Serving the Underprivileged, Race relations, Minority issues	10/3/21 Local Programming Volunteer opportunities are here for you with The Common Acre's Block to Block program. The Common Acre restores relationships between people and the land through ecology, agriculture, and art. The Common Acre radically reimagines public space to reconnect humans with nature through the medium of food. How should we treat public spaces? At our best, we are like pollinators, living in service of fruiting and flowering things. With a pollinator lens, we consider systems change from root to bloom, and seek to restore a living food system that feeds our minds and nourishes our communities.	Steven Dorsch Field Operations The Common Acre	7am 16:00
Health, Women's Health	10/3/21 Local Programming Six days after giving birth to a beautiful baby girl, 34-year-old Andrea suffered a stroke. The cause? High blood pressure during pregnancy. Recovery has been a challenging journey as Andrea has had to re-learn how to walk, read and write. After spending over 43 hours in the hospital and many weeks in rehab, she celebrated by running her first 5K at the Puget Sound Heart and Stroke Walk in 2020. "I've come so far," she said. "I've made such a big progress."	Seattle Stroke Survivor Andrea	7:16m 14:00
