WOMEN, VIOLENCE, AND FICTION IN MEXICO

A Serious Problem of Yesterday,
Today, and Tomorrow: Violence
Against Women in Mexican Literature

Location: UTPB Library Lecture Hall 002

Day: March 30, 2021

Time: 6:00pm-7:30pm

Address:

University of Texas Permian Basin
4901 E University Blv.
Odessa, TX 79762

Contact:

Antonio Moreno, moreno\_j@utpb.edu

March 29, 2021 Monday

Writing Workshop (Open to the Public): How to Write Effective Book Reviews?

March 30, 2021 Tuesday

Keynote Talk

Featured
Speaker:
Geney
Beltrán Félix

An increase of 136.1% femicides is seen in Mexico from 2015 to 2019. This Mexican society problem has gotten stronger, and has been affecting hundreds of women across the nation. The approach to such a great issue would promote a greater understanding of the political and social struggles that have more broadly included women in the historical development of the country, and that have recently led to the emergence of the "Me Too" Movement, with reports of abusive behavior in the literary union and protests in the most populated cities. With the purpose of addressing such a complex and current issue, I propose a review of how violence (physical, sexual, psychological, and emotional) against women has been represented in various voices of the Mexican narrative of the 20th and 21st centuries.
