The Power of Resilience	10/14/20	5:30 PM	60 Mins	Aging in Portland

Tom Tursich, DDS, brings us a message of hope this week when he explains the power of resilience. "Life is a testing place, not a resting place," he says, and then brings the perfect message for living today. There is hope, even in times of civil unrest, raging forest fires, COVID-19, and life's other disappointments. But how do we generate hope? What does it take to get past the onslaught of feeling overwhelmed? The answer is resilience! We may have to bend, but Dr. Tom shows us that we don't have to break. Reaching for resilience from within can result in our bouncing back from whatever life throws our way.

Neil Nathan, MD, joins us to explain why mold toxicity may be the cause of many chronic diseases as we age. In fact, Dr. Nathan literally wrote the book on this subject. When we think of obstacles to aging well, mold toxicity probably isn't at the top of our list. However, Dr. Nathan says there is strong evidence that many of our chronic diseases can be traced to mold toxicity. When traditional medicine is not providing the answers we need, then maybe it's time to turn to the doctor who goes where others fear to tread.
