What does a family have to endure to create a future for itself? In April 2000, Alex White Plume and his Lakota family planted industrial hemp on the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota after other crops had failed. They put their hopes for a sustainable economy in hemp's hardiness and a booming worldwide demand for its many products, from clothing to food. Although growing hemp, a relative of marijuana, was banned in the U.S., Alex believed that tribal sovereignty, along with hemp's non-psychoactive properties, would protect him. But when federal agents raided the White Plumes' fields, the Lakota Nation was swept into a Byzantine struggle over tribal sovereignty, economic rights and common sense. Director: Suree Towfighnia; producer: Courtney Hermann.

Segment Length: 00:00:01

This program is an illuminating account of events too often relegated to footnotes in U.S. history - the black urban rebellions of the 1960s. Focusing on the six-day Newark, New Jersey, outbreak in mid-July, "Revolution '67" reveals how the disturbance began as spontaneous revolts against poverty and police brutality and ended as fateful milestones in America's struggles over race and economic justice. Voices from across the spectrum - activist Tom Hayden, journalist Bob Herbert, Mayor Sharpe James and other officials, National Guardsmen and Newark citizens - recall lessons as hard-earned then as they have been easy to neglect since. Co-production with Independent Television Service (ITVS) and American Documentary | P.O.V. in association with WSKG. Producer/director: Marylou Tibaldo-Bongiorno.

A California Assemblywoman's personal environmental mission to reduce auto emissions inspired her colleagues to act and other states to follow suit. Supported by favorable federal court decisions, encouraged by Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger, and armed with new laws, her state is now on the cutting edge of efforts to reduce the carbon footprint of everything from American power plants to automobiles. This week NOW investigates not only California's aggressive stance against global warming, but also strong political opposition standing in the way of its expansion. Are California and the Environmental Protection Agency headed for a showdown?

What does a family have to endure to create a future for itself? In April 2000, Alex White Plume and his Lakota family planted industrial hemp on the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota after other crops had failed. They put their hopes for a sustainable economy in hemp's hardiness and a booming worldwide demand for its many products, from clothing to food. Although growing hemp, a relative of marijuana, was banned in the U.S., Alex believed that tribal sovereignty, along with hemp's non-psychoactive properties, would protect him. But when federal agents raided the White Plumes' fields, the Lakota Nation was swept into a Byzantine struggle over tribal sovereignty, economic rights and common sense. Director: Suree Towfighnia; producer: Courtney Hermann.

A public opinion poll from the American Research Group recently reported that more than four in ten Americans -- 45% -- favor impeachment hearings for President Bush and more than half -- 54% -- favored impeachment for Vice President Cheney. Unhappiness about the war in Iraq isn't the only cause of the unsettled feelings of the electorate. Recent events like President Bush's pardoning of Scooter Libby, the refusal of Vice President Cheney's office to surrender emails under subpoena to Congress and the President's prohibition of testimony of former White House counsel Harriet E. Miers in front of the House Judiciary Committee have caused unease over claims of "executive privilege." In addition, many of the White House anti-terror initiatives and procedures -- from the status of "enemy combatants" in Guantanamo to warrantless wiretapping -- have come under legal scrutiny in Congress and the courts. Bill Moyers gets perspective on the role of impeachment in American political life from Constitutional scholar Bruce Fein, who wrote the first article of impeachment against President Bill Clinton, and THE NATION's John Nichols, author of THE GENIUS OF IMPEACHMENT.

Edward Osborne Wilson grew up off the gulf coast of Alabama and Florida, becoming fascinated at a very early age by the diversity of the natural world surrounding him. After blinding himself in one eye while fishing at the age of 7, Wilson explains that he no longer was very good at bird-watching, so decided to "turn towards the little things in life," namely ants. At 13, he discovered the first U.S. colony of fire ants near the docks of Mobile, Alabama, well on his way to becoming one of the country's foremost myrmecologists (ant biologists), discovering the ways intricate chemical signals affect colony behavior. While a professor at Harvard, Wilson used his insect expertise as the basis for larger study into animal and human behavior, releasing in 1975, SOCIOBIOLOGY: THE NEW SYNTHESIS, advancing Darwin's study of evolution into the realm of behavior.

For years, the Kalahari Desert can appear to be one of the most barren wastelands on earth. But its swirling hot sands hold unseen treasure - a swarming superabundance of life, brought forth by a brief season of sudden, unpredictable storms. Butterflies, termites and locusts burst forth in staggering numbers. Millions of quelea birds swirl in the sky like smoke. Most impressive is the giant bullfrog - the size of a dinner plate with a voice to match, this amphibian waits out the dry years entombed deep underground.

A California Assemblywoman's personal environmental mission to reduce auto emissions inspired her colleagues to act and other states to follow suit. Supported by favorable federal court decisions, encouraged by Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger, and armed with new laws, her state is now on the cutting edge of efforts to reduce the carbon footprint of everything from American power plants to automobiles. This week NOW investigates not only California's aggressive stance against global warming, but also strong political opposition standing in the way of its expansion. Are California and the Environmental Protection Agency headed for a showdown?

'til The River Runs Clear tells the story of America's environmental flagship, the Clearwater, which has helped effect a remarkable grassroots transformation of the Hudson River over the last four decades. The Clearwater is a traditional wooden sloop that was launched by folk singer Pete Seeger 35 years ago to draw attention to the pollution of the Hudson River. The ship still sails today, serving as a moveable classroom, laboratory and stage. The program interweaves scenes of daily life on the sloop with stories about its exciting history, and examines several pressing environmental issues.

What does a family have to endure to create a future for itself? In April 2000, Alex White Plume and his Lakota family planted industrial hemp on the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota after other crops had failed. They put their hopes for a sustainable economy in hemp's hardiness and a booming worldwide demand for its many products, from clothing to food. Although growing hemp, a relative of marijuana, was banned in the U.S., Alex believed that tribal sovereignty, along with hemp's non-psychoactive properties, would protect him. But when federal agents raided the White Plumes' fields, the Lakota Nation was swept into a Byzantine struggle over tribal sovereignty, economic rights and common sense. Director: Suree Towfighnia; producer: Courtney Hermann.

This program is an illuminating account of events too often relegated to footnotes in U.S. history - the black urban rebellions of the 1960s. Focusing on the six-day Newark, New Jersey, outbreak in mid-July, "Revolution '67" reveals how the disturbance began as spontaneous revolts against poverty and police brutality and ended as fateful milestones in America's struggles over race and economic justice. Voices from across the spectrum - activist Tom Hayden, journalist Bob Herbert, Mayor Sharpe James and other officials, National Guardsmen and Newark citizens - recall lessons as hard-earned then as they have been easy to neglect since. Co-production with Independent Television Service (ITVS) and American Documentary | P.O.V. in association with WSKG. Producer/director: Marylou Tibaldo-Bongiorno.

A public opinion poll from the American Research Group recently reported that more than four in ten Americans -- 45% -- favor impeachment hearings for President Bush and more than half -- 54% -- favored impeachment for Vice President Cheney. Unhappiness about the war in Iraq isn't the only cause of the unsettled feelings of the electorate. Recent events like President Bush's pardoning of Scooter Libby, the refusal of Vice President Cheney's office to surrender emails under subpoena to Congress and the President's prohibition of testimony of former White House counsel Harriet E. Miers in front of the House Judiciary Committee have caused unease over claims of "executive privilege." In addition, many of the White House anti-terror initiatives and procedures -- from the status of "enemy combatants" in Guantanamo to warrantless wiretapping -- have come under legal scrutiny in Congress and the courts. Bill Moyers gets perspective on the role of impeachment in American political life from Constitutional scholar Bruce Fein, who wrote the first article of impeachment against President Bill Clinton, and THE NATION's John Nichols, author of THE GENIUS OF IMPEACHMENT.

Welcome to Colorado and the Annual Aspen Ideas Festival. The 2008 elections are off to a roaring start. Our political roundtable looks at the state of the campaign tonight on "Washington Week." Eighteen candidates running for president, all fighting to get to this. But first they have to raise the millions. Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA): (From tape.) "You're going to have to do what's necessary." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL): (From tape.) "We've got 250,000 people who have donated to our campaign." And they have to survive the debates. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ): (From tape.) "I don't want to be president of a failed nation." And the campaign trail. Sen. John Edwards (D-NC): (From tape.) "It's time for a different kind of leadership in this country." And YouTube. Is this any way to elect a president? President Bill Clinton: (From tape.) "No onion rings?" Sen. Hillary Clinton: (From tape.) "I'm looking out for you." We ask that question tonight to four of the nation's top reporters: Dan Balz of the "Washington Post," John Dickerson of "Slate" magazine, Martha Raddatz of "ABC News," and Alexis Simendinger of "National Journal."

Talk about Murphy's Law, on Iraq policy and for John McCain almost nothing went right this week. We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush: Well, I can fully understand why people are tired of the war. The question they have is, can we win it? But the president is resolute, Congress is fractious, and a new report on report on progress in Iraq falls short. Sen. Joseph Biden (D-DE): We continue to send out kids in the middle of a meat-grinder based on a policy that is fundamentally flawed. Sen. Lindsay Graham (R-SC): If you think this war is lost, stop the funding. Bring the troops home with honor. Stop this game of trying to play politics to put Republicans in boxes which will result in people coming back in boxes. The very recipe for political and policy gridlock. What happens next in Iraq? What can happen next? We assess the situation in Washington and on the ground. Plus, the political collapse of Republican senator John McCain: out of money and out of staff. Is he also out of time? Covering these stories this week: Peter Baker of the "Washington Post," Michael Viqueira of NBC News, James Kitfield of "National Journal," and Gloria Borger of "U.S. News and World Report."

Edward Osborne Wilson grew up off the gulf coast of Alabama and Florida, becoming fascinated at a very early age by the diversity of the natural world surrounding him. After blinding himself in one eye while fishing at the age of 7, Wilson explains that he no longer was very good at bird-watching, so decided to "turn towards the little things in life," namely ants. At 13, he discovered the first U.S. colony of fire ants near the docks of Mobile, Alabama, well on his way to becoming one of the country's foremost myrmecologists (ant biologists), discovering the ways intricate chemical signals affect colony behavior. While a professor at Harvard, Wilson used his insect expertise as the basis for larger study into animal and human behavior, releasing in 1975, SOCIOBIOLOGY: THE NEW SYNTHESIS, advancing Darwin's study of evolution into the realm of behavior.

'til The River Runs Clear tells the story of America's environmental flagship, the Clearwater, which has helped effect a remarkable grassroots transformation of the Hudson River over the last four decades. The Clearwater is a traditional wooden sloop that was launched by folk singer Pete Seeger 35 years ago to draw attention to the pollution of the Hudson River. The ship still sails today, serving as a moveable classroom, laboratory and stage. The program interweaves scenes of daily life on the sloop with stories about its exciting history, and examines several pressing environmental issues.

A public opinion poll from the American Research Group recently reported that more than four in ten Americans -- 45% -- favor impeachment hearings for President Bush and more than half -- 54% -- favored impeachment for Vice President Cheney. Unhappiness about the war in Iraq isn't the only cause of the unsettled feelings of the electorate. Recent events like President Bush's pardoning of Scooter Libby, the refusal of Vice President Cheney's office to surrender emails under subpoena to Congress and the President's prohibition of testimony of former White House counsel Harriet E. Miers in front of the House Judiciary Committee have caused unease over claims of "executive privilege." In addition, many of the White House anti-terror initiatives and procedures -- from the status of "enemy combatants" in Guantanamo to warrantless wiretapping -- have come under legal scrutiny in Congress and the courts. Bill Moyers gets perspective on the role of impeachment in American political life from Constitutional scholar Bruce Fein, who wrote the first article of impeachment against President Bill Clinton, and THE NATION's John Nichols, author of THE GENIUS OF IMPEACHMENT.

Talk about Murphy's Law, on Iraq policy and for John McCain almost nothing went right this week. We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush: Well, I can fully understand why people are tired of the war. The question they have is, can we win it? But the president is resolute, Congress is fractious, and a new report on report on progress in Iraq falls short. Sen. Joseph Biden (D-DE): We continue to send out kids in the middle of a meat-grinder based on a policy that is fundamentally flawed. Sen. Lindsay Graham (R-SC): If you think this war is lost, stop the funding. Bring the troops home with honor. Stop this game of trying to play politics to put Republicans in boxes which will result in people coming back in boxes. The very recipe for political and policy gridlock. What happens next in Iraq? What can happen next? We assess the situation in Washington and on the ground. Plus, the political collapse of Republican senator John McCain: out of money and out of staff. Is he also out of time? Covering these stories this week: Peter Baker of the "Washington Post," Michael Viqueira of NBC News, James Kitfield of "National Journal," and Gloria Borger of "U.S. News and World Report."

T. REX BLOOD?: All we know about dinosaurs comes from fossils. Thanks to paleobiologist Mary Schweitzer, these old bones are telling us more than ever. Schweitzer defied the long-held belief that it was fruitless to search for preserved soft tissues in dinosaur remains. Most experts thought that such structures would have disappeared long ago, but Schweitzer has found evidence of delicate structures such as blood vessels and red blood cells that miraculously survived for millions of years. Recently she examined one cross-section of 68-million-year-old bone and confidently announced: What we have here is a pregnant Tyrannosaurus rex!

EPIGENETICS: Once nurture seemed clearly distinct from nature. Now it appears that our diets and lifestyles literally change the expression of our genes. How? By influencing a vast network of chemical switches inside our cells. Called collectively the epigenome, the switches turn genes on and off and may account for the fact that identical twins grow less identical as they age. This new understanding may give us potent new medical therapies and even cures, because many diseases now appear to stem from errors in the epigenome, and such epigenetic errors seem easier to correct than genetic ones. Epigenetic cancer therapy, for example, already seems to be yielding stunning results.

KRYPTOS: Get out your pencils: the most mysterious of all codes in the most clandestine of all places has yet to be fully broken. "Kryptos," a coded sculpture in the courtyard of CIA headquarters in Langley, Virginia, contains a long string of seemingly nonsensical letters that conceal a message devised by sculptor James Sanborn. Correspondent and supersleuth Chad Cohen gets cracking, covering the cipher techniques used by Sanborn and the success of amateur code breaker Jim Gillogly at reading portions of the text. The deciphered sections include a poem, a reference to something buried on CIA grounds, and an extract from an eyewitness report of the discovery of King Tut's tomb. But the beguiling last bit of the message remains a mystery. Solutions anyone?

PROFILE: ARLIE PETTERS: How does a poor kid from Belize become one of the world's premier researchers in the field of gravitational lensing? Hard work and persistence help, as NOVA reports in its profile of Arlie Petters, Professor of Mathematics and Physics at Duke University. Petters' long journey from the shores of the Caribbean to the cutting edge of mathematical physics took him from Belize to a rough neighborhood in Brooklyn, where he immigrated as a teenager. Petters excelled in high school and then attended Hunter College, where he attracted the attention of the head of a scholarship program for minorities interested in science. A doctorate at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology followed. Throughout his amazing career, Petters has never forgotten his humble origins and continues to help and inspire those back home in Belize.

In the 1990s, at the height of the prison-building boom, a prison opened in rural America every 15 days. "Prison Town, USA" tells the story of Susanville, one California town that tries to resuscitate its economy by building a prison - with unforeseen consequences. Weaving the stories of a laid-off mill worker turned guard, a struggling dairy owner and an inmate's family stranded in Susanville, the film illuminates the legacy of an industry that is transforming rural America. Directors/producers/writers: Katie Galloway and Po Kutchins. Co-production with Independent Television Service (ITVS) and KQED/Truly California.

FERRETS: THE PURSUIT OF EXCELLENCE: Offers an endearing and amusing glimpse at America's most playful, mischievous pets -- not to mention their distinctive owners. At the annual Ferret Buckeye Bash in Columbus, Ohio, the largest and most popular ferret show in the country, hundreds of top breeders, seasoned experts and ferret enthusiasts pamper and parade their pets in a quest for prizes and prestige. FERRETS offers a quirky contrast to the common animal show -- these curious creatures lack the regal air of show cats or the respectable nature of pedigreed dogs -- yet these ferrets are trained, pampered and primed by their doting owners in the hope of taking the top prize in the biggest ferret show in the country.

The story seen in the national press went like this: A decade earlier, a writer eating in a Chinese restaurant in Manhattan spotted a diamondback terrapin turtle in a tank, about to be chopped up for soup. The horrified writer, Richard Ogust, stopped the execution, bought the turtle for 20 bucks and installed her in a tank at home, naming her "The Empress." And that started him on a quest to save the world's endangered turtles, to which he devoted ever more of his time and resources. When the national and international media found him, Ogust was portrayed as a somewhat eccentric figure sharing a Manhattan penthouse with 1,200 turtles, including several species extinct in the wild. It became an "only in New York" moment in the entertainment firmament.

The Senate is set to soon vote on the Matthew Shepard Act, which would expand the coverage of federal hate crimes to include violent attacks against homosexuals. In a NOW web-exclusive interview, Judy Shepard, whose gay son Matthew was beaten to death in 1998, urges passage of the bill. "The America that I grew up believing in says that everyone is equal under the law," Shepard tells NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa. If the Senate approves the measure, which cleared the House in March, President Bush is expected to veto it. "It's very disheartening when the leader of our nation goes on national TV and says that gay people aren't deserving of every equality everyone else [has]," Shepard tells Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa.

Iraqi War Deserter: "We Killed Civilians": Camilo Mejía says civilian deaths and prisoner torture prompted his refusal to return. After serving almost nine months in a military prison for desertion, Camilo Mejía, a veteran of the Iraq conflict, talks to NOW about why he refused to return to the war in a web-exclusive interview. "We put guns to their heads and charged them to make them believe they were about to be executed," Mejía, whom Amnesty International declared a "prisoner of conscience," tells Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa. Besides his firsthand account of prisoner abuse, Mejía also describes military patrols he believed invited insurgent attacks, and the moment that no amount of training could help him prepare for.

The Senate is set to soon vote on the Matthew Shepard Act, which would expand the coverage of federal hate crimes to include violent attacks against homosexuals. In a NOW web-exclusive interview, Judy Shepard, whose gay son Matthew was beaten to death in 1998, urges passage of the bill. "The America that I grew up believing in says that everyone is equal under the law," Shepard tells NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa. If the Senate approves the measure, which cleared the House in March, President Bush is expected to veto it. "It's very disheartening when the leader of our nation goes on national TV and says that gay people aren't deserving of every equality everyone else [has]," Shepard tells Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa.

The Yes Men are Andy Bichlbaum and Mike Bonanno, two impersonators who use satire to bring media attention to issues that otherwise might be overlooked. "We actually see this as a form of journalism. Or perhaps more precisely, the form of collaboration of journalists," explains Bichlbaum in his interview with Bill Moyers. "A lot of the issues that we address journalists want to cover. But...in many situations, editorial control won't let them unless there's a good little hook behind it. And so, we've found a way to create funny spectacles that give journalists the excuse to cover issues." The Yes Men have impersonated representatives from Halliburton, Dow Chemical, Exxon, and others, giving public presentations aimed at exposing what they believe to be discrepancies between how these groups want to be seen and how they really act. They call this process, "identity correction." While some criticize them for deception and call their hijinx unethical, they argue "these kinds of [corporate and political] wrongdoings are at such a scale - they're so vast compared to our white lies that we think it's ethical."

How do we get out of Iraq and if we do, does the terror threat grow or diminish? That plus why money matters on the campaign trail and on Wall Street tonight on "Washington Week." In Washington and Baghdad it's all about the clock. Senator George Voinovich (R-OH) said, "What are you doing to let them know that this time is running out? The time is running out." Republicans want to get out of Iraq. Democrats want to get out of Iraq, but the president and the generals say "give us just a little more time." LIEUTENANT GENERAL ODIERNO said, "I'm hoping that this will continue over the next two to three months, another reason why as we give our assessment in September it's important that we have a bit more time so we can do evaluation of this progress." But is when the right question? What about how and who? Is al Qaeda the threat it's cracked up to be? A new intelligence report says yes, but Iraq may not be the biggest problem. On the campaign trail, we follow the money and the candidates raising it. What do the dollars tell us about what kind of president they would be? Governor Bill Richardson said, "This election should not be on who the biggest celebrity is or who has the most money or who's the biggest rock star, although I'm working on that." And on Wall Street only good news, so why is this guy so down beat? Covering the week, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of The Politico, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

According to the recent National Intelligence Estimate, a collaborative document reflecting the knowledge-base of the U.S. Intelligence community: "Al Qaeda is and will remain the most serious threat to the Homeland, as it's central leadership continues to plan high-impact plots, while pushing others in extreme Sunni communities to mimic its efforts and to supplement its capabilities." And President Bush seemed to echo this sentiment when, at a recent speech in West Virginia about our mission in Iraq, he evoked the name "al Qaeda" 27 times. "Many of the spectacular car bombings and killings you see are as a result of al Qaeda - the very same folks that attacked us on September 11th." But how strong truly is the connection between the central al Qaeda network of Osama bin Laden and al Qaeda in Iraq? Some experts argue that the war on terror, with global al Qaeda at its center as the recent NIE tells us, has little to do with the sectarian war in Iraq, and that our presence there and current tactics have actually worked to bolster al Qaeda's position in the world.

How do we get out of Iraq and if we do, does the terror threat grow or diminish? That plus why money matters on the campaign trail and on Wall Street tonight on "Washington Week." In Washington and Baghdad it's all about the clock. Senator George Voinovich (R-OH) said, "What are you doing to let them know that this time is running out? The time is running out." Republicans want to get out of Iraq. Democrats want to get out of Iraq, but the president and the generals say "give us just a little more time." LIEUTENANT GENERAL ODIERNO said, "I'm hoping that this will continue over the next two to three months, another reason why as we give our assessment in September it's important that we have a bit more time so we can do evaluation of this progress." But is when the right question? What about how and who? Is al Qaeda the threat it's cracked up to be? A new intelligence report says yes, but Iraq may not be the biggest problem. On the campaign trail, we follow the money and the candidates raising it. What do the dollars tell us about what kind of president they would be? Governor Bill Richardson said, "This election should not be on who the biggest celebrity is or who has the most money or who's the biggest rock star, although I'm working on that." And on Wall Street only good news, so why is this guy so down beat? Covering the week, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of The Politico, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

A Civil War enthusiast owns a striking vintage photograph that depicts about 20 older white men in full dress uniform, standing shoulder-to-shoulder with two black men. In Reconstructionist-era America, association between blacks and whites was frequently taboo. So what brought them together for this portrait? Their bond, it turns out, was the Grand Army of the Republic, a remarkable fraternal order organized for war veterans. In fact, integration was actually a GAR standard. The reason? The men had in common an affliction that transcended race -- a struggle with post traumatic stress. History Detectives investigates the first national social group to challenge the color barrier.

A Civil War enthusiast owns a striking vintage photograph that depicts about 20 older white men in full dress uniform, standing shoulder-to-shoulder with two black men. In Reconstructionist-era America, association between blacks and whites was frequently taboo. So what brought them together for this portrait? Their bond, it turns out, was the Grand Army of the Republic, a remarkable fraternal order organized for war veterans. In fact, integration was actually a GAR standard. The reason? The men had in common an affliction that transcended race -- a struggle with post traumatic stress. History Detectives investigates the first national social group to challenge the color barrier.

The Yes Men are Andy Bichlbaum and Mike Bonanno, two impersonators who use satire to bring media attention to issues that otherwise might be overlooked. "We actually see this as a form of journalism. Or perhaps more precisely, the form of collaboration of journalists," explains Bichlbaum in his interview with Bill Moyers. "A lot of the issues that we address journalists want to cover. But...in many situations, editorial control won't let them unless there's a good little hook behind it. And so, we've found a way to create funny spectacles that give journalists the excuse to cover issues." The Yes Men have impersonated representatives from Halliburton, Dow Chemical, Exxon, and others, giving public presentations aimed at exposing what they believe to be discrepancies between how these groups want to be seen and how they really act. They call this process, "identity correction." While some criticize them for deception and call their hijinx unethical, they argue "these kinds of [corporate and political] wrongdoings are at such a scale - they're so vast compared to our white lies that we think it's ethical."

According to the recent National Intelligence Estimate, a collaborative document reflecting the knowledge-base of the U.S. Intelligence community: "Al Qaeda is and will remain the most serious threat to the Homeland, as it's central leadership continues to plan high-impact plots, while pushing others in extreme Sunni communities to mimic its efforts and to supplement its capabilities." And President Bush seemed to echo this sentiment when, at a recent speech in West Virginia about our mission in Iraq, he evoked the name "al Qaeda" 27 times. "Many of the spectacular car bombings and killings you see are as a result of al Qaeda - the very same folks that attacked us on September 11th." But how strong truly is the connection between the central al Qaeda network of Osama bin Laden and al Qaeda in Iraq? Iraqi War Deserter: "We Killed Civilians": Camilo Mejía says civilian deaths and prisoner torture prompted his refusal to return. After serving almost nine months in a military prison for desertion, Camilo Mejía, a veteran of the Iraq conflict, talks to NOW about why he refused to return to the war in a web-exclusive interview. "We put guns to their heads and charged them to make them believe they were about to be executed," Mejía, whom Amnesty International declared a "prisoner of conscience," tells Senior Correspondent María Hinojosa. Besides his firsthand account of prisoner abuse, Mejía also describes military patrols he believed invited insurgent attacks, and the moment that no amount of training could help him prepare for.

How do we get out of Iraq and if we do, does the terror threat grow or diminish? That plus why money matters on the campaign trail and on Wall Street tonight on "Washington Week." In Washington and Baghdad it's all about the clock. Senator George Voinovich (R-OH) said, "What are you doing to let them know that this time is running out? The time is running out." Republicans want to get out of Iraq. Democrats want to get out of Iraq, but the president and the generals say "give us just a little more time." LIEUTENANT GENERAL ODIERNO said, "I'm hoping that this will continue over the next two to three months, another reason why as we give our assessment in September it's important that we have a bit more time so we can do evaluation of this progress." But is when the right question? What about how and who? Is al Qaeda the threat it's cracked up to be? A new intelligence report says yes, but Iraq may not be the biggest problem. On the campaign trail, we follow the money and the candidates raising it. What do the dollars tell us about what kind of president they would be? Governor Bill Richardson said, "This election should not be on who the biggest celebrity is or who has the most money or who's the biggest rock star, although I'm working on that." And on Wall Street only good news, so why is this guy so down beat? Covering the week, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of The Politico, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.
