQ people in the valley since its inception. From the initial community listening conversations in 2018 came a wide variety of support services, including peer support groups, affirming healthcare referral, a queer resource library, and many more. For this Hear Together profile, we spoke with executive director AnhThu Nguyen, who is committed to expanding the center's support network throughout the Shenandoah Valley, to address the unique challenges faced by LGBTQ people across the communities of the commonwealth. You can listen at the audio link below, and learn more about the Shenandoah LGBTQ Center at their website.
Foster care	Hear Together: UMFS Foster Care	6/8/22-present	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 89 times.	90 seconds	For 120 years, UMFS Foster Care has worked relentlessly to help children, teens, and families thrive in their communities. Their trained staff collaborates with foster parents and families to overcome the challenges of traumatic childhoods to create homes that are safe and welcoming. There are about 4,800 youth in foster care across Virginia, with 1,800 of them open for adoption. Over the past year, they've noticed a 54 percent drop in foster parent approval, and UMFS is working to empower flexible, caring adults who want to serve children but might be unsure of how foster care can work. We spoke with foster parent recruiter Katie Solvig for this Hear Together profile. You can listen at the audio link below and learn more about their services and becoming a foster parent at UMFS.org.
Black history	Hear Together: Jefferson School African American Heritage Center	6/15/22-present	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 87 times.	90 seconds	The Jefferson School is one of two remaining buildings from what was once Vinegar Hill—a 20-acre predominantly Black neighborhood in the heart of Charlottesville that was bulldozed in the '60s after being seized through eminent domain. It started as the only Black school in Charlottesville, only to be decommissioned when schools were desegregated. The alumni of the original school wanted a place that would celebrate the building's history, and by extension the Black history of Charlottesville, and the Jefferson School African American Heritage Center (JSAAHC) opened in 2013. Along with a permanent picture gallery that tells the story of Vinegar Hill, the JSAAHC offers rotating contemporary art exhibitions featuring artists of the diaspora, lectures, a film and theater program, as well as six annual public celebrations. It is also home to the Isabella Gibbons Local History and Digital Humanities Center, which researches the history of Albemarle County and the surrounding region from enslavement through the present. "There is a Vinegar Hill in every single city in America." We spoke with Leslie M. Scott Jones, assistant curator of education and public programs at JSAAHC, for this Hear Together profile. You can listen to the full segment at the audio link below and learn more about the Jefferson School at their website.
Arts	Hear Together: Live Arts	5/3/22-11/28/22	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 54 times.	90 seconds	Powered by more than 1200 volunteers, Live Arts is a nonprofit community theater in downtown Charlottesville that has presented engaging plays and musicals in Central Virginia for more than 30 years. The organization's Pay-What-You-Can offering has been a staple of its programming for decades, as part of an early commitment to making sure that theater is accessible in the community and ensuring that no one is turned away due to inability to pay. In addition to Live Arts' quality productions, they offer year-round education classes and workshops, including teen play-writing and youth summer camps. For this Hear Together profile, we spoke with Executive Director Anne Hunter.
Theater	Hear Together: Hull's Drive In	9/21/22-10/31/22	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 25 times.	90 seconds	As a cultural staple in Virginia, Hull's Drive-In has provided entertainment and a gathering space for the community in Lexington since 1950. When owner Sebert Hull passed away in 1998, local residents rallied together to form Hull's Angels Inc. in order to keep the theatre open, effectively making Hull's Drive-In the nation's first nonprofit, community-owned drive-in. Hull's strives to pay it forward in the community, donating movie night proceeds to a rotating roster of fellow nonprofits, hosting farmer's markets on weekends and serving as a rental space for private events like weddings. We spoke with Lauren Summers, Executive Director of Hull's Angels, for this Hear Together profile.
Parkinson's disease	Hear Together: LiftPD	8/3/22-present	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 87 times.	90 seconds	Made up of medical professionals, student volunteers, and fitness instructors, LiftPD is a nonprofit organization in Richmond that offers free, small-group exercise classes for those living with Parkinson's Disease. What started as a unique concept funded by a Parkinson's Foundation Community Grant has now served over 70 individuals living with Parkinson's (or other forms of Parkinsonism) over the past year, with the help of over 90 volunteers from local VCU professional programs. The program uses high intensity disease-specific exercise training to help participants maintain and improve strength, balance, and mobility. By focusing on the repetition of workouts that target each person's specific needs, LiftPD helps slow disease progression, and in some cases, even regain previously lost function. We spoke with VCU physical therapist, and one of the founding members of LiftPD, Bobby Hand, for this Hear Together profile. You can listen at the audio link below and learn more about LiftPD on their website.

Aired approximately 11 times.	60 seconds	The Community Tax Law Project is a nonprofit in Richmond that helps low to moderate income tax payers throughout Virginia with federal and state income tax issues. If you have't received all three of your stimulus payments from the IRS, it's not too late to claim them. You can still file your 2020 and 2021 federal income tax returns to claim stimulus payments as a credit on your tax return. For more information, you can contact the Community Tax Law Project by telephone at 804-358-5855 or at info@ctlp.org .
Fall Race	Community Connection: Foxfield Racing	8/17/22-10/1/22	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 1 times.	60 seconds	Foxfield Races, located in Albemarle County, recently re-established as a nonprofit. Foxfield welcomes new and returning attendees to their annual Fall Race, happening on Sunday, October 2nd at Foxfield. With large group tent options in the Chalet and South Hill sections, parking spaces on the rail, Parade of Hounds, stick pony races for kids and Children's Tent activities, friends and families will have plenty to do between the steeplechase races. Their fall philanthropic partner is Habitat for Humanity of Greater Charlottesville, whose partnership helps spread awareness of Habitat's mission and work in the community, while proceeds from the Foxfield fall race will go towards Habitat for Humanity's Southwood neighborhood. For more information about Foxfield's fall races on Sunday, October 2nd, you can go to their website.
Arts and Crafts Fall Festival	Community Connection: Crozet Arts and Crafts Festival	8/23/22-10/8/22	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 7 times.	60 seconds	The Crozet Arts and Crafts Festival invites you to bring your whole family out to Crozet Park on Columbus Day Weekend, Saturday, October 8th and Sunday, October 9th, for the 42nd Annual Crozet Fall Arts and Crafts Festival. There will be over 120 artists, live music all weekend including the Farm Use String Band and the Sweet Potatos, food trucks, a kids area, and more. Four legged friends are welcome too. Eye care	Community Connection: Conexus Vision	8/23/22-10/31/22	Throughout the day. Aired approximately 23 times.	60 seconds	Conexus for Children's Vision is a nonprofit in Richmond that aims to remove poor vision as a barrier to a child's success. In Virginia, every child in kindergarten, 3rd, 7th and 10th will receive an eye screening either from their school nursing staff or a partner agency like Conexus. For thousands of children, these vision screenings will serve as the very first sign of a vision issue. In fact, 1 in 4 children have a vision problem significant enough to impact their ability to succeed in a classroom. Studies show that children with uncorrected visual acuity less than 20/20 are three times more likely to fail a grade in school. If you're a parent, teacher, or school support staff, you can make a difference by reviewing the screening results for your child or students and taking the steps needed to ensure that child can be successful; including seeing an eye care professional if recommended. If needed, that pair of glasses can truly change the life of that child! You can find more information on their website, ConexusVision.org .

This year, the General Assembly approved Same Day Registration. Instead of waiting for the registration process, you can register to vote and cast a ballot at the same time when voting early or voting on Election Day. If you are already registered to vote, you can visit vote411.org to verify your registration, find your district and your precinct polling place. To make voting accessible, curbside voting is available for those with mobility issues or those who are 65 and older. If you have trouble reading fine print, machines can enlarge the print and headphones are available if you'd like to have the ballot read to you.
