Establishment of an internship program designed to assist members of the community to acquire skills needed for broadcast employment.

The Tuttle Internship is a paid summer internship in telecommunications and broadcast journalism that enables an outstanding college or university student to spend the summer studying the field full time in a hands-on environment. A number of OPB senior executives actively participate in the reviewing and selection of the Tuttle intern. OPB had one Tuttle intern this summer.

Participation in activities, other than the listed options

- OPB Tour Program – tours are held for groups and individuals, providing information regarding radio and television broadcasting, at their request. This past year we gave 23 tours to a total of 422 guests. Some of the groups included those with a focus on careers and opportunities in the media industry. These groups included:
 - Two sections of a television production class from Portland Community College
 - An international student group from Ngee Ann Polytechnics School of Film and Media in Singapore
 - A group of journalism students from Roosevelt High School
- This year OPB partnered with the International Center for Journalists (ICFJ) and also the State Department to host and provide information to visiting journalists. The International Center for Journalists was established in 1984 as a private, nonprofit organization. The Center helps the news media attain the highest possible standards, fulfill their role as reliable servants of the public, strengthen the independence of the press and broaden news coverage of local and global issues. The Center believes that a professional and well-informed press benefits not only its immediate audience, but people everywhere. For this reason, ICFJ fosters the widest possible exchange of views and information among journalists worldwide and collaborates with newspapers, radio stations, television companies and media assistance organizations in the United States and abroad. Since its establishment, ICFJ has relied on practical attachment programs with U.S. media organizations as one of the most effective ways to train visiting journalists and share American journalistic expertise.
- OPB also partnered with the State Department to provide mini-fellowships for participants in their journalist exchange program. The journalists explore new tools and trends in digital communication, attend the annual conference of the Online News Association, look at different facets of communication and the impact of information technology, and participate in ten-day fellowships with professionally relevant organizations. Professional development is supplemented through an online platform offering social media resources and open online courses, as well as additional trainings on planning, executing, and assessing integrated and effective social media campaigns. To enhance program sustainability and effectiveness, participants will create and implement individual follow-on projects in their home countries. As part of our efforts with both the State Department and also the ICFJ, this year OPB has worked with four journalists from the following countries: Guatemala, Egypt, Russia and Latvia.
- OPB Open House – This community event is held annually, opening television and radio studios, providing information about OPB to all who wish to come. The OPB Open House includes opportunities to talk to a variety of staff about careers in broadcasting.
