As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The murder of Dr. George Tiller has reignited the abortion debate, and raised the question: should violence against medical doctors who perform abortions be viewed and prosecuted as domestic terrorism? This week NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with two of the remaining handful of doctors who publicly acknowledge performing late abortions, including Leroy Carhart, a fellow doctor in Tiller's Wichita, Kansas clinic. Carhart discusses his vow to carry on Tiller's mission and what it's like for him and his family to live as "targets". The show also investigates claims that law enforcement dropped the ball when it came to stopping Tiller's alleged murderer, Scott Roeder. Hinojosa travels to Colorado as well to talk with Dr. Warren Hern, another late abortion provider who says he's been living "under siege" for decades. Dr. Hern works behind four layers of bulletproof windows and is now under round-the-clock federal protection. NOW goes into the eye of the abortion rights storm to see how Tiller's killing and its ramifications are impacting doctors, free speech, and a civilized society.

Episode three of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia relates how land grabbers poisoned a region that was once renowned mainly for its restful spas and noble character. When the chaos of the Civil War tore apart the agrarian way of life, Appalachian society was left ripe for plunder. Speculators spread through every timber-rich and mineral-infused hollow, making deals. Mysterious courthouse fires destroyed property records, and consolidators evicted people who couldn't prove ownership of their land. As ancient trees were felled and coal was dug to fuel the nation's booming economy, Appalachia's land, people, wildlife and culture were changed forever.

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

Seventy-five percent of the world's fresh water is stored in glaciers, but scientists predict climate change will cause some of the world's largest glaciers to completely melt by 2030. What effect will this have on our daily lives? With global warming falling low on a national list of American concerns, it's time to take a deeper look at what could be a global calamity in the making. This week, in a special one-hour NOW on PBS, David Brancaccio and environmentalist Conrad Anker -- one of the world's leading high altitude climbers -- trek to the Gangotri Glacier in the Himalayan Mountains, the source of the Ganges River, to witness the great melt and its dire consequences first-hand. The two also visit Montana's Glacier National Park to see the striking effects of global warming closer to home and learn how melting glaciers across the globe can have a direct impact on food prices in the U.S. Along the way, Brancaccio and Anker talk to both scientists and swamis, bathe in the River Ganges, view a water shortage calamity in India, and come as close as any human can to seeing the tangible costs of climate change. "We can't take climate change and put it on the back burner," warns Anker. "If we don't address climate change, we won't be around as humans."

Airdate: 4/6/2009 9:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Documentary
In 1926, just a few months before her death, Will Rogers described Annie Oakley as "the greatest woman rifle shot the world has ever produced." As the star attraction of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, she thrilled audiences around the world with her daring shooting feats and her act helped fuel turn-of-the-century nostalgia for the vanished, mythical world of the American West. Over time she became an American legend -- the loud, brassy, cocksure shooter celebrated in the musical "Annie Get Your Gun." But that legend had little to do with the real Annie Oakley. Although famous as a Western sharpshooter, Oakley lived her entire life east of the Mississippi. A champion in a man's sport, she forever changed ideas about the abilities of women, yet she opposed female suffrage. Her fame and fortune came from her skill with guns, yet she was a Quaker. This probing AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production examines the dramatic life of a uniquely American icon whose complex character manifested many of the paradoxes of the nation.

In March of 1621, in what is now southeastern Massachusetts, Massasoit (actor Marcos Akiaten, Chiricauha Apache), the leading sachem of the Wampanoag, sat down to negotiate with a ragged group of English colonists. Hungry, dirty and sick, the pale-skinned foreigners were struggling to stay alive; they were in desperate need of Native help. Massasoit faced problems of his own. His people had lately been ravaged by unexplained sickness, leaving them vulnerable to the rival Narragansett to the west. The Wampanoag sachem calculated that a tactical alliance with the foreigners would provide a way to protect his people and hold his enemies at bay. He agreed to give the English the help they needed. A half-century later, as a brutal war flared between the English colonists and a confederation of New England Indians, the wisdom of Massasoit's diplomatic gamble seemed less clear. Five decades of English immigration, mistreatment, lethal epidemics and widespread environmental degradation had brought the Indians and their way of life to the brink of disaster. Led by Metacom, Massasoit's son (actor Annowon Weeden, Mashpee Wampanoag), the Wampanoag and their Native allies fought back against the English, nearly pushing them into the sea.

Length: 90 Airdate: 4/20/2009 9:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

In the spring of 1805, Tenskwatawa (actor Billy Merasty, Cree First Nation), a Shawnee, fell into a trance so deep that those around him believed he had died. When he finally stirred, the young prophet claimed to have met the Master of Life. He told those who crowded around that the Indians were in dire straits because they had adopted white culture and rejected traditional spiritual ways. For several years, Tenskwatawa's spiritual revival movement drew thousands of adherents from tribes across the Midwest. His elder brother, Tecumseh (actor Michael Greyeyes, Plains Cree), would harness the energies of that renewal to create an unprecedented military and political confederacy of often antagonistic tribes, all committed to stopping white westward expansion. The brothers came closer than anyone since to creating an Indian nation that would exist alongside and separate from the United States. The dream of an independent Indian state may have died at the Battle of the Thames, when Tecumseh was killed fighting alongside his British allies, but the great Shawnee warrior would live on as a potent symbol of Native pride and pan-Indian identity.

Length: 120 Airdate: 4/9/2009 1:00 AM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

Filmmaker Scott Hicks -- director of the 1996 award-winning feature film "Shine" and the recent "No Reservations," for which Philip Glass wrote the score -- documents an extremely eventful, but apparently typical, year in the career and personal life of the distinguished composer, as he interacts with family, friends and colleagues. Romping with his young children on the Nova Scotia coastline, cooking pizza and deconstructing philosophy in the farmhouse kitchen, creating new works in his cluttered Baltimore studio or collaborating with Chuck Close, Ravi Shankar and Woody Allen, this film follows Glass across three continents -- from his annual ride on the Coney Island "Cyclone" in Brooklyn, to the world premiere of his new opera in Germany and in performance with a didgeridoo virtuoso in Australia. It is an intimate, often vérité, portrait of artistic sensibility.

Series Title: Appalachia: A History of Mountains and People Episode Title: Time and Terrain

Length: 60 Airdate: 4/10/2009 2:00 AM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

The first hour of this series about the deep and surprising history of Appalachia explores the region's unique mosaic of plant, animal and early human life. As Pulitzer Prize-winning scientist E.O. Wilson notes, "A history of a region includes not just the people, but the creatures and the living environment." Geology is destiny. The Appalachian Mountains hold their treasure of mineral and timber wealth because they were born of a primeval ocean. Early North Americans settled here because giant mammals gave them vast food supplies. Over thousands of years, they formed highly sophisticated cultures, until 1540 when Hernando de Soto ruined them in his violent, single-minded hunt for gold. The tribes that remained after de Soto's brutal swath adopted the gun as their chief technology. England, Spain and France would court these skilled hunters and warriors as allies in the early struggle to dominate America. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

The second part of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia traces the story of the region from the rumblings of Revolutionary War through Andrew Jackson's forced relocation of the Cherokee people in 1831. Appalachia's early settlers hand-cut trails through steep terrain covered with enormous trees and teeming with wild animals. They weren't about to take orders from Redcoats. When a few hundred angry mountain men handily beat the regiment of a pompous British major, they changed the course of history. Contrary to current stereotypes, the colonists saw Appalachia as a source of great wealth. Her riches seduced early Americans, from the legendary adventurer Daniel Boone to naturalist William Bartram to a young land surveyor named George Washington. The series shows how Native peoples valiantly resisted expulsion from their lands and fought the extinction of their culture -- from the Wampanoags of New England in the 1600s who used their alliance with the English to weaken rival tribes, to the bold new leaders of the 1970s who harnessed the momentum of the civil rights movement to forge a pan-Indian identity. WE SHALL REMAIN represents an unprecedented collaboration between Native and non-Native filmmakers and involves Native advisors and scholars at all levels of the project.

Length: 90 Airdate: 4/27/2009 9:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

The Cherokee would call it Nu-No-Du-Na Tlo-Hi-Lu, "The Trail Where They Cried." On May 26, 1838, federal troops forced thousands of Cherokee from their homes in the southeastern United States, driving them toward Indian Territory in eastern Oklahoma. More than 4,000 died of disease and starvation along the way. For years, the Cherokee had resisted removal from their land in every way they knew. Convinced that white America rejected Native Americans because they were "savages," Cherokee leaders established a republic with a European-style legislature and legal system. Many Cherokee became Christian and adopted westernized education for their children. Their visionary principal chief, John Ross (actor Freddy Douglas), would even take the Cherokee case to the Supreme Court, where he won crucial recognition of tribal sovereignty. The Supreme Court ruling proved no deterrent to President Andrew Jackson's demands that the Cherokee leave their ancestral lands. A complex debate divided the Cherokee Nation, with Chief Ross urging the Cherokee to stay and Major Ridge (actor Wes Studi, Cherokee), a respected tribal leader, urging the tribe to move west and rebuild, going so far as to sign a removal treaty himself without the authority to do so. Though in the end the Cherokees' embrace of "civilization" and their landmark legal victory proved no match for white land hunger and military power, the Cherokee people were able, with characteristic ingenuity, to build a new life in Oklahoma, far from the land that had sustained them for generations.

Length: 90 Airdate: 5/11/2009 9:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

In February of 1909, the indomitable Chiricahua Apache warrior and war shaman Geronimo lay on his deathbed. He summoned his nephew to his side, whispering, "I should never have surrendered. I should have fought until I was the last man alive." It was an admission of regret from a man whose insistent pursuit of military resistance in the face of overwhelming odds confounded not only his Mexican and American enemies, but many of his fellow Apaches as well. Born around 1820, Geronimo grew into a leading warrior and healer. But after his tribe was relocated to an Arizona reservation in 1872, he became a focus of the fury of terrified white settlers and of the growing tensions that divided Apaches struggling to survive under almost unendurable pressures. To angry whites, Geronimo became the archfiend, perpetrator of unspeakable savage cruelties. To his supporters, he remained the embodiment of proud resistance, the upholder of the old Chiricahua ways. To other Apaches, especially those who had come to see the white man's path as the only viable road, Geronimo was a stubborn troublemaker, unbalanced by his unquenchable thirst for vengeance, whose actions needlessly brought the enemy's wrath down on his own people. At a time when surrender to the reservation and acceptance of the white man's civilization seemed to be the Indians' only realistic options, Geronimo and his tiny band of Chiricahuas fought on. The final holdouts, they became the last Native-American fighting force to capitulate formally to the government of the United States.

The second part of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia traces the story of the region from the rumblings of Revolutionary War through Andrew Jackson's forced relocation of the Cherokee people in 1831. Appalachia's early settlers hand-cut trails through steep terrain covered with enormous trees and teeming with wild animals. They weren't about to take orders from Redcoats. When a few hundred angry mountain men handily beat the regiment of a pompous British major, they changed the course of history. Contrary to current stereotypes, the colonists saw Appalachia as a source of great wealth. Her riches seduced early Americans, from the legendary adventurer Daniel Boone to naturalist William Bartram to a young land surveyor named George Washington. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Episode three of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia relates how land grabbers poisoned a region that was once renowned mainly for its restful spas and noble character. When the chaos of the Civil War tore apart the agrarian way of life, Appalachian society was left ripe for plunder. Speculators spread through every timber-rich and mineral-infused hollow, making deals. Mysterious courthouse fires destroyed property records, and consolidators evicted people who couldn't prove ownership of their land. As ancient trees were felled and coal was dug to fuel the nation's booming economy, Appalachia's land, people, wildlife and culture were changed forever.

The final episode of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia sparks both heartbreak and hope for the region's ransacked mountain ecosystem. Early 20th-century mineral barons ruled Appalachia with an iron fist. Company spies tracked miners' every move. If they found a man's union card, he would be fired, even killed. Inspired by a brave little old lady who talked like a preacher and cursed like a sailor, mineworkers organized and demanded better treatment. The dams of the Tennessee Valley Authority drowned ancestral homesteads, but the project eliminated abject poverty for thousands. An invasive fungus has wiped out the majestic American chestnut tree, but its roots refuse to die. Strip mining has torn the tops off mountains, but a new wave of activists, writers, musicians, scientists and nature-lovers is expanding the miners' ideas of health and fairness to include the forests, the rivers and the mountains themselves. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

On the night of February 27, 1973, 54 cars rolled, horns blaring, into a small hamlet on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. Within hours, some 200 Oglala Lakota and American Indian Movement (AIM) activists had seized the few major buildings in town and police had cordoned off the area. The occupation of Wounded Knee had begun. Demanding redress for grievances -- some going back more than 100 years -- the protesters captured the world's attention for 71 gripping days. With heavily armed federal troops tightening a cordon around meagerly supplied, cold, hungry Indians, the event invited media comparisons with the massacre of Indian men, women and children at Wounded Knee almost a century earlier. In telling the story of this iconic moment, the final episode of WE SHALL REMAIN examines the broad political and economic forces that led to the emergence of AIM in the late 1960s, as well as the immediate events -- a murder and an apparent miscarriage of justice -- that triggered the takeover. Though the federal government failed to make good on many of the promises that ended the siege, the event succeeded in bringing the desperate conditions of Indian reservation life to the nation's attention. Perhaps even more important, it proved that despite centuries of encroachment, warfare and neglect, Indians remained a vital force in the life of America.

In the summer of 1942, two ace fighter pilots -- one American and one Japanese -- faced off during a dramatic dogfight in the skies over Guadalcanal. Eventually the Japanese pilot shot down the American, who crash landed behind enemy lines but managed to escape before being captured. Using both pilots' comprehensive (but sometimes contradictory) memoirs, and following a forensic expedition to the recently-found American plane, "Dogfight Over Guadalcanal" examines and recreates every anxious second of the WWII showdown over the Pacific, revealing just how evenly matched the two men were and how they both survived, despite serious injuries.

Mark Oliver Everett, better known as E, is the lead singer of U.S. cult band the EELS. What most of his fans don't know is that Mark's father, Hugh Everett III, was one of America's top quantum physicists. In 1957, Hugh Everett came up with a revolutionary theory that predicted the existence of parallel universes. The idea quickly seeped into popular culture, but only recently has it been accepted by mainstream physicists. The film follows the wry and charismatic Mark, who had been estranged from his father, as he travels across America to learn about the father he never knew. It is only by entering the paradoxical world of quantum mechanics that Mark can hope to understand why he was such a stranger to his own father.

"Muhammad Ali: Made in Miami" explores the critical role that Miami played in the evolution of one of the most significant cultural figures of our time: Muhammad Ali (né Cassius Clay). The film chronicles Cassius Clay's arrival in Miami in the fall of 1960 (fresh from earning a gold medal in the Rome Olympics), his life in Overtown -- a neighborhood that was considered "Harlem South" and a vibrant center of black entertainment and commerce -- and his affiliation with the famed Fifth Street Gym in Miami Beach. Over the course of the next few years -- coinciding with the height of the national civil rights movement -- Clay evolved both professionally and politically, piling up victories in the ring and adopting the black separatist teachings of the Nation of Islam. As "Muhammad Ali: Made in Miami" makes clear, it was in this period that Cassius Clay became Muhammad Ali.

Series Title: Fort Niagara: The Struggle for a Continent Length: 30

Airdate: 6/29/2009 2:30 AM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

The story of Fort Niagara is the story of a struggle for a continent. For over 150 years, four nations struggled to control this strategic point at the mouth of the Niagara River, and thus control the critical water artery it protected. But the fort is not only unique for its history, it is unique for its longevity. Visitors to the site today can still explore one of North America's largest collections of original 18th century military architecture-- tangible reminders of the fort's important past. Experience for yourself this exciting story of one of America's most unique historic places. Rare archival footage, expert commentaries and spectacular videography of the fort itself come together in brilliant high definition to create a program that is a must for anyone interested in the story of North America.

PsychoPhone--A couple in Cincinnati acquired a peculiar phonograph at an antiques auction. The machine, labeled "PsychoPhone," included four grooved wax cylinders. The contributors think Thomas Edison invented the PsychoPhone to record messages from the afterlife. As early as the 1870s, Edison and other scientific minds explored psychic phenomena, believing every living being was made of atoms that could "remember" past lives. Did Edison make a machine to unlock the secrets of the dead? HISTORY DETECTIVES host Gwendolyn Wright travels to the Thomas A. Edison Menlo Park museum in New Jersey to find out. War Dog Letter--A World War II collector from Kansas City, Kansas, has a cryptic letter from a soldier to another military man. The soldier explains that military investigators have questioned him about a man named Prestre--specifically about his character and qualifications as a dog trainer. The contributor wants to know why the military was investigating Prestre and what the dogs were being trained to do. The search takes HISTORY DETECTIVES host Tukufu Zuberi to remote Cat Island near Gulfport, Mississippi, and Fort Lee in Virginia. The military put great effort into a new "War Dogs" program during WWII. What went wrong on Cat Island? Pancho Villa Watch Fob--Just before he died, a man gave his neighbors a most unusual gift: a watch fob commemorating Francisco "Pancho" Villa's murderous raid on the border town of Columbus, New Mexico. The man says he was a boy when the raid occurred in 1916, and he and his parents survived by hiding under a train car. The new owners want to know more about this watch fob. Who made it? Did their friend indeed witness this infamous raid? HISTORY DETECTIVES' new guest host, Eduardo Pagan, leads on an expedition that reveals an especially wild chapter of the American West.

Manhattan Project -- A contributor is certain that his father worked on the Manhattan Project during World War II. His father refused to talk about his war assignment, except to say that he sold his patent to the U.S. government for a single dollar. Along with the patent, the contributor has a letter from the Atomic Energy Commission stating that his father's patent had been declassified. Was this invention used to build the atomic bomb? To find out, HISTORY DETECTIVES host Wes Cowan travels to Oak Ridge, Tennessee, and discovers a plan to hide atomic secrets in plain sight. Galleon Shipwreck - A woman in Portland, Oregon, has a large chunk of what she believes is very old beeswax. This 23-pound block, dug up on the northern Oregon coast in the late 1930s, seems to have been deliberately carved with strange markings. For centuries, ships carried beeswax on trade routes from the Far East to the American Pacific Coast. Could this beeswax have been cargo on a legendary ship that foundered more than 300 years ago? And what do those odd markings mean? HISTORY DETECTIVES host Elyse Luray goes to the Bee Lab at Oregon State University to decipher where the beeswax came from and visits an archaeologist in Olympia, Washington, to track which ship may have brought it to the Oregon coast. Creole Poems - A HISTORY DETECTIVES fan from Chicago recently unearthed a French manuscript rolled in a cardboard tube. "Duplessis," his great-grandmother's mother-in-law's surname, is jotted in a margin, and "Rouzan," his grandmother's maiden name, appears at the bottom of another page. No one in the family knows anything about it, but the contributor, who reads a little French, thinks he has a collection of love poems, possibly written to one of his relatives. What is this? And why has his family kept it for 160 years? The questions lead HISTORY DETECTIVES host Gwendolyn Wright to New Orleans and to a piece of family history the contributor had never known.

Episode Title: Nerds, Jerks & Oddballs: Would Ya Hit a Guy with Glasses?

Length: 60 Airdate: 6/24/2009 4:00 AM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

While America, a country of immigrants, has always championed the idea of inclusiveness, the outsider has been a source of constant amusement. Perhaps best epitomized today by characters in such blockbuster Judd Apatow comedies as "The 40 Year-Old Virgin," "Knocked Up" and "Superbad," this episode also looks back at the bespectacled wannabe (Harold Lloyd) and the vain coward (Bob Hope) as the outsiders of their day. Along with pioneering women in comedy like Phyllis Diller and truly zany characters who seem to have arrived from another planet (Jonathan Winters, Andy Kaufman, and Robin Williams), the great social upheaval of the 60s and 70s introduced counter-culture favorites Cheech & Chong, as well as superstar nerds like Woody Allen and "jerks" like Steve Martin--who ultimately became so popular that the idea of the outsider had to be re-cast.

Length: 120 Airdate: 4/9/2009 9:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

Filmmaker Scott Hicks -- director of the 1996 award-winning feature film "Shine" and the recent "No Reservations," for which Philip Glass wrote the score -- documents an extremely eventful, but apparently typical, year in the career and personal life of the distinguished composer, as he interacts with family, friends and colleagues. Romping with his young children on the Nova Scotia coastline, cooking pizza and deconstructing philosophy in the farmhouse kitchen, creating new works in his cluttered Baltimore studio or collaborating with Chuck Close, Ravi Shankar and Woody Allen, this film follows Glass across three continents -- from his annual ride on the Coney Island "Cyclone" in Brooklyn, to the world premiere of his new opera in Germany and in performance with a didgeridoo virtuoso in Australia. It is an intimate, often vérité, portrait of artistic sensibility.

Service: PBS Format: Documentary
TUBA U: BASSO PROFUNDO follows an unusual 22-piece musical ensemble into the recording studio, across the U.S. and onto the stage of renowned Carnegie Hall. Featuring the career of tuba maestro Winston Morris, the compositions of Pulitzer Prize-winning composer Gunther Schuller, a visit to German tuba makers and the 100-member Tubas of Mass Destruction, this is the anatomy of one instrument that speaks to the dedication and discipline shared by players of all instruments. The program examines the value of the individual within the context of the ensemble and assures viewers that some unexpected and unusual things are indeed worthy of a lifetime of commitment. TUBA U dispels assumptions of size, value and ability, addressing prejudice - even if a very quirky one. Filled with "who knew?" moments, the documentary takes a look at the history, physicality and personalities of the tuba.

Throughout his masterful career, Michelangelo glorified the church, etching Catholic ideals into the sculptures and artwork that defined religion for the masses. Now, 500 years after his death, art historian Antonio Forcellino has found evidence of Michelangelo's involvement with a clandestine fellowship trying to reform the Catholic Church from within. The group's radical ideas and accusations of corruption were considered heretical and punishable by death. Michelangelo's involvement put him at dangerous odds with powerful officials who held his livelihood -- and life -- in their hands. "Michelangelo Revealed" paints a stunning new picture of brave religious expression, personal vendettas, careful cover-ups and a most gifted artist desperately trying to reconcile his loyalty to the church with his own personal belief about the road to salvation.

Moving far beyond the stereotypical and exotic images of Suzy Wong and Bruce Lee, such artists as Wayne Wang, Joan Chen, David Henry Hwang, Nancy Kwan and Amy Tan, among many others, share their experiences of being "the other." Often humorous, sometimes maddening, but always inspiring, these storytellers and film clips from more than 90 films -- some dating back to the 1890s -- weave a rich tapestry and complex history.

At America's oldest Mardi Gras -- celebrated each year in Mobile, Alabama -- events remain segregated between white and black residents. "The Order of Myths" looks beneath the surface of pageantry and reveals a complex story about race relations and the ever-present racial divide that persists in America. By Margaret Brown. A short, "Bi-Racial Hair," a satirical look at the racial tension young African Americans of mixed ethnic backgrounds experience, follows. Illustrating the struggles of mixed-color youth with identity and social position, 13-year old poet Zora's resolution about proposing a "new race" sheds light on the complexity and depth of the racist wounds the nation still faces. The young poet performs live in front of 1,500 of her peers and adult allies at the Urban Word NYC Teen Poetry Slam.

Manhattan Project -- A contributor is certain that his father worked on the Manhattan Project during World War II. His father refused to talk about his war assignment, except to say that he sold his patent to the U.S. government for a single dollar. Along with the patent, the contributor has a letter from the Atomic Energy Commission stating that his father's patent had been declassified. Was this invention used to build the atomic bomb? To find out, HISTORY DETECTIVES host Wes Cowan travels to Oak Ridge, Tennessee, and discovers a plan to hide atomic secrets in plain sight. Galleon Shipwreck - A woman in Portland, Oregon, has a large chunk of what she believes is very old beeswax. This 23-pound block, dug up on the northern Oregon coast in the late 1930s, seems to have been deliberately carved with strange markings. For centuries, ships carried beeswax on trade routes from the Far East to the American Pacific Coast. Could this beeswax have been cargo on a legendary ship that foundered more than 300 years ago? And what do those odd markings mean? HISTORY DETECTIVES host Elyse Luray goes to the Bee Lab at Oregon State University to decipher where the beeswax came from and visits an archaeologist in Olympia, Washington, to track which ship may have brought it to the Oregon coast. Creole Poems - A HISTORY DETECTIVES fan from Chicago recently unearthed a French manuscript rolled in a cardboard tube. "Duplessis," his great-grandmother's mother-in-law's surname, is jotted in a margin, and "Rouzan," his grandmother's maiden name, appears at the bottom of another page. No one in the family knows anything about it, but the contributor, who reads a little French, thinks he has a collection of love poems, possibly written to one of his relatives. What is this? And why has his family kept it for 160 years? The questions lead HISTORY DETECTIVES host Gwendolyn Wright to New Orleans and to a piece of family history the contributor had never known.

Length: 60 Airdate: 6/24/2009 4:00 AM Service: PBS Format: Documentary
While America, a country of immigrants, has always championed the idea of inclusiveness, the outsider has been a source of constant amusement. Perhaps best epitomized today by characters in such blockbuster Judd Apatow comedies as "The 40 Year-Old Virgin," "Knocked Up" and "Superbad," this episode also looks back at the bespectacled wannabe (Harold Lloyd) and the vain coward (Bob Hope) as the outsiders of their day. Along with pioneering women in comedy like Phyllis Diller and truly zany characters who seem to have arrived from another planet (Jonathan Winters, Andy Kaufman, and Robin Williams), the great social upheaval of the 60s and 70s introduced counter-culture favorites Cheech & Chong, as well as superstar nerds like Woody Allen and "jerks" like Steve Martin--who ultimately became so popular that the idea of the outsider had to be re-cast.

Episode three of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia relates how land grabbers poisoned a region that was once renowned mainly for its restful spas and noble character. When the chaos of the Civil War tore apart the agrarian way of life, Appalachian society was left ripe for plunder. Speculators spread through every timber-rich and mineral-infused hollow, making deals. Mysterious courthouse fires destroyed property records, and consolidators evicted people who couldn't prove ownership of their land. As ancient trees were felled and coal was dug to fuel the nation's booming economy, Appalachia's land, people, wildlife and culture were changed forever.

Americans are addicted to coal - it powers half of all our electricity, and is both plentiful and cheap. In fact, some call America the "Saudi Arabia of Coal." But are we paying too high an environmental price for all this cheap energy? With carbon emissions caps high on the Obama Administration's agenda, coal is in the crosshairs of the energy debate. This week, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels to Wyoming to take a hard look at the coal industry there and its case that it can produce "clean coal" - coal that can be burned without releasing carbon into the atmosphere. President Obama has been outspoken in his support for "clean coal" technology, but some say the whole concept is more of a public relations campaign than an energy solution. As part of the report, Hinojosa talks with Wyoming Governor Dave Freudenthal and Jeff Goodell, the author of "Big Coal," who says that carbon dioxide emissions generated from coal contribute to global warming. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

FRONTLINE investigative correspondent Lowell Bergman examines the shadowy world of international bribery. The story reveals how multi-national companies create slush funds, set up front companies, and make secret payments, all to get billions in business. But these practices are facing a new international crackdown, led by prosecutors at the U.S. Department of Justice and allies abroad. At the center of this is a controversial, ongoing investigation into the British-based multi-national BAE Systems and allegations about billion dollar bribes.

Airdate: 5/19/2009 10:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

In the mid-1960s, Bernard Madoff tapped money from Jewish businessmen at exclusive country clubs with the promise of steady guaranteed returns on their investments. He then set his sights on Europe and Latin America, brokering deals with powerful hedge fund managers and feeder funds from Buenos Aires to Geneva. Billions of dollars were channeled to Madoff's investment firm, and his feeders became fabulously wealthy. The competition wondered how the man could produce such steady returns in good times and bad. There were allegations that Madoff was "front-running" or operating a Ponzi scheme, which the SEC investigated several times over the last two decades. But Madoff remained untouched until December 11, 2008, when he admitted it was all "one big lie." FRONTLINE producers Martin Smith and Marcela Gaviria unravel the story behind the world's first truly global Ponzi scheme -- a deception that lasted longer, reached wider, and cut deeper than any other business scandal in history.

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Episode Title: Hollywood Chinese

Length: 90

Airdate: 5/28/2009 1:00 AM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

From the first Chinese-American film produced in 1916 to Ang Lee's triumphant Brokeback Mountain nine decades later, "Hollywood Chinese" brings together a fascinating group of actors, writers, directors -- and iconic film images -- to examine how Chinese people have contributed to and been portrayed in an industry that was often ignorant about and dismissive of race. Moving far beyond the stereotypical and exotic images of Suzy Wong and Bruce Lee, such artists as Wayne Wang, Joan Chen, David Henry Hwang, Nancy Kwan and Amy Tan, among many others, share their experiences of being "the other." Often humorous, sometimes maddening, but always inspiring, these storytellers and film clips from more than 90 films -- some dating back to the 1890s -- weave a rich tapestry and complex history.

Airdate: 5/19/2009 10:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

In the mid-1960s, Bernard Madoff tapped money from Jewish businessmen at exclusive country clubs with the promise of steady guaranteed returns on their investments. He then set his sights on Europe and Latin America, brokering deals with powerful hedge fund managers and feeder funds from Buenos Aires to Geneva. Billions of dollars were channeled to Madoff's investment firm, and his feeders became fabulously wealthy. The competition wondered how the man could produce such steady returns in good times and bad. There were allegations that Madoff was "front-running" or operating a Ponzi scheme, which the SEC investigated several times over the last two decades. But Madoff remained untouched until December 11, 2008, when he admitted it was all "one big lie." FRONTLINE producers Martin Smith and Marcela Gaviria unravel the story behind the world's first truly global Ponzi scheme -- a deception that lasted longer, reached wider, and cut deeper than any other business scandal in history.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. Episode Title: The Tank Man

Airdate: 6/9/2009 9:30 PM

Service: PBS

Format: Documentary

On June 5, 1989, one day after Chinese troops expelled thousands of demonstrators from Tiananmen Square in Beijing; a solitary, unarmed protester stood his ground before a column of tanks advancing down the Avenue of Eternal Peace. Captured by Western photographers watching nearby, this extraordinary confrontation became an icon of the fight for freedom around the world. Veteran filmmaker Antony Thomas investigates the mystery of the tank man -- his identity, his fate, and his significance for the Chinese leadership. The search for the tank man reveals China's startling social compact -- its embrace of capitalism while dissent is squashed -- designed to stifle the nationwide unrest of 1989. This policy has allowed educated elites and entrepreneurs to profit handsomely, while the majority of Chinese still face brutal working conditions and low wages, and all Chinese must endure strict political and social controls. Some of these controls regulate speech on the Internet -- and have generated criticism over the involvement of major U.S. corporations such as Yahoo!, Cisco, Microsoft, and Google.

Americans have a longstanding love affair with food -- the modern supermarket has, on average, 47,000 products. But do we really know what goes into making the products we so eagerly consume? This week, David Brancaccio talks with filmmaker Robert Kenner, the director of "Food, Inc.," which takes a hard look at the secretive and surprising journey food takes on the way from processing plants to our dinner tables. The two discuss why contemporary food processing secrets are so closely guarded, their impact on our health, and another surprising fact: how consumers are actually empowered to make a difference. Find out why you'll never look at dinner the same way.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

The bets were huge and risky--billions of dollars on the housing market. The upside was undeniable--superbanks reaped billions of dollars, dominated the landscape, and gobbled up competitors. Then the bottom dropped out--the massive losses on Wall Street nearly broke the banks. In the worst crisis in decades, brand name banks are on the brink of failure. Now as the federal government contemplates what could become a massive nationalization of the industry, FRONTLINE goes behind closed doors to tell the inside story of how things went so wrong so fast and to document efforts to stabilize the industry. Veteran FRONTLINE producer

Michael Kirk (Inside the Meltdown) untangles the complicated financial and political web threatening one particular superbank--Bank of America.

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW.

"Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."

Host and veteran correspondent Miles O'Brien goes to three very different American cities -- Denver, New York and Portland, and their surrounding suburbs -- to look at each as a microcosm of the challenges and possibilities the country faces as citizens, local and federal officials, and planners struggle to manage a growing America with innovative transportation and sustainable land use policies. With roads clogged and congested, gas prices uncertain, smog and pollution creating health problems like asthma, cities that once built infrastructure to serve only automobiles and trucks are now looking to innovative new forms of transportation systems -- like trolleys, light rail, pedestrian walkways and bike paths.

Working in Pakistan after September 11, 2001, former Wall Street Journal reporter Asra Nomani faced a double shock: a surprise pregnancy and abandonment by the Pakistani man she thought would be her husband, then the murder of her dear friend Daniel Pearl at the hands of Muslim extremists. Still reeling, and with a son to raise, she returned to her hometown in West Virginia to find that the mosque had been taken over by men she saw as extremists. This documentary chronicles what happens when she decides to fight back -- angering even the mosque's moderates. As the film unfolds, it tells a story of competing paths to social change, American identity and the nature of religion itself.

Seventy-five percent of the world's fresh water is stored in glaciers, but scientists predict climate change will cause some of the world's largest glaciers to completely melt by 2030. What effect will this have on our daily lives? With global warming falling low on a national list of American concerns, it's time to take a deeper look at what could be a global calamity in the making. This week, in a special one-hour NOW on PBS, David Brancaccio and environmentalist Conrad Anker -- one of the world's leading high altitude climbers -- trek to the Gangotri Glacier in the Himalayan Mountains, the source of the Ganges River, to witness the great melt and its dire consequences first-hand. The two also visit Montana's Glacier National Park to see the striking effects of global warming closer to home and learn how melting glaciers across the globe can have a direct impact on food prices in the U.S. Along the way, Brancaccio and Anker talk to both scientists and swamis, bathe in the River Ganges, view a water shortage calamity in India, and come as close as any human can to seeing the tangible costs of climate change. "We can't take climate change and put it on the back burner," warns Anker. "If we don't address climate change, we won't be around as humans."

Series Title: Frontline Episode Title: The Madoff Affair Length: 60
Airdate: 5/19/2009 10:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

In the mid-1960s, Bernard Madoff tapped money from Jewish businessmen at exclusive country clubs with the promise of steady guaranteed returns on their investments. He then set his sights on Europe and Latin America, brokering deals with powerful hedge fund managers and feeder funds from Buenos Aires to Geneva. Billions of dollars were channeled to Madoff's investment firm, and his feeders became fabulously wealthy. The competition wondered how the man could produce such steady returns in good times and bad. There were allegations that Madoff was "front-running" or operating a Ponzi scheme, which the SEC investigated several times over the last two decades. But Madoff remained untouched until December 11, 2008, when he admitted it was all "one big lie." FRONTLINE producers Martin Smith and Marcela Gaviria unravel the story behind the world's first truly global Ponzi scheme -- a deception that lasted longer, reached wider, and cut deeper than any other business scandal in history.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and John Maggs of National Journal.

Americans have a longstanding love affair with food -- the modern supermarket has, on average, 47,000 products. But do we really know what goes into making the products we so eagerly consume? This week, David Brancaccio talks with filmmaker Robert Kenner, the director of "Food, Inc.," which takes a hard look at the secretive and surprising journey food takes on the way from processing plants to our dinner tables. The two discuss why contemporary food processing secrets are so closely guarded, their impact on our health, and another surprising fact: how consumers are actually empowered to make a difference. Find out why you'll never look at dinner the same way.

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

FRONTLINE investigative correspondent Lowell Bergman examines the shadowy world of international bribery. The story reveals how multi-national companies create slush funds, set up front companies, and make secret payments, all to get billions in business. But these practices are facing a new international crackdown, led by prosecutors at the U.S. Department of Justice and allies abroad. At the center of this is a controversial, ongoing investigation into the British-based multi-national BAE Systems and allegations about billion dollar bribes.

From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed? Covering the week: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

The Cherokee would call it Nu-No-Du-Na Tlo-Hi-Lu, "The Trail Where They Cried." On May 26, 1838, federal troops forced thousands of Cherokee from their homes in the southeastern United States, driving them toward Indian Territory in eastern Oklahoma. More than 4,000 died of disease and starvation along the way. For years, the Cherokee had resisted removal from their land in every way they knew. Convinced that white America rejected Native Americans because they were "savages," Cherokee leaders established a republic with a European-style legislature and legal system. Many Cherokee became Christian and adopted westernized education for their children. Their visionary principal chief, John Ross (actor Freddy Douglas), would even take the Cherokee case to the Supreme Court, where he won crucial recognition of tribal sovereignty. The Supreme Court ruling proved no deterrent to President Andrew Jackson's demands that the Cherokee leave their ancestral lands. A complex debate divided the Cherokee Nation, with Chief Ross urging the Cherokee to stay and Major Ridge (actor Wes Studi, Cherokee), a respected tribal leader, urging the tribe to move west and rebuild, going so far as to sign a removal treaty himself without the authority to do so. Though in the end the Cherokees' embrace of "civilization" and their landmark legal victory proved no match for white land hunger and military power, the Cherokee people were able, with characteristic ingenuity, to build a new life in Oklahoma, far from the land that had sustained them for generations.

This year, hundreds of thousands of prisoners with serious mental illnesses will be released into communities across America, the largest exodus in the nation's history. Typically, mentally ill offenders leave prison with a bus ticket, $75 and two weeks worth of medication. Within eighteen months, nearly two-thirds are re-arrested. In this follow up to the groundbreaking film "The New Asylums," FRONTLINE examines what happens to the mentally ill when they leave prison and why they return at such alarming rates. The intimate stories of the released-along with interviews with parole officers, social workers, and psychiatrists provide a rare look at the lives of the mentally ill as they struggle to stay out of prison and reintegrate into society.

In 1789, more than 200 female thieves, prostitutes and con-artists, rounded up from London's most notorious prisons, were shipped off to an Australian penal colony aboard a leaky vessel named the Lady Juliana. Once aboard, the wily women turned their banishment into opportunity, transforming their ship into a rowdy floating brothel. By the time they reached Botany Bay, they were fit, healthy and some were even self-supporting. Instead of a life of servitude, they took control and - along with their offspring - helped guarantee a new world's future. With dramatic reconstructions, powerful imagery and actual ship journals, this program brings to light the true story of the Lady Juliana. How do we interrogate terrorist suspects? How do we police our border, our banks - tonight on "Washington Week?" Simulated drowning, threats, shackles, new details emerge on how the CIA interrogated terror suspects. Were the tactics only technically legal and did they work? The U.S. speaks to its southern neighbors, emphasizing that border security works both ways. Pres. Barack Obama said, "More than 90 percent of the guns recovered in Mexico come from the United States. We have responsibilities as well." And loosening the embargo on Cuba. Pres. Obama said, "A relationship that effectively has been frozen for 50 years is not going to thaw overnight." Plus this week on the economy - banks are actually making money. What's going on? Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? Covering the week: Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

Episode Title: Wounded Knee

Length: 90

Airdate: 5/11/2009 10:30 PM

Service: PBS

Format: Documentary

On the night of February 27, 1973, 54 cars rolled, horns blaring, into a small hamlet on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. Within hours, some 200 Oglala Lakota and American Indian Movement (AIM) activists had seized the few major buildings in town and police had cordoned off the area. The occupation of Wounded Knee had begun. Demanding redress for grievances -- some going back more than 100 years -- the protesters captured the world's attention for 71 gripping days. With heavily armed federal troops tightening a cordon around meagerly supplied, cold, hungry Indians, the event invited media comparisons with the massacre of Indian men, women and children at Wounded Knee almost a century earlier. In telling the story of this iconic moment, the final episode of WE SHALL REMAIN examines the broad political and economic forces that led to the emergence of AIM in the late 1960s, as well as the immediate events -- a murder and an apparent miscarriage of justice -- that triggered the takeover. Though the federal government failed to make good on many of the promises that ended the siege, the event succeeded in bringing the desperate conditions of Indian reservation life to the nation's attention. Perhaps even more important, it proved that despite centuries of encroachment, warfare and neglect, Indians remained a vital force in the life of America.

An estimated half-million women are trafficked annually for the purpose of sexual slavery. The women are kidnapped -- or lured by traffickers who prey on their dreams of employment abroad -- then they are "exported" to Europe, the Middle East, the United States and elsewhere, where they are sold to pimps, drugged, terrorized, locked in brothels and raped repeatedly. In Eastern Europe, since the fall of communism, sex trafficking has become the fastest growing form of organized crime, with Moldova and Ukraine widely seen as the centers of the global trade in women and girls. FRONTLINE presents a unique hidden camera look at this world of sexual slavery, talking with traffickers and their victims, and exposing the government indifference that allows the abuses to continue virtually unchecked. "Sex Slaves" also follows the remarkable journey of one man determined to find his trafficked wife by posing as a trafficker himself to buy back her freedom.

Typically, mentally ill offenders leave prison with a bus ticket, $75 and two weeks worth of medication. Within eighteen months, nearly two-thirds are re-arrested. In this follow up to the groundbreaking film "The New Asylums," FRONTLINE examines what happens to the mentally ill when they leave prison and why they return at such alarming rates. The intimate stories of the released-along with interviews with parole officers, social workers, and psychiatrists provide a rare look at the lives of the mentally ill as they struggle to stay out of prison and reintegrate into society.

In 1789, more than 200 female thieves, prostitutes and con-artists, rounded up from London's most notorious prisons, were shipped off to an Australian penal colony aboard a leaky vessel named the Lady Juliana. Once aboard, the wily women turned their banishment into opportunity, transforming their ship into a rowdy floating brothel. By the time they reached Botany Bay, they were fit, healthy and some were even self-supporting. Instead of a life of servitude, they took control and -- along with their offspring -- helped guarantee a new world's future. With dramatic reconstructions, powerful imagery and actual ship journals, this program brings to light the true story of the Lady Juliana. An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put our troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president -- Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority -- health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

The murder of Dr. George Tiller has reignited the abortion debate, and raised the question: should violence against medical doctors who perform abortions be viewed and prosecuted as domestic terrorism? This week NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with two of the remaining handful of doctors who publicly acknowledge performing late abortions, including Leroy Carhart, a fellow doctor in Tiller's Wichita, Kansas clinic. Carhart discusses his vow to carry on Tiller's mission and what it's like for him and his family to live as "targets". The show also investigates claims that law enforcement dropped the ball when it came to stopping Tiller's alleged murderer, Scott Roeder. Hinojosa travels to Colorado as well to talk with Dr. Warren Hern, another late abortion provider who says he's been living "under siege" for decades. Dr. Hern works behind four layers of bulletproof windows and is now under round-the-clock federal protection. NOW goes into the eye of the abortion rights storm to see how Tiller's killing and its ramifications are impacting doctors, free speech, and a civilized society.

Thousands of U.S. troops are getting discharged out of the Army. Many suffer from post traumatic stress disorders and brain injuries, and haven't been getting the care they need. The Army's been claiming these discharged soldiers had pre-existing mental illnesses. But health advocates say these are wrongful discharges, a way for the army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment to which they're entitled. NOW covered this issue last summer, and this week we revisit the Army's controversial position and follow up with affected soldiers we met. As a result of the media attention from our report and others, the Department of Defense revised its criteria for diagnosing pre-existing conditions and, now, fewer soldiers are receiving the diagnosis, making more of them eligible for care. This is an update to the NOW investigation "Fighting the Army." Also this week, we update how the distant Pacific nation of Kiribati is dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth due to global warming. Kiribati President Anote Tong is now considering purchasing land abroad to save his people. He says his pleas for international support have largely fallen on deaf ears. Experts predict millions of people will become climate change refugees in the years to come. This is an update to the show "Paradise Lost."

Working in Pakistan after September 11, 2001, former Wall Street Journal reporter Asra Nomani faced a double shock: a surprise pregnancy and abandonment by the Pakistani man she thought would be her husband, then the murder of her dear friend Daniel Pearl at the hands of Muslim extremists. Still reeling, and with a son to raise, she returned to her hometown in West Virginia to find that the mosque had been taken over by men she saw as extremists. This documentary chronicles what happens when she decides to fight back -- angering even the mosque's moderates. As the film unfolds, it tells a story of competing paths to social change, American identity and the nature of religion itself.

Can the power of music make the brain come alive? Throughout his career Dr. Oliver Sacks, neurologist and acclaimed author, whose book Awakenings was made into an Oscar-nominated feature film starring Robin Williams and Robert De Niro, has encountered myriad patients who are struggling to cope with debilitating medical conditions. While their ailments vary, many have one thing in common: an appreciation for the therapeutic effects of music. NOVA follows four individuals—two of whom are Sacks's case studies—and even peers into Sacks's own brain, to investigate music's strange, surprising, and still unexplained power over the human mind.

From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed? How do we interrogate terrorist suspects? How do we police our border, our banks - tonight on "Washington Week?" Simulated drowning, threats, shackles, new details emerge on how the CIA interrogated terror suspects. Were the tactics only technically legal and did they work? The U.S. speaks to its southern neighbors, emphasizing that border security works both ways. Pres. Barack Obama said, "More than 90 percent of the guns recovered in Mexico come from the United States. We have responsibilities as well." And loosening the embargo on Cuba. Pres. Obama said, "A relationship that effectively has been frozen for 50 years is not going to thaw overnight." Plus this week on the economy - banks are actually making money. What's going on? Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? Covering the week: Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

Series Title: Frontline Episode Title: The Madoff Affair Length: 60
Airdate: 5/19/2009 10:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Documentary
In the mid-1960s, Bernard Madoff tapped money from Jewish businessmen at exclusive country clubs with the promise of steady guaranteed returns on their investments. He then set his sights on Europe and Latin America, brokering deals with powerful hedge fund managers and feeder funds from Buenos Aires to Geneva. Billions of dollars were channeled to Madoff's investment firm, and his feeders became fabulously wealthy. The competition wondered how the man could produce such steady returns in good times and bad. There were allegations that Madoff was "front-running" or operating a Ponzi scheme, which the SEC investigated several times over the last two decades. But Madoff remained untouched until December 11, 2008, when he admitted it was all "one big lie." FRONTLINE producers Martin Smith and Marcela Gaviria unravel the story behind the world's first truly global Ponzi scheme -- a deception that lasted longer, reached wider, and cut deeper than any other business scandal in history.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle

McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

What will jobs of the future look like? Many studying that question are seeing green -- green jobs. And with President Obama promising to create 5 million "green-collar" jobs over the next 10 years, some are predicting that new career paths in energy efficiency and clean power will transform the American economy. This week, NOW on PBS talks with environmental activist Van Jones, founder of "Green for All," an environmental group dedicated to bringing green jobs to the disadvantaged. In March, Jones was appointed as special advisor for Green Jobs, Enterprise and Innovation at the White House Council on Environmental Quality. Now that he has the President's ear, will Jones be creating a new career frontier for America?

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put our troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president -- Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority -- health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

Length: 30 Airdate: 6/12/2009 8:00 PM Service: PBS
Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb.
Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

The bets were huge and risky--billions of dollars on the housing market. The upside was undeniable--superbanks reaped billions of dollars, dominated the landscape, and gobbled up competitors. Then the bottom dropped out--the massive losses on Wall Street nearly broke the banks. In the worst crisis in decades, brand name banks are on the brink of failure. Now as the federal government contemplates what could become a massive nationalization of the industry, FRONTLINE goes behind closed doors to tell the inside story of how things went so wrong so fast and to document efforts to stabilize the industry. Veteran FRONTLINE producer Michael Kirk (Inside the Meltdown) untangles the complicated financial and political web threatening one particular superbank--Bank of America.

How massive student loan debts are sinking American dreams and causing a national economic headache. This week, NOW follows the story of a single mother in Baltimore trying to dig herself out of more than $70,000 student loan debt. While issues of personal responsibility are debated, there's no question the high price of higher education is creating an ocean of student loan debt for people who can least afford it. How are the 70 million Americans with student debt frustrating America's economic recovery?

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

Over the past 21 years, NOVA has followed a group of seven doctors from their first day at Harvard Medical School in 1987. All young, bright and accomplished, none of them could have predicted what it would take, personally and professionally, to become a member of the medical tribe. NOVA's cameras have been there through the difficult years of classes and clinical training, internship and residency, marriage and divorce -- documenting the trials and tribulations as these individuals struggled to become doctors and to balance time at work and at home. Candid in-depth interviews have given viewers a real sense of what each person has to deal with day in and day out since he or she made the decision to practice medicine. In this special two-part program, NOVA returns one last time to get an update on the kind of doctors -- and people -- they have become. Part 1 of 2.

How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW. "Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."

The final episode of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia sparks both heartbreak and hope for the region's ransacked mountain ecosystem. Early 20th-century mineral barons ruled Appalachia with an iron fist. Company spies tracked miners' every move. If they found a man's union card, he would be fired, even killed. Inspired by a brave little old lady who talked like a preacher and cursed like a sailor, mineworkers organized and demanded better treatment. The dams of the Tennessee Valley Authority drowned ancestral homesteads, but the project eliminated abject poverty for thousands. An invasive fungus has wiped out the majestic American chestnut tree, but its roots refuse to die. Strip mining has torn the tops off mountains, but a new wave of activists, writers, musicians, scientists and nature-lovers is expanding the miners' ideas of health and fairness to include the forests, the rivers and the mountains themselves. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

The final episode of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia sparks both heartbreak and hope for the region's ransacked mountain ecosystem. Early 20th-century mineral barons ruled Appalachia with an iron fist. Company spies tracked miners' every move. If they found a man's union card, he would be fired, even killed. Inspired by a brave little old lady who talked like a preacher and cursed like a sailor, mineworkers organized and demanded better treatment. The dams of the Tennessee Valley Authority drowned ancestral homesteads, but the project eliminated abject poverty for thousands. An invasive fungus has wiped out the majestic American chestnut tree, but its roots refuse to die. Strip mining has torn the tops off mountains, but a new wave of activists, writers, musicians, scientists and nature-lovers is expanding the miners' ideas of health and fairness to include the forests, the rivers and the mountains themselves. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall."
This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll."
But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle
McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Americans are addicted to coal - it powers half of all our electricity, and is both plentiful and cheap. In fact, some call America the "Saudi Arabia of Coal." But are we paying too high an environmental price for all this cheap energy? With carbon emissions caps high on the Obama Administration's agenda, coal is in the crosshairs of the energy debate. This week, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels to Wyoming to take a hard look at the coal industry there and its case that it can produce "clean coal" - coal that can be burned without releasing carbon into the atmosphere. President Obama has been outspoken in his support for "clean coal" technology, but some say the whole concept is more of a public relations campaign than an energy solution. As part of the report, Hinojosa talks with Wyoming Governor Dave Freudenthal and Jeff Goodell, the author of "Big Coal," who says that carbon dioxide emissions generated from coal contribute to global warming. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

What will jobs of the future look like? Many studying that question are seeing green -- green jobs. And with President Obama promising to create 5 million "green-collar" jobs over the next 10 years, some are predicting that new career paths in energy efficiency and clean power will transform the American economy. This week, NOW on PBS talks with environmental activist Van Jones, founder of "Green for All," an environmental group dedicated to bringing green jobs to the disadvantaged. In March, Jones was appointed as special advisor for Green Jobs, Enterprise and Innovation at the White House Council on Environmental Quality. Now that he has the President's ear, will Jones be creating a new career frontier for America?

In March of 1621, in what is now southeastern Massachusetts, Massasoit (actor Marcos Akiaten, Chiricauha Apache), the leading sachem of the Wampanoag, sat down to negotiate with a ragged group of English colonists. Hungry, dirty and sick, the pale-skinned foreigners were struggling to stay alive; they were in desperate need of Native help. Massasoit faced problems of his own. His people had lately been ravaged by unexplained sickness, leaving them vulnerable to the rival Narragansett to the west. The Wampanoag sachem calculated that a tactical alliance with the foreigners would provide a way to protect his people and hold his enemies at bay. He agreed to give the English the help they needed. A half-century later, as a brutal war flared between the English colonists and a confederation of New England Indians, the wisdom of Massasoit's diplomatic gamble seemed less clear. Five decades of English immigration, mistreatment, lethal epidemics and widespread environmental degradation had brought the Indians and their way of life to the brink of disaster. Led by Metacom, Massasoit's son (actor Annowon Weeden, Mashpee Wampanoag), the Wampanoag and their Native allies fought back against the English, nearly pushing them into the sea.

Length: 60 Airdate: 4/10/2009 2:00 AM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

The first hour of this series about the deep and surprising history of Appalachia explores the region's unique mosaic of plant, animal and early human life. As Pulitzer Prize-winning scientist E.O. Wilson notes, "A history of a region includes not just the people, but the creatures and the living environment." Geology is destiny. The Appalachian Mountains hold their treasure of mineral and timber wealth because they were born of a primeval ocean. Early North Americans settled here because giant mammals gave them vast food supplies. Over thousands of years, they formed highly sophisticated cultures, until 1540 when Hernando de Soto ruined them in his violent, single-minded hunt for gold. The tribes that remained after de Soto's brutal swath adopted the gun as their chief technology. England, Spain and France would court these skilled hunters and warriors as allies in the early struggle to dominate America. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

But some of the ocean's coldest waters are also home to some of its largest and most warm-blooded, in this case, beluga whales, the mammal known as the canary of the sea for its vocal repertoire. In this episode, Jean-Michel Cousteau travels with his son and daughter, Fabien and Celine, and team to the high Arctic to discover why some beluga groups are thriving and others are disappearing. The revelation is the clear connection between human activity and the beluga's future. The surprise is that what is occurring with belugas may foreshadow similar health concerns for people. The inspiration is that with knowledge comes change and Jean-Michel Cousteau and team find reason for hope embodied in this intriguing, little known, and elusive white whale.

Thousands of U.S. troops are getting discharged out of the Army. Many suffer from post traumatic stress disorders and brain injuries, and haven't been getting the care they need. The Army's been claiming these discharged soldiers had pre-existing mental illnesses. But health advocates say these are wrongful discharges, a way for the army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment to which they're entitled. NOW covered this issue last summer, and this week we revisit the Army's controversial position and follow up with affected soldiers we met. As a result of the media attention from our report and others, the Department of Defense revised its criteria for diagnosing pre-existing conditions and, now, fewer soldiers are receiving the diagnosis, making more of them eligible for care. This is an update to the NOW investigation "Fighting the Army." Also this week, we update how the distant Pacific nation of Kiribati is dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth due to global warming. Kiribati President Anote Tong is now considering purchasing land abroad to save his people. He says his pleas for international support have largely fallen on deaf ears. Experts predict millions of people will become climate change refugees in the years to come. This is an update to the show "Paradise Lost."

Americans are addicted to coal - it powers half of all our electricity, and is both plentiful and cheap. In fact, some call America the "Saudi Arabia of Coal." But are we paying too high an environmental price for all this cheap energy? With carbon emissions caps high on the Obama Administration's agenda, coal is in the crosshairs of the energy debate. This week, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels to Wyoming to take a hard look at the coal industry there and its case that it can produce "clean coal" - coal that can be burned without releasing carbon into the atmosphere. President Obama has been outspoken in his support for "clean coal" technology, but some say the whole concept is more of a public relations campaign than an energy solution. As part of the report, Hinojosa talks with Wyoming Governor Dave Freudenthal and Jeff Goodell, the author of "Big Coal," who says that carbon dioxide emissions generated from coal contribute to global warming. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

The final episode of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia sparks both heartbreak and hope for the region's ransacked mountain ecosystem. Early 20th-century mineral barons ruled Appalachia with an iron fist. Company spies tracked miners' every move. If they found a man's union card, he would be fired, even killed. Inspired by a brave little old lady who talked like a preacher and cursed like a sailor, mineworkers organized and demanded better treatment. The dams of the Tennessee Valley Authority drowned ancestral homesteads, but the project eliminated abject poverty for thousands. An invasive fungus has wiped out the majestic American chestnut tree, but its roots refuse to die. Strip mining has torn the tops off mountains, but a new wave of activists, writers, musicians, scientists and nature-lovers is expanding the miners' ideas of health and fairness to include the forests, the rivers and the mountains themselves. In May 2008, a scientific team made worldwide headlines by announcing evidence of a previously unsuspected impact from space that had devastated prehistoric North America at the end of the last Ice Age. According to this controversial new claim, the extinction of more than 34 types of large prehistoric animals (or "megafauna") was caused not by climate change or the arrival of the first human hunters, but by the massive breakup of a comet over the Great Lakes region. NOVA explores this provocative new theory about what killed off America's mammoths and may have come close to extinguishing early human populations as well.

Seventy-five percent of the world's fresh water is stored in glaciers, but scientists predict climate change will cause some of the world's largest glaciers to completely melt by 2030. What effect will this have on our daily lives? With global warming falling low on a national list of American concerns, it's time to take a deeper look at what could be a global calamity in the making. This week, in a special one-hour NOW on PBS, David Brancaccio and environmentalist Conrad Anker -- one of the world's leading high altitude climbers -- trek to the Gangotri Glacier in the Himalayan Mountains, the source of the Ganges River, to witness the great melt and its dire consequences first-hand. The two also visit Montana's Glacier National Park to see the striking effects of global warming closer to home and learn how melting glaciers across the globe can have a direct impact on food prices in the U.S. Along the way, Brancaccio and Anker talk to both scientists and swamis, bathe in the River Ganges, view a water shortage calamity in India, and come as close as any human can to seeing the tangible costs of climate change. "We can't take climate change and put it on the back burner," warns Anker. "If we don't address climate change, we won't be around as humans."

The journey begins on the west coast of British Columbia in the Great Bear Rainforest at the King Pacific Lodge, a floating three-story luxury resort moored on an island where the nearest road ends 150 miles away. The lodge's isolation yields the opportunity to see one of the rarest animals on the planet: the white-colored Kermode, or "Spirit Bear." Further east, in Alberta's rocky mountains, is Sundance Lodge, accessible only on horseback, and a site where some of the last real cowboys share stories of early riders who struck off from the known line of Canada's first transcontinental railway into this vast and uncertain territory. Eastern Canada also has its share of isolated adventure destinations, including La Seigneurie du Triton, a late- 1800s fishing club that once hosted prestigious guests such as Harry Truman, Theodore Roosevelt and former British Prime Minister Winston Churchill. Guests tour the area on Rabaskas, large Indian canoes, take guided expeditions in search of wild mushrooms and learn the elegant art of fly-casting.

Length: 60 Airdate: 5/2/2009 3:00 AM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

The final episode of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia sparks both heartbreak and hope for the region's ransacked mountain ecosystem. Early 20th-century mineral barons ruled Appalachia with an iron fist. Company spies tracked miners' every move. If they found a man's union card, he would be fired, even killed. Inspired by a brave little old lady who talked like a preacher and cursed like a sailor, mineworkers organized and demanded better treatment. The dams of the Tennessee Valley Authority drowned ancestral homesteads, but the project eliminated abject poverty for thousands. An invasive fungus has wiped out the majestic American chestnut tree, but its roots refuse to die. Strip mining has torn the tops off mountains, but a new wave of activists, writers, musicians, scientists and nature-lovers is expanding the miners' ideas of health and fairness to include the forests, the rivers and the mountains themselves. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Airdate: 6/14/2009 1:00 AM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

Every so often a giant emerges on the stage of science, someone who transcends the narrow boundaries of a particular line of research and alters our perspective on the world. E.O. Wilson is such a man. In "Lord of the Ants," NOVA profiles this soft-spoken Southerner renowned for his scientific study of ants that led to his 1975 book "Sociobiology: The New Synthesis," where he put forth the notion that evolutionary principles could explain social behavior throughout the animal kingdom, including in humans. Though sociobiology was a controversial new discipline at the time, today experimental science shows that genes do play a role in aspects of human behavior. E.O. Wilson is an icon of our times: a lord of the ants who sought to explain nature on earth and who now fights for its survival through his worldwide conservation efforts. Actor and environmentalist Harrison Ford narrates this engaging portrait of a ceaselessly active scientist and eloquent writer, who has accumulated two Pulitzer Prizes among his many other honors.

At a research site in Fongoli, Senegal, a female chimpanzee breaks off a branch, chews the end to make it sharp, then uses this rudimentary spear to skewer a tasty bushbaby hiding inside a hollow tree. The footage represents an astonishing breakthrough for primate researchers: It's the first time anyone has documented a chimpanzee wielding a carefully prepared, preplanned weapon. But it's only the latest in a slew of extraordinary new findings about ape behavior. The more researchers learn about the great apes -- chimpanzees, bonobos, gorillas, and orangutans -- the more evidence they find of creative intelligence. What, then, is the essential difference between us and them? "Ape Genius," a NOVA-National Geographic special, explores that provocative question and examines research that is illuminating the ape mind.

Filmmaker Scott Hicks -- director of the 1996 award-winning feature film "Shine" and the recent "No Reservations," for which Philip Glass wrote the score -- documents an extremely eventful, but apparently typical, year in the career and personal life of the distinguished composer, as he interacts with family, friends and colleagues. Romping with his young children on the Nova Scotia coastline, cooking pizza and deconstructing philosophy in the farmhouse kitchen, creating new works in his cluttered Baltimore studio or collaborating with Chuck Close, Ravi Shankar and Woody Allen, this film follows Glass across three continents -- from his annual ride on the Coney Island "Cyclone" in Brooklyn, to the world premiere of his new opera in Germany and in performance with a didgeridoo virtuoso in Australia. It is an intimate, often vérité, portrait of artistic sensibility.

How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW. "Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor -- Edward M. Kennedy -- surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

Mark Oliver Everett, better known as E, is the lead singer of U.S. cult band the EELS. What most of his fans don't know is that Mark's father, Hugh Everett III, was one of America's top quantum physicists. In 1957, Hugh Everett came up with a revolutionary theory that predicted the existence of parallel universes. The idea quickly seeped into popular culture, but only recently has it been accepted by mainstream physicists. The film follows the wry and charismatic Mark, who had been estranged from his father, as he travels across America to learn about the father he never knew. It is only by entering the paradoxical world of quantum mechanics that Mark can hope to understand why he was such a stranger to his own father.

NOVA presents the remarkable life story of Percy Julian -- not only one of the great African-American scientists of the 20th century, but an industrialist, self-made millionaire, humanitarian and civil-rights pioneer. The grandson of Alabama slaves, Julian won worldwide acclaim for his research in chemistry and broke the color barrier in American science more than a decade before Jackie Robinson did so in baseball. He discovered a way to turn soybeans into synthetic steroids on an industrial scale, enabling drugs like cortisone to be widely available to millions. In a special two-hour presentation, NOVA traces the vivid and moving saga of Julian's dazzling scientific achievements and sometimes stormy personal life. His largely unknown story is brought to life with vivid period re-enactments based on newly accessible family archives and interviews with dozens of colleagues and relatives. Tony Award-winning actor Ruben Santiago-Hudson stars as Julian. Courtney B. Vance narrates.

government for a single dollar. Along with the patent, the contributor has a letter from the Atomic Energy Commission stating that his father's patent had been declassified. Was this invention used to build the atomic bomb? To find out, HISTORY DETECTIVES host Wes Cowan travels to Oak Ridge, Tennessee, and discovers a plan to hide atomic secrets in plain sight. Galleon Shipwreck - A woman in Portland, Oregon, has a large chunk of what she believes is very old beeswax. This 23-pound block, dug up on the northern Oregon coast in the late 1930s, seems to have been deliberately carved with strange markings. For centuries, ships carried beeswax on trade routes from the Far East to the American Pacific Coast. Could this beeswax have been cargo on a legendary ship that foundered more than 300 years ago? And what do those odd markings mean?

HISTORY DETECTIVES host Elyse Luray goes to the Bee Lab at Oregon State University to decipher where the beeswax came from and visits an archaeologist in Olympia, Washington, to track which ship may have brought it to the Oregon coast. Creole Poems - A HISTORY DETECTIVES fan from Chicago recently unearthed a French manuscript rolled in a cardboard tube. "Duplessis," his great-grandmother's mother-in-law's surname, is jotted in a margin, and "Rouzan," his grandmother's maiden name, appears at the bottom of another page. No one in the family knows anything about it, but the contributor, who reads a little French, thinks he has a collection of love poems, possibly written to one of his relatives. What is this? And why has his family kept it for 160 years? The questions lead HISTORY DETECTIVES host Gwendolyn Wright to New Orleans and to a piece of family history the contributor had never known.

In March of 1621, in what is now southeastern Massachusetts, Massasoit (actor Marcos Akiaten, Chiricauha Apache), the leading sachem of the Wampanoag, sat down to negotiate with a ragged group of English colonists. Hungry, dirty and sick, the pale-skinned foreigners were struggling to stay alive; they were in desperate need of Native help. Massasoit faced problems of his own. His people had lately been ravaged by unexplained sickness, leaving them vulnerable to the rival Narragansett to the west. The Wampanoag sachem calculated that a tactical alliance with the foreigners would provide a way to protect his people and hold his enemies at bay. He agreed to give the English the help they needed. A half-century later, as a brutal war flared between the English colonists and a confederation of New England Indians, the wisdom of Massasoit's diplomatic gamble seemed less clear. Five decades of English immigration, mistreatment, lethal epidemics and widespread environmental degradation had brought the Indians and their way of life to the brink of disaster. Led by Metacom, Massasoit's son (actor Annowon Weeden, Mashpee Wampanoag), the Wampanoag and their Native allies fought back against the English, nearly pushing them into the sea.

In this episode, Jean-Michel Cousteau travels with his son and daughter, Fabien and Celine, and team to the high Arctic to discover why some beluga groups are thriving and others are disappearing. The revelation is the clear connection between human activity and the beluga's future. The surprise is that what is occurring with belugas may foreshadow similar health concerns for people. The inspiration is that with knowledge comes change and Jean-Michel Cousteau and team find reason for hope embodied in this intriguing, little known, and elusive white whale.

Thousands of U.S. troops are getting discharged out of the Army. Many suffer from post traumatic stress disorders and brain injuries, and haven't been getting the care they need. The Army's been claiming these discharged soldiers had pre-existing mental illnesses. But health advocates say these are wrongful discharges, a way for the army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment to which they're entitled. NOW covered this issue last summer, and this week we revisit the Army's controversial position and follow up with affected soldiers we met. As a result of the media attention from our report and others, the Department of Defense revised its criteria for diagnosing pre-existing conditions and, now, fewer soldiers are receiving the diagnosis, making more of them eligible for care. This is an update to the NOW investigation

Also this week, we update how the distant Pacific nation of Kiribati is dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth due to global warming. Kiribati President Anote Tong is now considering purchasing land abroad to save his people. He says his pleas for international support have largely fallen on deaf ears. Airdate: 4/5/2009 3:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Other friends, COMING HOME gives voice to the children as they play a central role in the family's adjustment process and encourages them to be what they are: kids.

This special, featuring Queen Latifah and John Mayer, tells stories of service members who return home with injuries - both visible and invisible - and explores their families' struggles to find a "new normal." The program focuses on the challenges faced by the injured soldiers and their families; salutes their extraordinary courage; offers the general public ways to support service members in the community; and provides a brief but powerful glimpse into the lives of these remarkable families. With help from Elmo, Rosita and their SESAME STREET

Length: 90 Airdate: 4/13/2009 9:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

In March of 1621, in what is now southeastern Massachusetts, Massasoit (actor Marcos Akiaten, Chiricauha Apache), the leading sachem of the Wampanoag, sat down to negotiate with a ragged group of English colonists. Hungry, dirty and sick, the pale-skinned foreigners were struggling to stay alive; they were in desperate need of Native help. Massasoit faced problems of his own. His people had lately been ravaged by unexplained sickness, leaving them vulnerable to the rival Narragansett to the west. The Wampanoag sachem calculated that a tactical alliance with the foreigners would provide a way to protect his people and hold his enemies at bay. He agreed to give the English the help they needed. A half-century later, as a brutal war flared between the English colonists and a confederation of New England Indians, the wisdom of Massasoit's diplomatic gamble seemed less clear. Five decades of English immigration, mistreatment, lethal epidemics and widespread environmental degradation had brought the Indians and their way of life to the brink of disaster. Led by Metacom, Massasoit's son (actor Annowon Weeden, Mashpee Wampanoag), the Wampanoag and their Native allies fought back against the English, nearly pushing them into the sea.

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

The most complex marine species on the planet, our counterparts in the sea, is the orca, the ruler of the ocean. Orcas, also called killer whales, are the most widely distributed marine mammal in the world -- their realm extends from the Arctic to the Antarctic. They number fewer than 100,000 worldwide, and learning more about them is a global endeavor for Jean-Michel Cousteau and his team of explorers, who travel to both the Northern and Southern hemispheres as they seek out killer whales in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. Cousteau and the team discover that people and orcas share surprising similarities, even similar needs, and they relate their findings to the captivity and release of Keiko, from "Free Willy" fame, who captured the world's imagination and whose survival depended on pioneering efforts to reintroduce Keiko into the wild. The team also learns how some of the threats to killer whales now intersect with human lives. Intriguing detours in the expedition arise, leading to critical examinations of our environment, of the food on our dinner tables, even of our own health.

Over the past 21 years, NOVA has followed a group of seven doctors from their first day at Harvard Medical School in 1987. All young, bright and accomplished, none of them could have predicted what it would take, personally and professionally, to become a member of the medical tribe. NOVA's cameras have been there through the difficult years of classes and clinical training, internship and residency, marriage and divorce -- documenting the trials and tribulations as these individuals struggled to become doctors and to balance time at work and at home. Candid in-depth interviews have given viewers a real sense of what each person has to deal with day in and day out since he or she made the decision to practice medicine. In this special two-part program, NOVA returns one last time to get an update on the kind of doctors -- and people -- they have become. Part 2 of 2.

This week, NOW's David Brancaccio sits down with one of the most prominent figures in world health to discuss the future of the swine flu pandemic. Dr. Larry Brilliant is an epidemiologist, former Chief Philanthropist at Google.org, and was a central figure in the World Health Organization's successful smallpox eradication program. Brilliant sheds light on high-tech tools that are making it easier for scientists to detect global outbreaks, the critical importance of early detection and early response, and how the current pandemic has yet to show its real hand. "Anyone who tells you that they know that this is a mild pandemic, and the WHO has overreacted, they don't know. Anyone who tells you that the WHO and CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention) have underestimated it, they don't know," Brilliant tells NOW. "We're all going to find out at the same time...we're all in it together." The show also features vital insight from Dr. Nathan Wolfe, a Stanford University epidemiologist who specializes in hunting viruses to their source.

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

NOVA presents the remarkable life story of Percy Julian -- not only one of the great African-American scientists of the 20th century, but an industrialist, self-made millionaire, humanitarian and civil-rights pioneer. The grandson of Alabama slaves, Julian won worldwide acclaim for his research in chemistry and broke the color barrier in American science more than a decade before Jackie Robinson did so in baseball. He discovered a way to turn soybeans into synthetic steroids on an industrial scale, enabling drugs like cortisone to be widely available to millions. In a special two-hour presentation, NOVA traces the vivid and moving saga of Julian's dazzling scientific achievements and sometimes stormy personal life. His largely unknown story is brought to life with vivid period re-enactments based on newly accessible family archives and interviews with dozens of colleagues and relatives. Tony Award-winning actor Ruben Santiago-Hudson stars as Julian. Courtney B. Vance narrates.

Americans have a longstanding love affair with food -- the modern supermarket has, on average, 47,000 products. But do we really know what goes into making the products we so eagerly consume? This week, David Brancaccio talks with filmmaker Robert Kenner, the director of "Food, Inc.," which takes a hard look at the secretive and surprising journey food takes on the way from processing plants to our dinner tables. The two discuss why contemporary food processing secrets are so closely guarded, their impact on our health, and another surprising fact: how consumers are actually empowered to make a difference. Find out why you'll never look at dinner the same way.

The murder of Dr. George Tiller has reignited the abortion debate, and raised the question: should violence against medical doctors who perform abortions be viewed and prosecuted as domestic terrorism? This week NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with two of the remaining handful of doctors who publicly acknowledge performing late abortions, including Leroy Carhart, a fellow doctor in Tiller's Wichita, Kansas clinic. Carhart discusses his vow to carry on Tiller's mission and what it's like for him and his family to live as "targets". The show also investigates claims that law enforcement dropped the ball when it came to stopping Tiller's alleged murderer, Scott Roeder. Hinojosa travels to Colorado as well to talk with Dr. Warren Hern, another late abortion provider who says he's been living "under siege" for decades. Dr. Hern works behind four layers of bulletproof windows and is now under round-the-clock federal protection. NOW goes into the eye of the abortion rights storm to see how Tiller's killing and its ramifications are impacting doctors, free speech, and a civilized society.

Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb.

Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Length: 60 Airdate: 5/8/2009 2:00 AM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

The journey begins on the west coast of British Columbia in the Great Bear Rainforest at the King Pacific Lodge, a floating three-story luxury resort moored on an island where the nearest road ends 150 miles away. The lodge's isolation yields the opportunity to see one of the rarest animals on the planet: the white-colored Kermode, or "Spirit Bear." Further east, in Alberta's rocky mountains, is Sundance Lodge, accessible only on horseback, and a site where some of the last real cowboys share stories of early riders who struck off from the known line of Canada's first transcontinental railway into this vast and uncertain territory. Eastern Canada also has its share of isolated adventure destinations, including La Seigneurie du Triton, a late- 1800s fishing club that once hosted prestigious guests such as Harry Truman, Theodore Roosevelt and former British Prime Minister Winston Churchill. Guests tour the area on Rabaskas, large Indian canoes, take guided expeditions in search of wild mushrooms and learn the elegant art of fly-casting.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

From the first Chinese-American film produced in 1916 to Ang Lee's triumphant Brokeback Mountain nine decades later, "Hollywood Chinese" brings together a fascinating group of actors, writers, directors -- and iconic film images -- to examine how Chinese people have contributed to and been portrayed in an industry that was often ignorant about and dismissive of race. Moving far beyond the stereotypical and exotic images of Suzy Wong and Bruce Lee, such artists as Wayne Wang, Joan Chen, David Henry Hwang, Nancy Kwan and Amy Tan, among many others, share their experiences of being "the other." Often humorous, sometimes maddening, but always inspiring, these storytellers and film clips from more than 90 films -- some dating back to the 1890s -- weave a rich tapestry and complex history.

In March of 1621, in what is now southeastern Massachusetts, Massasoit (actor Marcos Akiaten, Chiricauha Apache), the leading sachem of the Wampanoag, sat down to negotiate with a ragged group of English colonists. Hungry, dirty and sick, the pale-skinned foreigners were struggling to stay alive; they were in desperate need of Native help. Massasoit faced problems of his own. His people had lately been ravaged by unexplained sickness, leaving them vulnerable to the rival Narragansett to the west. The Wampanoag sachem calculated that a tactical alliance with the foreigners would provide a way to protect his people and hold his enemies at bay. He agreed to give the English the help they needed. A half-century later, as a brutal war flared between the English colonists and a confederation of New England Indians, the wisdom of Massasoit's diplomatic gamble seemed less clear. Five decades of English immigration, mistreatment, lethal epidemics and widespread environmental degradation had brought the Indians and their way of life to the brink of disaster. Led by Metacom, Massasoit's son (actor Annowon Weeden, Mashpee Wampanoag), the Wampanoag and their Native allies fought back against the English, nearly pushing them into the sea.

In the spring of 1805, Tenskwatawa (actor Billy Merasty, Cree First Nation), a Shawnee, fell into a trance so deep that those around him believed he had died. When he finally stirred, the young prophet claimed to have met the Master of Life. He told those who crowded around that the Indians were in dire straits because they had adopted white culture and rejected traditional spiritual ways. For several years, Tenskwatawa's spiritual revival movement drew thousands of adherents from tribes across the Midwest. His elder brother, Tecumseh (actor Michael Greyeyes, Plains Cree), would harness the energies of that renewal to create an unprecedented military and political confederacy of often antagonistic tribes, all committed to stopping white westward expansion. The brothers came closer than anyone since to creating an Indian nation that would exist alongside and separate from the United States. The dream of an independent Indian state may have died at the Battle of the Thames, when Tecumseh was killed fighting alongside his British allies, but the great Shawnee warrior would live on as a potent symbol of Native pride and pan-Indian identity.

The Cherokee would call it Nu-No-Du-Na Tlo-Hi-Lu, "The Trail Where They Cried." On May 26, 1838, federal troops forced thousands of Cherokee from their homes in the southeastern United States, driving them toward Indian Territory in eastern Oklahoma. More than 4,000 died of disease and starvation along the way. For years, the Cherokee had resisted removal from their land in every way they knew. Convinced that white America rejected Native Americans because they were "savages," Cherokee leaders established a republic with a European-style legislature and legal system. Many Cherokee became Christian and adopted westernized education for their children. Their visionary principal chief, John Ross (actor Freddy Douglas), would even take the Cherokee case to the Supreme Court, where he won crucial recognition of tribal sovereignty. The Supreme Court ruling proved no deterrent to President Andrew Jackson's demands that the Cherokee leave their ancestral lands. A complex debate divided the Cherokee Nation, with Chief Ross urging the Cherokee to stay and Major Ridge (actor Wes Studi, Cherokee), a respected tribal leader, urging the tribe to move west and rebuild, going so far as to sign a removal treaty himself without the authority to do so. Though in the end the Cherokees' embrace of "civilization" and their landmark legal victory proved no match for white land hunger and military power, the Cherokee people were able, with characteristic ingenuity, to build a new life in Oklahoma, far from the land that had sustained them for generations.

Length: 90 Airdate: 5/11/2009 9:00 PM

In February of 1909, the indomitable Chiricahua Apache warrior and war shaman Geronimo lay on his deathbed. He summoned his nephew to his side, whispering, "I should never have surrendered. I should have fought until I was the last man alive." It was an admission of regret from a man whose insistent pursuit of military resistance in the face of overwhelming odds confounded not only his Mexican and American enemies, but many of his fellow Apaches as well. Born around 1820, Geronimo grew into a leading warrior and healer. But after his tribe was relocated to an Arizona reservation in 1872, he became a focus of the fury of terrified white settlers and of the growing tensions that divided Apaches struggling to survive under almost unendurable pressures. To angry whites, Geronimo became the archfiend, perpetrator of unspeakable savage cruelties. To his supporters, he remained the embodiment of proud resistance, the upholder of the old Chiricahua ways. To other Apaches, especially those who had come to see the white man's path as the only viable road, Geronimo was a stubborn troublemaker, unbalanced by his unquenchable thirst for vengeance, whose actions needlessly brought the enemy's wrath down on his own people. At a time when surrender to the reservation and acceptance of the white man's civilization seemed to be the Indians' only realistic options, Geronimo and his tiny band of Chiricahuas fought on. The final holdouts, they became the last Native-American fighting force to capitulate formally to the government of the United States.

A home of your own: that's the American dream. But what happens when the dreamers are immigrants, factory workers and Communists? Director Michal Goldman traces the history of 'The Coops,' a cooperative apartment complex built in the Bronx by Jewish garment workers. The film tracks the rise and fall of the community from the 1920s into the 1950s, bearing witness to lives lived across barriers of race, convention and sometimes even common sense.

Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? Covering the week: Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

Episode Title: Geronimo

Length: 90

Airdate: 5/11/2009 9:00 PM

Service: PBS

Format: Documentary

In February of 1909, the indomitable Chiricahua Apache warrior and war shaman Geronimo lay on his deathbed. He summoned his nephew to his side, whispering, "I should never have surrendered. I should have fought until I was the last man alive." It was an admission of regret from a man whose insistent pursuit of military resistance in the face of overwhelming odds confounded not only his Mexican and American enemies, but many of his fellow Apaches as well. Born around 1820, Geronimo grew into a leading warrior and healer. But after his tribe was relocated to an Arizona reservation in 1872, he became a focus of the fury of terrified white settlers and of the growing tensions that divided Apaches struggling to survive under almost unendurable pressures. To angry whites, Geronimo became the archfiend, perpetrator of unspeakable savage cruelties. To his supporters, he remained the embodiment of proud resistance, the upholder of the old Chiricahua ways. To other Apaches, especially those who had come to see the white man's path as the only viable road, Geronimo was a stubborn troublemaker, unbalanced by his unquenchable thirst for vengeance, whose actions needlessly brought the enemy's wrath down on his own people. At a time when surrender to the reservation and acceptance of the white man's civilization seemed to be the Indians' only realistic options, Geronimo and his tiny band of Chiricahuas fought on. The final holdouts, they became the last Native-American fighting force to capitulate formally to the government of the United States.

Episode Title: Wounded Knee

Length: 90

Airdate: 5/11/2009 10:30 PM

Service: PBS

Format: Documentary

On the night of February 27, 1973, 54 cars rolled, horns blaring, into a small hamlet on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. Within hours, some 200 Oglala Lakota and American Indian Movement (AIM) activists had seized the few major buildings in town and police had cordoned off the area. The occupation of Wounded Knee had begun. Demanding redress for grievances -- some going back more than 100 years -- the protesters captured the world's attention for 71 gripping days. With heavily armed federal troops tightening a cordon around meagerly supplied, cold, hungry Indians, the event invited media comparisons with the massacre of Indian men, women and children at Wounded Knee almost a century earlier. In telling the story of this iconic moment, the final episode of WE SHALL REMAIN examines the broad political and economic forces that led to the emergence of AIM in the late 1960s, as well as the immediate events -- a murder and an apparent miscarriage of justice -- that triggered the takeover. Though the federal government failed to make good on many of the promises that ended the siege, the event succeeded in bringing the desperate conditions of Indian reservation life to the nation's attention. Perhaps even more important, it proved that despite centuries of encroachment, warfare and neglect, Indians remained a vital force in the life of America.

From the first Chinese-American film produced in 1916 to Ang Lee's triumphant Brokeback Mountain nine decades later, "Hollywood Chinese" brings together a fascinating group of actors, writers, directors -- and iconic film images -- to examine how Chinese people have contributed to and been portrayed in an industry that was often ignorant about and dismissive of race. Moving far beyond the stereotypical and exotic images of Suzy Wong and Bruce Lee, such artists as Wayne Wang, Joan Chen, David Henry Hwang, Nancy Kwan and Amy Tan, among many others, share their experiences of being "the other." Often humorous, sometimes maddening, but always inspiring, these storytellers and film clips from more than 90 films -- some dating back to the 1890s -- weave a rich tapestry and complex history.

The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

"Muhammad Ali: Made in Miami" explores the critical role that Miami played in the evolution of one of the most significant cultural figures of our time: Muhammad Ali (né Cassius Clay). The film chronicles Cassius Clay's arrival in Miami in the fall of 1960 (fresh from earning a gold medal in the Rome Olympics), his life in Overtown -- a neighborhood that was considered "Harlem South" and a vibrant center of black entertainment and commerce -- and his affiliation with the famed Fifth Street Gym in Miami Beach. Over the course of the next few years -- coinciding with the height of the national civil rights movement -- Clay evolved both professionally and politically, piling up victories in the ring and adopting the black separatist teachings of the Nation of Islam. As "Muhammad Ali: Made in Miami" makes clear, it was in this period that Cassius Clay became Muhammad Ali.

NOVA presents the remarkable life story of Percy Julian -- not only one of the great African-American scientists of the 20th century, but an industrialist, self-made millionaire, humanitarian and civil-rights pioneer. The grandson of Alabama slaves, Julian won worldwide acclaim for his research in chemistry and broke the color barrier in American science more than a decade before Jackie Robinson did so in baseball. He discovered a way to turn soybeans into synthetic steroids on an industrial scale, enabling drugs like cortisone to be widely available to millions. In a special two-hour presentation, NOVA traces the vivid and moving saga of Julian's dazzling scientific achievements and sometimes stormy personal life. His largely unknown story is brought to life with vivid period re-enactments based on newly accessible family archives and interviews with dozens of colleagues and relatives. Tony Award-winning actor Ruben Santiago-Hudson stars as Julian. Courtney B. Vance narrates.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Thousands of U.S. troops are getting discharged out of the Army. Many suffer from post traumatic stress disorders and brain injuries, and haven't been getting the care they need. The Army's been claiming these discharged soldiers had pre-existing mental illnesses. But health advocates say these are wrongful discharges, a way for the army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment to which they're entitled. NOW covered this issue last summer, and this week we revisit the Army's controversial position and follow up with affected soldiers we met. As a result of the media attention from our report and others, the Department of Defense revised its criteria for diagnosing pre-existing conditions and, now, fewer soldiers are receiving the diagnosis, making more of them eligible for care. This is an update to the NOW investigation "Fighting the Army." Also this week, we update how the distant Pacific nation of Kiribati is dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth due to global warming. Kiribati President Anote Tong is now considering purchasing land abroad to save his people. He says his pleas for international support have largely fallen on deaf ears. Experts predict millions of people will become climate change refugees in the years to come. This is an update to the show "Paradise Lost."

Americans are addicted to coal - it powers half of all our electricity, and is both plentiful and cheap. In fact, some call America the "Saudi Arabia of Coal." But are we paying too high an environmental price for all this cheap energy? With carbon emissions caps high on the Obama Administration's agenda, coal is in the crosshairs of the energy debate. This week, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels to Wyoming to take a hard look at the coal industry there and its case that it can produce "clean coal" - coal that can be burned without releasing carbon into the atmosphere. President Obama has been outspoken in his support for "clean coal" technology, but some say the whole concept is more of a public relations campaign than an energy solution. As part of the report, Hinojosa talks with Wyoming Governor Dave Freudenthal and Jeff Goodell, the author of "Big Coal," who says that carbon dioxide emissions generated from coal contribute to global warming. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed? Covering the week: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

And the hits just keep on coming from nuclear threats to pirate threats. Where to begin? Where will it end? We take a look tonight on "Washington Week." President Obama is tackling his to-do list. The challenges are many - redefining the U.S. role on the world stage. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The stereotypes of the United States are out there. I'm here to tell you that that's not the country that I know and it's not the country that I love." Coping with nuclear uncertainty. Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "We don't know what to believe about the Iranian program." Figuring out when it helps and when it hurts to keep campaign promises on foreign policy. And learning how to use a strong second in command to push back." Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "The last administration left us in a weaker posture than we've been at any time since World War II, less regarded in the world." As the challenges take shape, so do the responses. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Christi Parsons of the Chicago Tribune, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

Episode Title: Trail of Tears

Length: 90

Airdate: 4/27/2009 9:00 PM

Service: PBS

Format: Documentary

The Cherokee would call it Nu-No-Du-Na Tlo-Hi-Lu, "The Trail Where They Cried." On May 26, 1838, federal troops forced thousands of Cherokee from their homes in the southeastern United States, driving them toward Indian Territory in eastern Oklahoma. More than 4,000 died of disease and starvation along the way. For years, the Cherokee had resisted removal from their land in every way they knew. Convinced that white America rejected Native Americans because they were "savages," Cherokee leaders established a republic with a European-style legislature and legal system. Many Cherokee became Christian and adopted westernized education for their children. Their visionary principal chief, John Ross (actor Freddy Douglas), would even take the Cherokee case to the Supreme Court, where he won crucial recognition of tribal sovereignty. The Supreme Court ruling proved no deterrent to President Andrew Jackson's demands that the Cherokee leave their ancestral lands. A complex debate divided the Cherokee Nation, with Chief Ross urging the Cherokee to stay and Major Ridge (actor Wes Studi, Cherokee), a respected tribal leader, urging the tribe to move west and rebuild, going so far as to sign a removal treaty himself without the authority to do so. Though in the end the Cherokees' embrace of "civilization" and their landmark legal victory proved no match for white land hunger and military power, the Cherokee people were able, with characteristic ingenuity, to build a new life in Oklahoma, far from the land that had sustained them for generations.

Episode Title: Geronimo

Length: 90

Airdate: 5/11/2009 9:00 PM

Service: PBS

Format: Documentary

In February of 1909, the indomitable Chiricahua Apache warrior and war shaman Geronimo lay on his deathbed. He summoned his nephew to his side, whispering, "I should never have surrendered. I should have fought until I was the last man alive." It was an admission of regret from a man whose insistent pursuit of military resistance in the face of overwhelming odds confounded not only his Mexican and American enemies, but many of his fellow Apaches as well. Born around 1820, Geronimo grew into a leading warrior and healer. But after his tribe was relocated to an Arizona reservation in 1872, he became a focus of the fury of terrified white settlers and of the growing tensions that divided Apaches struggling to survive under almost unendurable pressures. To angry whites, Geronimo became the archfiend, perpetrator of unspeakable savage cruelties. To his supporters, he remained the embodiment of proud resistance, the upholder of the old Chiricahua ways. To other Apaches, especially those who had come to see the white man's path as the only viable road, Geronimo was a stubborn troublemaker, unbalanced by his unquenchable thirst for vengeance, whose actions needlessly brought the enemy's wrath down on his own people. At a time when surrender to the reservation and acceptance of the white man's civilization seemed to be the Indians' only realistic options, Geronimo and his tiny band of Chiricahuas fought on. The final holdouts, they became the last Native-American fighting force to capitulate formally to the government of the United States.

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

On the night of February 27, 1973, 54 cars rolled, horns blaring, into a small hamlet on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. Within hours, some 200 Oglala Lakota and American Indian Movement (AIM) activists had seized the few major buildings in town and police had cordoned off the area. The occupation of Wounded Knee had begun. Demanding redress for grievances -- some going back more than 100 years -- the protesters captured the world's attention for 71 gripping days. With heavily armed federal troops tightening a cordon around meagerly supplied, cold, hungry Indians, the event invited media comparisons with the massacre of Indian men, women and children at Wounded Knee almost a century earlier. In telling the story of this iconic moment, the final episode of WE SHALL REMAIN examines the broad political and economic forces that led to the emergence of AIM in the late 1960s, as well as the immediate events -- a murder and an apparent miscarriage of justice -- that triggered the takeover. Though the federal government failed to make good on many of the promises that ended the siege, the event succeeded in bringing the desperate conditions of Indian reservation life to the nation's attention. Perhaps even more important, it proved that despite centuries of encroachment, warfare and neglect, Indians remained a vital force in the life of America.

Length: 180

Airdate: 5/18/2009 9:00 PM

Service: PBS

Format: Documentary

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor - Edward M. Kennedy - surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

Series Title: Frontline Episode Title: The Madoff Affair Length: 60

Airdate: 5/19/2009 10:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

In the mid-1960s, Bernard Madoff tapped money from Jewish businessmen at exclusive country clubs with the promise of steady guaranteed returns on their investments. He then set his sights on Europe and Latin America, brokering deals with powerful hedge fund managers and feeder funds from Buenos Aires to Geneva. Billions of dollars were channeled to Madoff's investment firm, and his feeders became fabulously wealthy. The competition wondered how the man could produce such steady returns in good times and bad. There were allegations that Madoff was "front-running" or operating a Ponzi scheme, which the SEC investigated several times over the last two decades. But Madoff remained untouched until December 11, 2008, when he admitted it was all "one big lie." FRONTLINE producers Martin Smith and Marcela Gaviria unravel the story behind the world's first truly global Ponzi scheme -- a deception that lasted longer, reached wider, and cut deeper than any other business scandal in history.

How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW. "Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already."

I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

Host and veteran correspondent Miles O'Brien goes to three very different American cities -- Denver, New York and Portland, and their surrounding suburbs -- to look at each as a microcosm of the challenges and possibilities the country faces as citizens, local and federal officials, and planners struggle to manage a growing America with innovative transportation and sustainable land use policies. With roads clogged and congested, gas prices uncertain, smog and pollution creating health problems like asthma, cities that once built infrastructure to serve only automobiles and trucks are now looking to innovative new forms of transportation systems -- like trolleys, light rail, pedestrian walkways and bike paths.

In the mid-1960s, Bernard Madoff tapped money from Jewish businessmen at exclusive country clubs with the promise of steady guaranteed returns on their investments. He then set his sights on Europe and Latin America, brokering deals with powerful hedge fund managers and feeder funds from Buenos Aires to Geneva. Billions of dollars were channeled to Madoff's investment firm, and his feeders became fabulously wealthy. The competition wondered how the man could produce such steady returns in good times and bad. There were allegations that Madoff was "front-running" or operating a Ponzi scheme, which the SEC investigated several times over the last two decades. But Madoff remained untouched until December 11, 2008, when he admitted it was all "one big lie." FRONTLINE producers Martin Smith and Marcela Gaviria unravel the story behind the world's first truly global Ponzi scheme -- a deception that lasted longer, reached wider, and cut deeper than any other business scandal in history.

As a nervous world watches a new branch of the Taliban gain ground -- and the United States steps up its pressure on the Pakistani government to confront the militants' mounting threat -- FRONTLINE/WORLD reports from the front lines of what has become, perhaps, the most volatile conflict in the world. First, a timely rebroadcast of Sharmeen Obaid-Chinoy's dangerous journey through a country under siege -- from Pakistan's lawless tribal areas, where the Army is battling the Taliban; to the Swat Valley, where the Taliban are fighting to keep control; to the major cities, which the Taliban now have in their sights. Also in this hour, correspondent David Montero investigates the mysterious death of a journalist -- and a personal friend -- killed while reporting from ground zero of the Army's campaign against the Taliban in the Swat Valley. And, finally, a new dispatch from Sharmeen Obaid-Chinoy on the coming battle for hearts and minds in Pakistan's largest city.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put our troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president -- Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority -- health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history."

That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb.

Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale.

Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

And the hits just keep on coming from nuclear threats to pirate threats. Where to begin? Where will it end? We take a look tonight on "Washington Week." President Obama is tackling his to-do list. The challenges are many - redefining the U.S. role on the world stage. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The stereotypes of the United States are out there. I'm here to tell you that that's not the country that I know and it's not the country that I love." Coping with nuclear uncertainty. Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "We don't know what to believe about the Iranian program." Figuring out when it helps and when it hurts to keep campaign promises on foreign policy. And learning how to use a strong second in command to push back." Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "The last administration left us in a weaker posture than we've been at any time since World War II, less regarded in the world." As the challenges take shape, so do the responses. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Christi Parsons of the Chicago Tribune, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Seventy-five percent of the world's fresh water is stored in glaciers, but scientists predict climate change will cause some of the world's largest glaciers to completely melt by 2030. What effect will this have on our daily lives? With global warming falling low on a national list of American concerns, it's time to take a deeper look at what could be a global calamity in the making. This week, in a special one-hour NOW on PBS, David Brancaccio and environmentalist Conrad Anker -- one of the world's leading high altitude climbers -- trek to the Gangotri Glacier in the Himalayan Mountains, the source of the Ganges River, to witness the great melt and its dire consequences first-hand. The two also visit Montana's Glacier National Park to see the striking effects of global warming closer to home and learn how melting glaciers across the globe can have a direct impact on food prices in the U.S. Along the way, Brancaccio and Anker talk to both scientists and swamis, bathe in the River Ganges, view a water shortage calamity in India, and come as close as any human can to seeing the tangible costs of climate change. "We can't take climate change and put it on the back burner," warns Anker. "If we don't address climate change, we won't be around as humans."

In 1926, just a few months before her death, Will Rogers described Annie Oakley as "the greatest woman rifle shot the world has ever produced." As the star attraction of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, she thrilled audiences around the world with her daring shooting feats and her act helped fuel turn-of-the-century nostalgia for the vanished, mythical world of the American West. Over time she became an American legend -- the loud, brassy, cocksure shooter celebrated in the musical "Annie Get Your Gun." But that legend had little to do with the real Annie Oakley. Although famous as a Western sharpshooter, Oakley lived her entire life east of the Mississippi. A champion in a man's sport, she forever changed ideas about the abilities of women, yet she opposed female suffrage. Her fame and fortune came from her skill with guns, yet she was a Quaker. This probing AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production examines the dramatic life of a uniquely American icon whose complex character manifested many of the paradoxes of the nation.

The lodge's isolation yields the opportunity to see one of the rarest animals on the planet: the white-colored Kermode, or "Spirit Bear." Further east, in Alberta's rocky mountains, is Sundance Lodge, accessible only on horseback, and a site where some of the last real cowboys share stories of early riders who struck off from the known line of Canada's first transcontinental railway into this vast and uncertain territory. Eastern Canada also has its share of isolated adventure destinations, including La Seigneurie du Triton, a late- 1800s fishing club that once hosted prestigious guests such as Harry Truman, Theodore Roosevelt and former British Prime Minister Winston Churchill. Guests tour the area on Rabaskas, large Indian canoes, take guided expeditions in search of wild mushrooms and learn the elegant art of fly-casting.

Length: 60 Airdate: 5/15/2009 2:00 AM

Service: PBS

Format: Documentary

From back-country skiing in Yosemite National Park to pole fishing off a Florida island or dog sledding in northern Minnesota, each of the isolated regions featured in this program offers travelers unique adventure opportunities. After a night at Alaska's historic Winterlake Lodge, a snowy ridge walk offers stunning views of Mount McKinley, the tallest peak in North America. A getaway to a warmer climate leads to the Camelot Lodge on the banks of the Colorado River near Moab, Utah. Traveling a desert trail on camelback leads to ancient Indian tool sites and a glimpse of 1,000-year-old petroglyphs inscribed on a canyon wall. Among other stunning stops is a visit to Tarpon Lodge, located on Pine Island off the southwest Florida coast. The former 1920s fishing camp offers excursions to nearby Cabbage Key for mangrove fishing, nature walks and stellar sunset views from the island's landmark water tower.

"Muhammad Ali: Made in Miami" explores the critical role that Miami played in the evolution of one of the most significant cultural figures of our time: Muhammad Ali (né Cassius Clay). The film chronicles Cassius Clay's arrival in Miami in the fall of 1960 (fresh from earning a gold medal in the Rome Olympics), his life in Overtown -- a neighborhood that was considered "Harlem South" and a vibrant center of black entertainment and commerce -- and his affiliation with the famed Fifth Street Gym in Miami Beach. Over the course of the next few years -- coinciding with the height of the national civil rights movement -- Clay evolved both professionally and politically, piling up victories in the ring and adopting the black separatist teachings of the Nation of Islam. As "Muhammad Ali: Made in Miami" makes clear, it was in this period that Cassius Clay became Muhammad Ali.

Throughout his masterful career, Michelangelo glorified the church, etching Catholic ideals into the sculptures and artwork that defined religion for the masses. Now, 500 years after his death, art historian Antonio Forcellino has found evidence of Michelangelo's involvement with a clandestine fellowship trying to reform the Catholic Church from within. The group's radical ideas and accusations of corruption were considered heretical and punishable by death. Michelangelo's involvement put him at dangerous odds with powerful officials who held his livelihood -- and life -- in their hands. "Michelangelo Revealed" paints a stunning new picture of brave religious expression, personal vendettas, careful cover-ups and a most gifted artist desperately trying to reconcile his loyalty to the church with his own personal belief about the road to salvation.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Series Title: Appalachia: A History of Mountains and People Episode Title: Time and Terrain

Length: 60 Airdate: 4/10/2009 2:00 AM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

The first hour of this series about the deep and surprising history of Appalachia explores the region's unique mosaic of plant, animal and early human life. As Pulitzer Prize-winning scientist E.O. Wilson notes, "A history of a region includes not just the people, but the creatures and the living environment." Geology is destiny. The Appalachian Mountains hold their treasure of mineral and timber wealth because they were born of a primeval ocean. Early North Americans settled here because giant mammals gave them vast food supplies. Over thousands of years, they formed highly sophisticated cultures, until 1540 when Hernando de Soto ruined them in his violent, single-minded hunt for gold. The tribes that remained after de Soto's brutal swath adopted the gun as their chief technology. England, Spain and France would court these skilled hunters and warriors as allies in the early struggle to dominate America. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

In May 2008, a scientific team made worldwide headlines by announcing evidence of a previously unsuspected impact from space that had devastated prehistoric North America at the end of the last Ice Age. According to this controversial new claim, the extinction of more than 34 types of large prehistoric animals (or "megafauna") was caused not by climate change or the arrival of the first human hunters, but by the massive breakup of a comet over the Great Lakes region. NOVA explores this provocative new theory about what killed off America's mammoths and may have come close to extinguishing early human populations as well.

Dr. Larry Brilliant is an epidemiologist, former Chief Philanthropist at Google.org, and was a central figure in the World Health Organization's successful smallpox eradication program. Brilliant sheds light on high-tech tools that are making it easier for scientists to detect global outbreaks, the critical importance of early detection and early response, and how the current pandemic has yet to show its real hand. "Anyone who tells you that they know that this is a mild pandemic, and the WHO has overreacted, they don't know. Anyone who tells you that the WHO and CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention) have underestimated it, they don't know," Brilliant tells NOW. "We're all going to find out at the same time...we're all in it together." The show also features vital insight from Dr. Nathan Wolfe, a Stanford University epidemiologist who specializes in hunting viruses to their source.

Mark Oliver Everett, better known as E, is the lead singer of U.S. cult band the EELS. What most of his fans don't know is that Mark's father, Hugh Everett III, was one of America's top quantum physicists. In 1957, Hugh Everett came up with a revolutionary theory that predicted the existence of parallel universes. The idea quickly seeped into popular culture, but only recently has it been accepted by mainstream physicists. The film follows the wry and charismatic Mark, who had been estranged from his father, as he travels across America to learn about the father he never knew. It is only by entering the paradoxical world of quantum mechanics that Mark can hope to understand why he was such a stranger to his own father.

She was described in the press as the "Baby of the Century." When Louise Brown, the world's first successful test tube baby, was born in Great Britain on July 25, 1978, the event was heralded as the beginning of a technological revolution in human reproduction. It was also the culmination of a decade-long effort, involving scientists on both sides of the Atlantic, to help a woman conceive through in vitro fertilization, or IVF. This is the story of two doctors -- New York gynecologist Landrum Shettles and British physiologist Robert Edwards -- whose work became the locus of debate over the limits of science and a precursor of the current debate over cloning and stem cell research.

On June 5, 1989, one day after Chinese troops expelled thousands of demonstrators from Tiananmen Square in Beijing; a solitary, unarmed protester stood his ground before a column of tanks advancing down the Avenue of Eternal Peace. Captured by Western photographers watching nearby, this extraordinary confrontation became an icon of the fight for freedom around the world. Veteran filmmaker Antony Thomas investigates the mystery of the tank man -- his identity, his fate, and his significance for the Chinese leadership. The search for the tank man reveals China's startling social compact -- its embrace of capitalism while dissent is squashed -- designed to stifle the nationwide unrest of 1989. This policy has allowed educated elites and entrepreneurs to profit handsomely, while the majority of Chinese still face brutal working conditions and low wages, and all Chinese must endure strict political and social controls. Some of these controls regulate speech on the Internet -- and have generated criticism over the involvement of major U.S. corporations such as Yahoo!, Cisco, Microsoft, and Google.

NOVA presents the remarkable life story of Percy Julian -- not only one of the great African-American scientists of the 20th century, but an industrialist, self-made millionaire, humanitarian and civil-rights pioneer. The grandson of Alabama slaves, Julian won worldwide acclaim for his research in chemistry and broke the color barrier in American science more than a decade before Jackie Robinson did so in baseball. He discovered a way to turn soybeans into synthetic steroids on an industrial scale, enabling drugs like cortisone to be widely available to millions. In a special two-hour presentation, NOVA traces the vivid and moving saga of Julian's dazzling scientific achievements and sometimes stormy personal life. His largely unknown story is brought to life with vivid period re-enactments based on newly accessible family archives and interviews with dozens of colleagues and relatives. Tony Award-winning actor Ruben Santiago-Hudson stars as Julian. Courtney B. Vance narrates.

Every so often a giant emerges on the stage of science, someone who transcends the narrow boundaries of a particular line of research and alters our perspective on the world. E.O. Wilson is such a man. In "Lord of the Ants," NOVA profiles this soft-spoken Southerner renowned for his scientific study of ants that led to his 1975 book "Sociobiology: The New Synthesis," where he put forth the notion that evolutionary principles could explain social behavior throughout the animal kingdom, including in humans. Though sociobiology was a controversial new discipline at the time, today experimental science shows that genes do play a role in aspects of human behavior. E.O. Wilson is an icon of our times: a lord of the ants who sought to explain nature on earth and who now fights for its survival through his worldwide conservation efforts. Actor and environmentalist Harrison Ford narrates this engaging portrait of a ceaselessly active scientist and eloquent writer, who has accumulated two Pulitzer Prizes among his many other honors.

An estimated half-million women are trafficked annually for the purpose of sexual slavery. The women are kidnapped -- or lured by traffickers who prey on their dreams of employment abroad -- then they are "exported" to Europe, the Middle East, the United States and elsewhere, where they are sold to pimps, drugged, terrorized, locked in brothels and raped repeatedly. In Eastern Europe, since the fall of communism, sex trafficking has become the fastest growing form of organized crime, with Moldova and Ukraine widely seen as the centers of the global trade in women and girls. FRONTLINE presents a unique hidden camera look at this world of sexual slavery, talking with traffickers and their victims, and exposing the government indifference that allows the abuses to continue virtually unchecked. "Sex Slaves" also follows the remarkable journey of one man determined to find his trafficked wife by posing as a trafficker himself to buy back her freedom.

From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed? Covering the week: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already.

I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb. Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

In March of 1621, in what is now southeastern Massachusetts, Massasoit (actor Marcos Akiaten, Chiricauha Apache), the leading sachem of the Wampanoag, sat down to negotiate with a ragged group of English colonists. Hungry, dirty and sick, the pale-skinned foreigners were struggling to stay alive; they were in desperate need of Native help. Massasoit faced problems of his own. His people had lately been ravaged by unexplained sickness, leaving them vulnerable to the rival Narragansett to the west. The Wampanoag sachem calculated that a tactical alliance with the foreigners would provide a way to protect his people and hold his enemies at bay. He agreed to give the English the help they needed. A half-century later, as a brutal war flared between the English colonists and a confederation of New England Indians, the wisdom of Massasoit's diplomatic gamble seemed less clear. Five decades of English immigration, mistreatment, lethal epidemics and widespread environmental degradation had brought the Indians and their way of life to the brink of disaster. Led by Metacom, Massasoit's son (actor Annowon Weeden, Mashpee Wampanoag), the Wampanoag and their Native allies fought back against the English, nearly pushing them into the sea.

Length: 90 Airdate: 4/20/2009 9:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

In the spring of 1805, Tenskwatawa (actor Billy Merasty, Cree First Nation), a Shawnee, fell into a trance so deep that those around him believed he had died. When he finally stirred, the young prophet claimed to have met the Master of Life. He told those who crowded around that the Indians were in dire straits because they had adopted white culture and rejected traditional spiritual ways. For several years, Tenskwatawa's spiritual revival movement drew thousands of adherents from tribes across the Midwest. His elder brother, Tecumseh (actor Michael Greyeyes, Plains Cree), would harness the energies of that renewal to create an unprecedented military and political confederacy of often antagonistic tribes, all committed to stopping white westward expansion. The brothers came closer than anyone since to creating an Indian nation that would exist alongside and separate from the United States. The dream of an independent Indian state may have died at the Battle of the Thames, when Tecumseh was killed fighting alongside his British allies, but the great Shawnee warrior would live on as a potent symbol of Native pride and pan-Indian identity.

Length: 60 Airdate: 4/17/2009 2:00 AM Service: PBS Format: Documentary

The second part of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia traces the story of the region from the rumblings of Revolutionary War through Andrew Jackson's forced relocation of the Cherokee people in 1831. Appalachia's early settlers hand-cut trails through steep terrain covered with enormous trees and teeming with wild animals. They weren't about to take orders from Redcoats. When a few hundred angry mountain men handily beat the regiment of a pompous British major, they changed the course of history. Contrary to current stereotypes, the colonists saw Appalachia as a source of great wealth. Her riches seduced early Americans, from the legendary adventurer Daniel Boone to naturalist William Bartram to a young land surveyor named George Washington. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Thousands of U.S. troops are getting discharged out of the Army. Many suffer from post traumatic stress disorders and brain injuries, and haven't been getting the care they need. The Army's been claiming these discharged soldiers had pre-existing mental illnesses. But health advocates say these are wrongful discharges, a way for the army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment to which they're entitled. NOW covered this issue last summer, and this week we revisit the Army's controversial position and follow up with affected soldiers we met. As a result of the media attention from our report and others, the Department of Defense revised its criteria for diagnosing pre-existing conditions and, now, fewer soldiers are receiving the diagnosis, making more of them eligible for care. This is an update to the NOW investigation "Fighting the Army." Also this week, we update how the distant Pacific nation of Kiribati is dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth due to global warming. Kiribati President Anote Tong is now considering purchasing land abroad to save his people. He says his pleas for international support have largely fallen on deaf ears. Experts predict millions of people will become climate change refugees in the years to come. This is an update to the show "Paradise Lost."

Airdate: 4/5/2009 3:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Other

This special, featuring Queen Latifah and John Mayer, tells stories of service members who return home with injuries - both visible and invisible - and explores their families' struggles to find a "new normal." The program focuses on the challenges faced by the injured soldiers and their families; salutes their extraordinary courage; offers the general public ways to support service members in the community; and provides a brief but powerful glimpse into the lives of these remarkable families. With help from Elmo, Rosita and their SESAME STREET friends, COMING HOME gives voice to the children as they play a central role in the family's adjustment process and encourages them to be what they are: kids.

And the hits just keep on coming from nuclear threats to pirate threats. Where to begin? Where will it end? We take a look tonight on "Washington Week." President Obama is tackling his to-do list. The challenges are many - redefining the U.S. role on the world stage. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The stereotypes of the United States are out there. I'm here to tell you that that's not the country that I know and it's not the country that I love." Coping with nuclear uncertainty. Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "We don't know what to believe about the Iranian program." Figuring out when it helps and when it hurts to keep campaign promises on foreign policy. And learning how to use a strong second in command to push back." Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "The last administration left us in a weaker posture than we've been at any time since World War II, less regarded in the world." As the challenges take shape, so do the responses. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Christi Parsons of the Chicago Tribune, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

Episode Title: Tecumseh's Vision

Length: 90 Airdate: 4/20/2009 9:00 PM

Service: PBS

Format: Documentary

In the spring of 1805, Tenskwatawa (actor Billy Merasty, Cree First Nation), a Shawnee, fell into a trance so deep that those around him believed he had died. When he finally stirred, the young prophet claimed to have met the Master of Life. He told those who crowded around that the Indians were in dire straits because they had adopted white culture and rejected traditional spiritual ways. For several years, Tenskwatawa's spiritual revival movement drew thousands of adherents from tribes across the Midwest. His elder brother, Tecumseh (actor Michael Greyeyes, Plains Cree), would harness the energies of that renewal to create an unprecedented military and political confederacy of often antagonistic tribes, all committed to stopping white westward expansion. The brothers came closer than anyone since to creating an Indian nation that would exist alongside and separate from the United States. The dream of an independent Indian state may have died at the Battle of the Thames, when Tecumseh was killed fighting alongside his British allies, but the great Shawnee warrior would live on as a potent symbol of Native pride and pan-Indian identity.

Episode Title: Geronimo

Length: 90 Airdate: 5/11/2009 9:00 PM

Service: PBS

Format: Documentary

In February of 1909, the indomitable Chiricahua Apache warrior and war shaman Geronimo lay on his deathbed. He summoned his nephew to his side, whispering, "I should never have surrendered. I should have fought until I was the last man alive." It was an admission of regret from a man whose insistent pursuit of military resistance in the face of overwhelming odds confounded not only his Mexican and American enemies, but many of his fellow Apaches as well. Born around 1820, Geronimo grew into a leading warrior and healer. But after his tribe was relocated to an Arizona reservation in 1872, he became a focus of the fury of terrified white settlers and of the growing tensions that divided Apaches struggling to survive under almost unendurable pressures. To angry whites, Geronimo became the archfiend, perpetrator of unspeakable savage cruelties. To his supporters, he remained the embodiment of proud resistance, the upholder of the old Chiricahua ways. To other Apaches, especially those who had come to see the white man's path as the only viable road, Geronimo was a stubborn troublemaker, unbalanced by his unquenchable thirst for vengeance, whose actions needlessly brought the enemy's wrath down on his own people. At a time when surrender to the reservation and acceptance of the white man's civilization seemed to be the Indians' only realistic options, Geronimo and his tiny band of Chiricahuas fought on. The final holdouts, they became the last Native-American fighting force to capitulate formally to the government of the United States.

Episode Title: New Green World

Length: 60 Airdate: 4/17/2009 2:00 AM

Service: PBS

Format: Documentary

The second part of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia traces the story of the region from the rumblings of Revolutionary War through Andrew Jackson's forced relocation of the Cherokee people in 1831. Appalachia's early settlers hand-cut trails through steep terrain covered with enormous trees and teeming with wild animals. They weren't about to take orders from Redcoats. When a few hundred angry mountain men handily beat the regiment of a pompous British major, they changed the course of history. Contrary to current stereotypes, the colonists saw Appalachia as a source of great wealth. Her riches seduced early Americans, from the legendary adventurer Daniel Boone to naturalist William Bartram to a young land surveyor named George Washington. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

A record 115,000 U.N. peacekeepers are now deployed in 20 countries, and their mission is more vital than ever. But critics and insiders alike are openly worried that the current peacekeeping model is overstretched -- and at risk of failure. This week, NOW travels to the Democratic Republic of the Congo to witness today's largest and most expensive peacekeeping operation. There, 17,000 U.N. troops are tasked with protecting millions of people over a rugged and dangerous territory the size of the Eastern United States. But the effort is struggling -- last November, local rebels massacred civilians less than a mile from one of the U.N. bases. How can U.N. peacekeeping be improved so that it fulfills its promise of protection to the world? In the summer of 1942, two ace fighter pilots -- one American and one Japanese -- faced off during a dramatic dogfight in the skies over Guadalcanal. Eventually the Japanese pilot shot down the American, who crash landed behind enemy lines but managed to escape before being captured. Using both pilots' comprehensive (but sometimes contradictory) memoirs, and following a forensic expedition to the recently-found American plane, "Dogfight Over Guadalcanal" examines and recreates every anxious second of the WWII showdown over the Pacific, revealing just how evenly matched the two men were and how they both survived, despite serious injuries.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. A record 115,000 U.N. peacekeepers are now deployed in 20 countries, and their mission is more vital than ever. But critics and insiders alike are openly worried that the current peacekeeping model is overstretched -- and at risk of failure. This week, NOW travels to the Democratic Republic of the Congo to witness today's largest and most expensive peacekeeping operation. There, 17,000 U.N. troops are tasked with protecting millions of people over a rugged and dangerous territory the size of the Eastern United States. But the effort is struggling -- last November, local rebels massacred civilians less than a mile from one of the U.N. bases. How can U.N. peacekeeping be improved so that it fulfills its promise of protection to the world? This show is a co-production with the Bureau for International Reporting (BIR), a non-profit video news production company.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Manhattan Project -- A contributor is certain that his father worked on the Manhattan Project during World War II. His father refused to talk about his war assignment, except to say that he sold his patent to the U.S. government for a single dollar. Along with the patent, the contributor has a letter from the Atomic Energy Commission stating that his father's patent had been declassified. Was this invention used to build the atomic bomb? To find out, HISTORY DETECTIVES host Wes Cowan travels to Oak Ridge, Tennessee, and discovers a plan to hide atomic secrets in plain sight. Galleon Shipwreck - A woman in Portland, Oregon, has a large chunk of what she believes is very old beeswax. This 23-pound block, dug up on the northern Oregon coast in the late 1930s, seems to have been deliberately carved with strange markings. For centuries, ships carried beeswax on trade routes from the Far East to the American Pacific Coast. Could this beeswax have been cargo on a legendary ship that foundered more than 300 years ago? And what do those odd markings mean? HISTORY DETECTIVES host Elyse Luray goes to the Bee Lab at Oregon State University to decipher where the beeswax came from and visits an archaeologist in Olympia, Washington, to track which ship may have brought it to the Oregon coast. Creole Poems - A HISTORY DETECTIVES fan from Chicago recently unearthed a French manuscript rolled in a cardboard tube. "Duplessis, " his great-grandmother's mother-in-laws surname, is jotted in a margin, and "Rouzan," his grandmother's maiden name, appears at the bottom of another page. No one in the family knows anything about it, but the contributor, who reads a little French, thinks he has a collection of love poems, possibly written to one of his relatives. What is this? And why has his family kept it for 160 years? The questions lead HISTORY DETECTIVES host Gwendolyn Wright to New Orleans and to a piece of family history the contributor had never known.

Airdate: 4/6/2009 9:00 PM Service: PBS Format: Documentary
In 1926, just a few months before her death, Will Rogers described Annie Oakley as "the greatest woman rifle shot the world has ever produced." As the star attraction of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, she thrilled audiences around the world with her daring shooting feats and her act helped fuel turn-of-the-century nostalgia for the vanished, mythical world of the American West. Over time she became an American legend -- the loud, brassy, cocksure shooter celebrated in the musical "Annie Get Your Gun." But that legend had little to do with the real Annie Oakley. Although famous as a Western sharpshooter, Oakley lived her entire life east of the Mississippi. A champion in a man's sport, she forever changed ideas about the abilities of women, yet she opposed female suffrage. Her fame and fortune came from her skill with guns, yet she was a Quaker. This probing AMERICAN EXPERIENCE production examines the dramatic life of a uniquely American icon whose complex character manifested many of the paradoxes of the nation.

A terrible statistic: one in six women will be a victim of rape or attempted rape in her lifetime. But an even more shocking reality: A backlog in processing rape kits--crucial evidence in arresting violent predators -- is delaying and sometimes denying justice for tens of thousands of American women. NOW travels to Los Angeles County to investigate why it has the largest known rape kit backlog in the country -- over 12,000 kits are sitting untested in police storage facilities. An internal audit found that more than 50 of these cases have exceeded the 10-year statute of limitations on rape. "The evidence that we're talking about represents human lives," Los Angeles Controller Laura Chick tells NOW. "Those are lives stacked up on the shelves waiting for justice." NOW talks with courageous rape survivors and law enforcement experts for insight and answers in this disturbing but important report. Are these women being victimized twice?

An estimated half-million women are trafficked annually for the purpose of sexual slavery. The women are kidnapped -- or lured by traffickers who prey on their dreams of employment abroad -- then they are "exported" to Europe, the Middle East, the United States and elsewhere, where they are sold to pimps, drugged, terrorized, locked in brothels and raped repeatedly. In Eastern Europe, since the fall of communism, sex trafficking has become the fastest growing form of organized crime, with Moldova and Ukraine widely seen as the centers of the global trade in women and girls. FRONTLINE presents a unique hidden camera look at this world of sexual slavery, talking with traffickers and their victims, and exposing the government indifference that allows the abuses to continue virtually unchecked. "Sex Slaves" also follows the remarkable journey of one man determined to find his trafficked wife by posing as a trafficker himself to buy back her freedom.

The murder of Dr. George Tiller has reignited the abortion debate, and raised the question: should violence against medical doctors who perform abortions be viewed and prosecuted as domestic terrorism? This week NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with two of the remaining handful of doctors who publicly acknowledge performing late abortions, including Leroy Carhart, a fellow doctor in Tiller's Wichita, Kansas clinic. Carhart discusses his vow to carry on Tiller's mission and what it's like for him and his family to live as "targets". The show also investigates claims that law enforcement dropped the ball when it came to stopping Tiller's alleged murderer, Scott Roeder. Hinojosa travels to Colorado as well to talk with Dr. Warren Hern, another late abortion provider who says he's been living "under siege" for decades. Dr. Hern works behind four layers of bulletproof windows and is now under round-the-clock federal protection. NOW goes into the eye of the abortion rights storm to see how Tiller's killing and its ramifications are impacting doctors, free speech, and a civilized society.

While America, a country of immigrants, has always championed the idea of inclusiveness, the outsider has been a source of constant amusement. Perhaps best epitomized today by characters in such blockbuster Judd Apatow comedies as "The 40 Year-Old Virgin," "Knocked Up" and "Superbad," this episode also looks back at the bespectacled wannabe (Harold Lloyd) and the vain coward (Bob Hope) as the outsiders of their day. Along with pioneering women in comedy like Phyllis Diller and truly zany characters who seem to have arrived from another planet (Jonathan Winters, Andy Kaufman, and Robin Williams), the great social upheaval of the 60s and 70s introduced counter-culture favorites Cheech & Chong, as well as superstar nerds like Woody Allen and "jerks" like Steve Martin--who ultimately became so popular that the idea of the outsider had to be re-cast.

How massive student loan debts are sinking American dreams and causing a national economic headache. This week, NOW follows the story of a single mother in Baltimore trying to dig herself out of more than $70,000 student loan debt. While issues of personal responsibility are debated, there's no question the high price of higher education is creating an ocean of student loan debt for people who can least afford it. How are the 70 million Americans with student debt frustrating America's economic recovery?

How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW. "Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."

Working in Pakistan after September 11, 2001, former Wall Street Journal reporter Asra Nomani faced a double shock: a surprise pregnancy and abandonment by the Pakistani man she thought would be her husband, then the murder of her dear friend Daniel Pearl at the hands of Muslim extremists. Still reeling, and with a son to raise, she returned to her hometown in West Virginia to find that the mosque had been taken over by men she saw as extremists. This documentary chronicles what happens when she decides to fight back -- angering even the mosque's moderates. As the film unfolds, it tells a story of competing paths to social change, American identity and the nature of religion itself.

War on Drugs in Mexico

Since his inauguration in December 2006, Mexico's President Calderon has taken direct action against corruption, arms and cash trafficking, drug cartels and their activities in Mexico. During this time of action, President Calderon has affected the earnings of these traffickers and it has sparked a reaction that is only expected to get worse. The level of violence Mexico is experiencing today has approached a new level. These acts of violence and assassinations target security forces as well as rival criminal gangs.

This is why the Merida initiative was developed. This multi-year program demonstrates the United States' commitment to work in partnership with governments in Mexico, the nations of Central America, the Dominican Republic and Haiti to confront criminal organizations.

The Merida Initiative will provide equipment and training in support of law enforcement operations and technical assistance to promote the long-term reform, oversight and professionalization of our partners' security agencies. In 2008, Congress approved an initial $400 million for Mexico and $65 million for Central America, the Dominican Republic and Haiti.

The Xochiquetzal dancers have entertained us throughout the state of Michigan for over three decades. This organization has made its mark by teaching and performing traditional dances of the many states of Mexico. Now, in its 36th year, Xochiquetzal has a bit of history all of its own. Carmen Menchaca, director of the group, explains how this cultural organization began.

Every costume worn by the Xochiquetzal dancers represents a state in Mexico. This non-profit organization either purchases the costumes or designs their own.

Xochiquetzal has influenced the lives of many children, adolescents, and families. We took some time to visit the current members of the group to ask them what Xochiquetzal means to them.

Last August, Xochiquetzal lost Richard Menchaca. This Cinco de Mayo, past members came from near and far to pay tribute to “La Voz de Xochiquetzal.” Alumni gathered on stage one more time to perform in honor of their lost mentor.

If you are interested in contacting this organization to join or inquire about performing, contact Director Carmen Menchaca at cmencha@hotmail.com.

Dateline Delta - Dateline Delta is a news magazine-style program produced in our studios that focuses on the people, places and things that happen in-and-around Delta College. The program features students, faculty and staff members speaking about events that take place at Delta College and within our Tri-county area. The program usually has four or five segments that may also show what goes on at some of our off-campus locations. Dateline Delta is produced monthly and usually airs on Wednesdays at 8 pm.

Federal Stimulus Package – Jennifer Granholm’s visit to Delta

Michigan Governor Jennifer Granholm recently visited our campus to discuss the federal stimulus package and what it means to Michigan and the Great Lakes Bay Region.

Alternative Spring Break

Spring break is a traditional time for students to take a hiatus from their educational endeavors. Many travel to sunny destinations. This was the second year that a group of Delta students participated in a service project. This year, Delta students visited Terre Haute, Indiana to help rebuild homes that were damaged by the floods of 2008.

Wind Turbine Technician Program

Governor Granholm recently signed into law a bill that mandates ten percent of the state’s energy comes from renewable sources by 2015. To help meet this goal, Delta College is embarking on a new curriculum in wind turbine technology.

Study Tours

Delta College has two upcoming travel opportunities for individuals who are looking to sightsee and be educated at the same time. Groups will be visiting the Grand Canyon this May, and also Europe in May of 2010.

Commencements ‘09

Each spring an event happens here on campus that honors and celebrates the achievements of graduating students. Commencements are a time when family & friends fill the gymnasium to watch their loved ones receive their diploma.

Student Awards

Each year a group of outstanding students are recognized during the student Awards Ceremony. The awards are sponsored by a number of area business and individuals. Students are honored for either tops in their field or a perfect 4.0 Grade Point Average during the Delta College education.

Bergstein Award

The Bergstein Awards for teaching excellence are presented to faculty members who display special qualities in their classroom. The awards are voted upon by both students and other faculty members. The awards are made possible by the Bergstein Family of Midland, and have become a tradition in recognizing Delta College's outstanding teachers.

40 Year Employees

Delta College recently recognized three of their own faculty members who have instructed here for more than forty years. Gloria Gillard, Mitchell Jarosz & Jerry Schuitman all were hired in 1969, and all have a favorable career here at Delta College.

Second Act – Second Act is a thirty minute news magazine-style series that examines a variety of "life stage" issues important to those 50 and over. Second Act looks at a broad spectrum of issues, ranging from careers, recreation, and civic engagement to health, legal, and financial concerns.

Episode 101

Aired: 6/3/09 8:00-8:30 pm, 6/7/09 2:00-2:30 pm

Polio

Polio, a disease thought to be eradicated more than 50 years ago, is making a comeback. While many of its new victims are oceans away, there is a concern it could find its way to American soil before long. For people over 50, a new resurgence of polio is bringing up bad memories. While the polio vaccine has eradicated polio from the United States, the disease is making a comeback in other parts of the world. Rotary International has been working to get the polio vaccine to people around the globe in order to eradicate polio once and for all. Many Rotarians have traveled abroad to immunize children from polio. The countries of Niger, India, Pakistan and Afghanistan have been the worst hit in recent years. Many of the people who suffered the effects of polio as children are now suffering new ailments from the effects of post polio syndrome as adults. In 2008, the number of polio cases globally numbered 1659. In 2009, to date, the number of cases is more than 300.

Great Lakes Bay Region Rail Trails

A long stretch of pavement in the Great Lakes Bay Region is getting a lot of use by people over 50. It is the local rail trails. For bikers and hikers, the trails are growing in popularity, and there is a group that is trying to expand the rail trail to new neighborhoods. The rail trail had its first beginnings in the early 1990s. Since then, it's expanded several times and now has paths in the counties of Midland, Saginaw, and Bay. In Midland County, there is a 30-mile stretch that runs from the city of Midland to Clare. In Saginaw County, there's the nine-and-a-half-mile stretch that runs from St. Charles to the city of Saginaw, the one mile long George Olsen pathway, and the four mile long Kochville Township Path. In Bay County, there is the nine mile long River Walk Trail. Aside from the health benefits that the rail trail offers, it's also good for business. While bikers are the most prevalent users on the rail trail, walkers and runners are also using the rail trail in large numbers. Many people who use the rail trail regularly would like to see the trail expanded. They are always looking to buy up more abandoned rail lines, in hopes of eventually connecting one route to another, with the long term vision of having the rail trail connected from Midland to Bay to Saginaw, without interruption. The people behind the expansion of the rail trail are hoping to see additional expansion of the rail trail in 2010.

Senior Driving

As people age, it's no secret some of their skills to do a variety of things can diminish, including driving. For some folks, it may mean giving up the keys to their vehicle. Before you consider that as a last resort, there is a way to brush up on your skills behind the wheel. Driving at any age gives people independence to travel most anywhere they want without assistance from others. That kind of freedom is even more important to seniors, who often have to depend on others to help them with a number of other things, so they want to be able to drive as long as they can. As most people get older, their skills to operate a motor vehicle can diminish. To help them brush up on their driving skills, AARP offers classes specializing in teaching drivers over 50. It's not unusual for older drivers to see some of their skills to drive diminish over time, but compared to younger drivers just starting out, older drivers are still by and large the better drivers. The students who tend to take this brush-up course are widows, because they may not of been the primary driver early in their relationship. The people who take the class will learn enough to allow them to stay on the road many more years. Others may be told that it is time to give up the keys for good.

Wii Gaming System

Video games aren't just for the young anymore; they are also for the young at heart. We are not talking about Pacman, but an interactive gaming system that is taking the fitness world by storm, and it will also make you work up a sweat. The Wii gaming system allows participants to play a variety of sports. The system is also popular for people to watch. Besides seeing the Wii as entertainment, many are using the gaming system for health benefits. Many physical therapists think it would be a good idea to use the Wii fitness regiment. Please consult your doctor before using the system to exercise.

50+ Just Like Gold

50+ Just Like Gold is a new program offered by Delta College. Programs include monthly lunches called "Bits and Bites," because you will get a bit of information while enjoying a bite to eat. It is also a wonderful time to get acquainted with other members and enlarge your circle of friends and acquaintances in the community. A large variety of programs will be offered throughout the year ranging from motor coach day trips to half- and full-day informational sessions, and hands-on learning seminars at Delta's main campus as well as at its three centers in Bay City, Midland and Saginaw.

We Can Do It: A Celebration of Michigan Women

April 1, 2009 @ 8pm

Just like Rosie the Riveter said some 60 years ago, "We can do it" ...and for the past 25 years at the Michigan Women's Hall of Fame, we have done just that -- celebrating the achievements of outstanding historical and contemporary Michigan women.

Out of the Fields

April 8, 2009 @ 9pm

A collection of oral histories celebrates the stories, struggles, strengths and personal spirits of Michigan Latinos.

November Requiem

April 8, 2009 @ 10pm

"November Requiem" explores how a small northern Michigan community has come to grips with a disaster that even a half-century later remains vivid in the minds of those old enough to remember. The filmmakers have interviewed witnesses from that era, maritime historians, and the professional dive team familiar with the Bradley's story. In 2008, the filmmakers completed filming additional interviews from personal firsthand accounts; and psychologists who offered their insights on how grief plays out on this scale. The only remaining survivor of the casualty was deckwatch Frank Mays who was interviewed in August 2007. The professional dive team was documented in high definition video during the recovery of the original ship's bell from the Bradley at a depth of 380' and also documented the replacement "memorial" bell engraved with each crewmember's name. A small archivist team has collected extensive stills and rare images from the "Calcite Collection," newspaper headlines, even 8mm home movies of the Bradley and her crew. The documentary will show how the townsfolk have found closure with this 50-year-old tragedy, and what has happened to this maritime community both emotionally and economically.

Asparagus: Stalking the American Life

April 29, 2009 @ 8pm

For 30 years, Oceana County Michigan has been the Asparagus Capital of the World. Now its spear-struck residents and family farms take on the U.S. War on Drugs, Free Trade and a Fast Food Nation, all to save their beloved roots. This award-winning documentary tells the story of why one vegetable matters so much.

Open Spaces

April 29, 2009 @ 10pm

Profiles five people who have been labeled "crazy," "insane" or "loony" by others. Those who use such labels, and even many who have been diagnosed with psychiatric conditions, do not comprehend the power of hope and the human spirit. Those featured in Open Spaces shatter stereotypes and much more. They describe how psychiatric illnesses have helped them learn and enjoy amazing personal growth. These are teachers, students and social workers who have found psychiatric disorders can actually be beneficial and help them lead meaningful, happy lives. Open Spaces is not just talking heads. Viewers see recovery in action as one person takes on a rock-climbing wall, another teaches art and another, one who spent more than a decade as a prisoner in his own home due to his illness, warmly greets people in the community.

Sawdust & Shanty Boys

May 5, 2009 @ 8pm

Towering white pine brought settlers to the Saginaw Valley, but no one could have predicted the lasting impact the lumber industry would have.

Tracks Through Time

May 7, 2009 @ 8pm

From the opening of Michigan's first railroad in 1836 to the end of the steampowered passenger train in 1960 and preservation efforts taking place today, travel down the Tracks Through Time to see the lasting impact the train has had on this state.

Delta Commencement

May 10, 2009 @ 11:00am

Coverage of the 2009 Delta College commencement ceremony.

Antiques Roadshow Grand Rapids: Behind the Scenes

May 13, 2009 @ 8:30pm

Antiques Roadshow visited Grand Rapids in August 2008, and now you can catch all of the action! This program offers a look at how the show comes together and interviews with producers, appraisers, host Mark L. Walberg and local attendees. It's an Antiques Roadshow extravaganza, Grand Rapids-style!

Wildfire in the Great Lakes Region

May 20, 2009 @ 8:30pm

"Wildfire in the Great Lakes Region: A 30-minute documentary about wildfire threat in Michigan and the Great Lakes. The film includes live action footage of mid-West wildfires and the challenges that fire fighters experience in trying to suppress them while protecting homes in the wildland urban interface. The documentary provides recommendations on what homeowners can do to protect their property should a wildfire should occur."

Battle Creek: Celebrating Flight 2008

June 3, 2009 @ 8:30pm

Battle Creek: Celebrating Flight puts you inside the cockpit with the Thunderbirds, takes you up with the Starfighters, a three-ship team of F-104s and celebrates the magic of a hot air balloon launch. This up-close look at the 2008 Battle Creek Field of Flight Air Show and Balloon Festival also includes the comedy of the Alabama Boys and a breathtaking wing walking display.

U.P. Recalls the War

June 3, 2009 @ 9pm

People living in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan recall World War II, sharing images and stories from the battlefields of Europe and the Pacific, to the iron ore mines back home. Combined with vintage newsreels and film footage, these personal memories paint a vivid image of victory and loss.

Life of a Michigan Rail Trail

June 16, 2009 @ 9pm

As told by managers, users, business owners, and residents, this program describes the challenges and benefits the citizens of Midland and Isabella counties experienced converting an abandoned rail road corridor to a recreation trail and greenway.

Mackinac Island: Mecca of the Midwest

June 16, 2009 @ 9:30pm

This program is an offbeat look at the people who help create and maintain the dreamscape that draws a million tourists a year to this tiny seasonal Midwestern vacation destination. Through a series of intimate and often funny profiles, this program reveals behind-the-scene glimpses into the lives of the artists and shop-keepers who lovingly paint their impressions of the island, the horsemen and women who operate the island's four-legged fleet, an exclusive peek at what it takes to maintain the world-renowned Grand Hotel, a guided tour by a historian/naturalist, a look into the poetic life of the mind with a celebrity biographer and a fun, fact-filled demonstration of fudge as theater.

Where Do The Children Play?

June 23, 2009 @ 9pm

WHERE DO THE CHILDREN PLAY? examines the dramatic disappearance of play and nature from the daily lives of children. The film explores the impact of isolating environmental factors like sprawl, congestion and endless suburban development on children's mental and physical health and their development. Told largely through the voices of children, WHERE DO THE CHILDREN PLAY? also combines research of urban planners, health experts, educators and environmentalists to explain the realities children face living in three distinct environments: urban centers, suburbs and rural areas.

Michigan Men's Glee Club Presents 149th Annual Fall Concert

June 24, 2009 @ 8pm

On November 15th, 2008 the University of Michigan Men's Glee Club presents an evening of the sublime and the ridiculous. Music includes Gloria by William Mathias, Laudate pueri by Felix Mendelssohn, Quatre Petites Prieres de Saint Francois d'Assise by Francis Poulenc, Ain't Got Time to Die arranged by Phillip Duey, I Can't Tarry arranged by David Morrow, Betelehemu arranged by Wendell Whalum, She Moved Through the Fair arranged by Timothy Takach, Amo, amas, I love a lass arranged by Marshall Bartholomew, and Sound Off by Paul Rardin. As always, the a cappella sensation The Friars performs with its usual combination of whimsy and musical approximation, and the Glee Club closes its performance with songs of the University of Michigan.

Anatomy '59: The Making of a Classic Motion Picture

June 29, 2008 @ 2:30pm

Anatomy '59 is a behind-the-scenes documentary by independent filmmaker John Pepin which explores the crime, the trial and the book that led to the making of Otto Preminger's classic 1959 courtroom thriller Anatomy of a Murder. The movie starred James Stewart, Lee Remick, Ben Gazzara and George C. Scott. In Anatomy '59, Preminger's focus on realism to create what many consider to be the greatest courtroom drama ever made is showcased through rare film clips and photographs, documents and interviews with cast members, locals and others with ties to the production. Preminger's film, shot entirely on location in Michigan's Upper Peninsula, was based on the 1958 bestseller by Robert Traver.

Uncommon Sense - This is a 30 minute public affairs program produced by local community members. Program focuses on people and issues affecting Mid-Michigan. Program airs on Sunday's at 12:30pm.
