A deal on immigration reform - maybe; a cloud over the attorney general and the White House; and politics meets religion: past and present. I'm John Harwood sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Politics is the art of the possible." Lawmakers and the president trumpet a deal on immigration, but the details are trouble in Congress and on the presidential campaign trip. Rep. Tom Tancredo said, "This is another amnesty. No matter how much lipstick you want to put on the pig, it is still a pig called amnesty." The president's men: one out, one in, one left hanging after dramatic congressional testimony. James Comey said, "The door opened and in walked Mr. Gonzales." What is the faith of the embattled attorney general? And the passing of a controversial preacher spotlights the mix of politics and religion. With unconventional candidates in both parties, where will conservative Christians go in 2008? Covering these stories this week: Joanne Cummings of the Politico, Peter Baker of the Washington Post, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

The substance of politics and the politics of substance on Darfur, immigration, Iran, global warming, healthcare, and the science of getting elected, tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush said, "I made clear that the time for promises was over and that President Bashir had to do something to end the suffering." By the end of next year, America and other nations will set a long-term global goal for reducing greenhouse gases. The Bush administration sets the terms for debates that could define his legacy at home and abroad. Secretary Of State Condoleezza Rice said, "We are prepared to change 27 years of American policy and sit with Iran to talk about whatever Iran would like to talk about." What do this week's pronouncements tell us about where the nation is heading? While in the 2008 presidential campaign, the field expands, Senator Fred Thompson said, "Do you ever wonder why when our problems seem to be getting larger that so many of our politicians seem to be getting smaller?" Why not an actor? Senator Thompson said, "Everybody says that." And the Democrats roll out their healthcare plans: what they have in mind and why they're talking about it now. Immigration reform - dead or just on life support? Scooter Libby heading to jail or toward a pardon? And Russia's Vladimir Putin: friend or wily foe? Tonight, on "Washington Week." The immigration fight consumes the U.S. Senate. Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Every day we have - we continue without this legislation, we have these well trained, well disciplined, highly motivated bodyguards out there chasing people across the desert that are landscapers." Sen. Trent Lott (R-TN) said, "Do we have the courage, tenacity, and the ability to get anything done anymore?" Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "I doubt if the prospects will get better with the passage of time. And it dominates the Republican candidates' debate." Rudy Giuliani said, "The problem with this immigration plan is that it has no real unifying purpose. It's a typical Washington mess." While Democrats squabble over the war, Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "This is George Bush's war. He is responsible for this war." Policy and politics collide. Scooter Libby gets the book thrown at him - two and a half years in jail. Will it stick? The president abroad - President George W. Bush said, "He made some interesting suggestions." - playing diplomatic chicken with an increasingly hostile Russian leader, plus a shake-up at the Pentagon. Fresh developments on immigration reform, Iraq, White House legal woes, and the 2008 campaign, tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush said, "Each day our nation fails to act, the problem only grows worse." Senator Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Doing nothing is not an alternative. It's not an alternative." The president and supporters of immigration reform bring their plan back from the death. President Bush said, "Gracias." But ultimately, will Congress go along? A new wave of violence reinforces old doubts on Iraq. Senator Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "The bloodiest three months of the war has been since the surge took place." Secretary John Negroponte said, "We expect that fight for security will get harder over the coming months as we engage an increasingly desperate enemy." While at the White House, officials brace for new legal challenges. Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) said, "Have I lost confidence in Attorney General Gonzales? Absolutely yes." Is the fight to remove the attorney general ending - Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said, "I don't recall specifically" -- or just beginning? And how is all this playing out on the 2008 campaign trail? Will Republicans have to answer for their president? The Supreme Court exits stage right. Plus the president loses ground in Iraq and immigration, but pushes back anyway, tonight on "Washington Week." The Supreme Court ends its term with a bang, ruling against urban desegregation plans, rolling back campaign finance reform, rejecting a student's free speech claims, and in a surprise today, reversing itself on a case involving Guantanamo prisoner's rights. We assess the term. On Capitol Hill, a White House smack-down as Republicans abandon the president on immigration and distance themselves on Iraq. Sen. Richard Lugar (R-IN) said, "The costs and risks of continuing down the current path outweigh the potential benefits that might be achieved." But the White House pushes back, asserting its executive right to ignore Senate subpoenas. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "It is stonewalling of the worst kind, and I think the reaction is now spreading to both parties in the Senate." A remarkable week for all three branches of government. Four years ago on May 1, President Bush landed on the aircraft carrier USS Lincoln wearing a flight suit and delivered a speech in front of a giant "Mission Accomplished" banner. He was hailed by media stars as a "breathtaking" example of presidential leadership in toppling Saddam Hussein. Despite profound questions over the failure to locate weapons of mass destruction and the increasing violence in Baghdad, many in the press confirmed the White House's claim that the war was won. MSNBC's Chris Matthews declared, "We're all neo-cons now;" NPR's Bob Edwards said, "The war in Iraq is essentially over;" and Fortune magazine's Jeff Birnbaum said, "It is amazing how thorough the victory in Iraq really was in the broadest context."

Back in 1999, Salon columnist Andrew Leonard coined the term, "Open-Source Journalism" while describing a story where a writer for JANE'S submitted an article for critique prior to publication to "Slashdot," after which readers "sliced and diced the story into tiny pieces," to such degree that an editor at the magazine later announced that the article would not be published after all. Leonard poses the question: Will better journalism ensue if more reporters and editors beta test their own work? Hard to say -- in the deadline-crazed world of technology journalism, there's often hardly enough time to get a story properly copy edited and proofed, let alone reviewed by hundreds of frothing critics. Still, the principle is worth taking a look at. There's an immense amount of expertise on the Net -- sites like Slashdot are pioneering new territory as they facilitate access to that knowledge, to the great and last benefit of all. The tremendous growth in readership of political blogs in the last five years, such as Josh Marshall's Talkingpointsmemo, which receives close to a million visitors a month, has put this concept to test outside just the technology news arena. As Marshall explains in a blog post from April 3, 2005: "It would have been impossible for me, for instance, to have written most of what I've written on Social Security over the last few months if I didn't have literally thousands of people reading their local papers and letting me know what they're seeing or reporting back from townhall meetings or giving me the heads up on things that are about to break on the hill. That's not a replacement for journalism; it's different. But it's potentially very powerful." Have blogs and the Internet in general strengthened or weakened the craft of journalism?

On May 6, 2005, the residents of Spokane, Washington, awoke to one of the strangest headlines in the town's history: "West Tied to Sex Abuse in '70s, Using Office to Lure Young Men". The popular, socially conservative Republican mayor of Spokane, Jim West, had been outed by the town's newspaper The Spokesman-Review. The paper told the sordid story of a man with two lives: in public, he had once sponsored legislation forbidding gays from teaching in public schools, while in private, the paper alleged, he was trawling for young men online, using the trappings of his office to lure them into sexual relationships. But as bizarre as the revelations were, so too were the newspaper's methods. For months, a middle-aged "forensic computer specialist" had posed as an eighteen-year-old boy online, engaging the mayor in a relationship that became more and more intimate, ultimately exploding on the front page of the newspaper. With unfettered access to all the principal players, FRONTLINE explores how this story forced an all-American town to confront its most basic feelings about homosexuality and sheds new light on the confusing, often contradictory, experience of gay people themselves in a place far from the main battlefields of the culture wars.

Political chaos on Iraq, both here and there. Alberto Gonzales: the e-mail trail. And a personal word about the Don Imus debacle, tonight on "Washington Week." The Iraqi Parliament under siege. The U.S. Military under stress. Secretary of defense Robert Gates said, "I think what this recognizes, though, is that our forces are stretched. There's no question about that." Senator Jim Webb (D-VA) said, "I think there are limits to human endurance, and there are limits to what families can put up with." The White House in search of a solution. Can the war in Iraq be saved? Senator John McCain is taking his presidential ambitions on the answer. Senator John McCain (R-AZ) said, "For my part - for my part - I would rather lose a campaign than a war." And Attorney General Alberto Gonzales stakes his career on the answers he gives an angry Congress about missing White House e-mails. Senator Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "They can't say they've been lost. That's like saying "the dog ate my homework." Dana Perino [Dep White House Press Secretary] said, "I will admit it, you know, there was - we screwed up and we're trying to fix it." Plus radio host Don Imus is fired. What that says about trash talk, journalists, and politics. Covering the week: Linda Robinson of U.S. News and World Report, David Sanger of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

"Roosevelt's America" is a cinema verite profile of the struggles of a Lieberman refugee to build a new life in America. After being tortured and narrowly escaping execution during Liberia's civil war, Roosevelt Henderson makes his way to America with three of his children, but is forced to leave his pregnant wife behind. He works as a janitor, airport van driver and assembly line worker in order to support his family and help his wife flee their war-torn country. After two year of juggling low wage jobs, Roosevelt's perseverance pays off and he is reunited with his wife, Frances, and his baby daughter. By witnessing Roosevelt's day-to-day struggles, frustrations and achievements, viewers come to appreciate the distance he has traveled during his harrowing journey from torture and desperation in his native Liberia to security and stability in his newly adopted Hamlin. Ultimately "Roosevelt's America" becomes an inspiring story of quiet determination and dignity under duress.

Ahmet Ertegun, a young Turk - literally - with an immigrant's passion for the African-American music he heard in the rigidly segregated Washington, DC, nightclubs of the 1940s, recognized that "all popular music stems from black music, be it jazz or rock 'n' roll or rap." He exported these unique sounds to England, where they merged with the European sensibility, and then imported that fusion back across the ocean. "The Atlantic Sound," which sprang from the small record label Ertegun co-founded in 1947, was a revolutionary new genre, single-handedly influencing the future direction of contemporary music. Ertegun wrote music, produced music, defined careers and changed lives. "He found Ray Charles, he introduced Eric Clapton to Aretha Franklin, he fell asleep on Mick Jagger," says Rolling Stone founder Jann Wenner in AMERICAN MASTERS "Atlantic Records: The House That Ahmet Built."

This program is the definitive history of the world's most dangerous terrorist organization. It is also the first film to attempt to fully get inside the heads of the men who led Al Qaeda, exploring the ideas that motivated and drove them. With rare footage and firsthand testimony from those who fought, planned, argued, met or lived with them, this is the inside story of Al Qaeda's three leaders -- Osama Bin Laden, Ayman Zawahiri and the recently killed leader of Al Qaeda in Iraq, Abu Musab Al Zarqawi. It is also the story of how the peaceful and noble religion of Islam was perverted by Islamist terrorists in the name of jihad.

Political chaos on Iraq, both here and there. Alberto Gonzales: the e-mail trail. And a personal word about the Don Imus debacle, tonight on "Washington Week." The Iraqi Parliament under siege. The U.S. Military under stress. Secretary of defense Robert Gates said, "I think what this recognizes, though, is that our forces are stretched. There's no question about that." Senator Jim Webb (D-VA) said, "I think there are limits to human endurance, and there are limits to what families can put up with." The White House in search of a solution. Can the war in Iraq be saved? Senator John McCain is taking his presidential ambitions on the answer. Senator John McCain (R-AZ) said, "For my part - for my part - I would rather lose a campaign than a war." And Attorney General Alberto Gonzales stakes his career on the answers he gives an angry Congress about missing White House e-mails. Senator Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "They can't say they've been lost. That's like saying "the dog ate my homework." Dana Perino [Dep White House Press Secretary] said, "I will admit it, you know, there was - we screwed up and we're trying to fix it." Plus radio host Don Imus is fired. "The way it happened was the equivalent to flipping the bird, frankly, to the rest of the world - on an issue about which they felt so deeply." That is how former New Jersey governor and the former Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Christine Todd Whitman describes the Bush administration's decision to withdraw from the Kyoto Protocol on climate change in Hot Politics, a FRONTLINE report co-produced with the Center for Investigative Reporting (CIR). As more and more Americans look for a response to the realities of climate change, FRONTLINE correspondent Deborah Amos investigates the political decisions that have prevented the United States government from confronting one of the most serious problems facing humanity today.

Nearly four years after President Bush declared an end to combat in Iraq, the country is still fraught with daily casualties, costly commitments, and an ongoing debate on how to end the violence. How did it come to this? NOW's David Brancaccio speaks with two very different, but unforgettable men who allege that U.S. bungling in Iraq created and fueled the deadly insurgency. Paul Hughes, a retired Army colonel, was part of the transition team after the U.S. invasion of Iraq. He says key decisions were made that ignored the realities of Iraq. Omar Fokeiki was a Washington Post reporter and translator who risked his life to help U.S. journalists. Both Hughes and Fokeiki are featured in a new Sundance prize-winning documentary, "No End in Sight," which exposes what it calls "a chain of critical errors, denial, and incompetence that has galvanized a violent quagmire." Fokeiki's identity was hidden in the documentary for his protection, but he chose to appear unmasked on NOW for the first time.

Abortion, gun violence, Gonzales and Iraq. How the world changed, this week on "Washington Week." (Bells ringing.) Gun violence claims 32 lives at Virginia Tech. Rep. Jim Moran (D-VA): (From tape.) It is we, the people's representatives, who have to stand up and do something about this so that it doesn't have to occur again. Will it change the debate in Washington? Can it? Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said, "I don't remember, I don't recall. I have no recollection about that." With Republicans jumping ship. Sen. Tom Coburn (R-OK) said, "I believe the best way to put this behind us is your resignation." Can Alberto Gonzales survive? The Supreme Court changes course on abortion, supporting a ban on a controversial procedure. And on Iraq, the White House is drawn into a larger debate. President George W. Bush said, "We should not legislate defeat in this vital war." Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "As long as we follow the president's path in Iraq, the war is lost." Covering the week, Jeanne Cummings of "The Politico", Pierre Thomas of ABC News, Linda Greenhouse of "The New York Times," and Peter Baker of "The Washington Post."

The war debate becomes veto-hate. Democrats spar for '08, Wolfowitz waits, and the stock market inflates, tonight on "Washington Week." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) [Speaker of the House] said, "The American people are calling for accountability. I hope that the president will heed their call." President George W. Bush said, "It is what it is and will be vetoed, and my veto will be sustained." The debate over pulling troops out of Iraq comes to a head. Is there any room left for compromise? Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "If this president does not get us out of Iraq, when I'm president, I will." The Democrats who want to take the president's place go to South Carolina for their first big debate. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I am proud that I opposed this war from the start." John Edwards said, "Senator Clinton and anyone else who voted for this war has to search themselves and decide whether they believe they voted the right way." Did anyone break out of the pack? Paul Wolfowitz, one of the war's architects, fights to save his job at the World Bank. And the economy sends drastically mixed signals: weak growth but a surging stock market. What's that all about? The reporters covering the week: Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Karen Tumulty of Time magazine, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

Of all founding fathers, Alexander Hamilton had the least promising beginning. He was born illegitimate on the Caribbean island of Nevis, orphaned at age eleven and taken out of school to support himself. Hamilton learned at an early age to take advantage of his boundless intelligence, persuasiveness and self-discipline, and like many a young immigrant of great talent but few resources, he made his way to New York City. There, he passed the New York bar exam with less than a year of legal study. Gifted with words, the precocious Hamilton was also very much a man of action. During the Revolutionary War, he distinguished himself as a military hero and as General George Washington's most trusted advisor.

Four years ago on May 1, President Bush landed on the aircraft carrier USS Lincoln wearing a flight suit and delivered a speech in front of a giant "Mission Accomplished" banner. He was hailed by media stars as a "breathtaking" example of presidential leadership in toppling Saddam Hussein. Despite profound questions over the failure to locate weapons of mass destruction and the increasing violence in Baghdad, many in the press confirmed the White House's claim that the war was won. MSNBC's Chris Matthews declared, "We're all neo-cons now;" NPR's Bob Edwards said, "The war in Iraq is essentially over;" and Fortune magazine's Jeff Birnbaum said, "It is amazing how thorough the victory in Iraq really was in the broadest context."

BILL MOYERS: When people are having a good time, you don't want to be the skunk in the garden. And people were having such a good time at that big White House welcome for Queen Elizabeth II. The NEW YORK TIMES says Her Majesty was "making Americans go weak in the knees." Sometimes we colonials seem so dazzled by British royalty that I wonder if General Washington did defeat Cornwallis at Yorktown. But a less playful thought also occurred. Watching the first and royal families all gussied up I couldn't help but think of Prince Harry, the Queen's grandson, who is headed for Iraq with a cavalry regiment, even though he's a conspicuous target for assassination or kidnapping. There's angst that other members of his regiment will be put at graver risk because of his celebrity. So guess what his comrades -- his fellow soldiers -- are doing? Rather than petition the Queen to keep the young man home, they have gotten shirts printed up with the words across them: "I'm Harry." In other words, the commoners and the Prince are in this together: one for all and all for one. What a notion -- that war should be the great equalizer, that no one's son or daughter is privileged from duty or danger. I wonder how the last four years might have been different if only our president had asked sacrifice from everyone. Instead, mostly folks from the working class and professional soldiers are doing the dying, while the rich spend their tax cuts. War on the cheap, except for those fighting it. Watching all the wrangling in Washington this week over timetables and exit strategies and benchmarks, I wondered if it all wouldn't come quickly to a halt if the next time they pow-wow and palaver, the president and Congress were asked to wear shirts with the words written across them, "I'm Harry."

When veteran government auditor Bobby Maxwell learned oil giant Kerr McGee was not paying the $10 million he says it owed in oil royalties, he prepared an order to Kerr McGee to pay up. Making sure the government gets its money from energy companies was Maxwell's job in the Minerals Management Service (MMS), a division of the Department of the Interior. But Maxwell claims his bosses at the MMS quashed that order. After filing a lawsuit under the False Claims Act, which protects and encourages whistleblowers, Maxwell lost his job. This week, NOW talks with Maxwell about the personal and professional price he says he paid in pursuit of fairness, and examines an industry under fire for keeping too much of the enormous revenue it makes for drilling on land and waters owned by us all. Are oil and gas companies being protected--and even feted--by the government agency charged with regulating them? "I felt very strongly that the American taxpayers just had $10 million stolen out of their pocket," Maxwell tells NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa. "And that that needed to be remedied."

The Republican field and the fast forward political campaign, plus truth and consequences on Iraq at the Capitol, the White House, and in a high profile new book, tonight on "Washington Week." Mayor Rudolph Giuliani (R-NY) said, "Those are the things that Ronald Reagan taught us: you lead from optimism, you lead from hope, and we should never retreat in the face of terrorism." Embracing presidents past. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I want to thank Mrs. Reagan for the many kindnesses extended to me and my fellow prisoners of war many years ago when we came home." Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA) said, "I took the same course that Ronald Reagan and George Herbert Walker Bush and Henry Hyde took and I said I was wrong, and changed my mind and said I'm pro-life." Not as much affection though for the current president. What does that say about the direction of the 2008 campaign? In Washington, a long awaited veto becomes real. President George W. Bush said, "Setting a dateline for withdrawal is setting a date for failure, and that would be irresponsible." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "Now into the fifth year of a failed policy, this administration should get a clue: it's not working." But is compromise already afoot? And George Tenet's version of the run up to war - the hardcover edition. But why is he telling us now? The reporters covering the stories: John Harris of the Politico, Gloria Berger of CBS News and U.S. News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, and Michael Duffy of TIME magazine.

The White House and the Congress at loggerheads over the war. New faces in Europe and old issues facing the GOP, tonight on "Washington Week." Republicans looking for the exits. Sen. Arlen Specter (R-PA), "There is a sense here certainly about the Democrats and growing among Republicans that there has to be some progress - significant progress to sustain it beyond September." Can the president calm his own party long enough to win this war? President George W. Bush, "It makes sense to have benchmarks as a part of our discussion on how to go forward." Or will he have to use his veto pen once again? In Europe, new faces replace an old nemesis and an old friend. Tony Blair (From tape.), "Today I announce my decision to stand down from the leadership of the Labor Party." Political change abroad and its effect on U.S. policy. And on the 2008 campaign trail, Republicans battle their own pasts, their own policies, and even the Pope. The reporters covering the stories: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Helene Cooper of "The New York Times," and James Burnes of "National Journal."

A deal on immigration reform - maybe; a cloud over the attorney general and the White House; and politics meets religion: past and present. I'm John Harwood sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Politics is the art of the possible." Lawmakers and the president trumpet a deal on immigration, but the details are trouble in Congress and on the presidential campaign trip. Rep. Tom Tancredo said, "This is another amnesty. No matter how much lipstick you want to put on the pig, it is still a pig called amnesty." The president's men: one out, one in, one left hanging after dramatic congressional testimony.

James Comey said, "The door opened and in walked Mr. Gonzales." What is the faith of the embattled attorney general? And the passing of a controversial preacher spotlights the mix of politics and religion. With unconventional candidates in both parties, where will conservative Christians go in 2008? Covering these stories this week: Jeanne Cummings of the Politico, Peter Baker of the Washington Post, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

War rhetoric at home, war reality on the ground, war politics on the campaign trail, and new revelations at the Department of Justice, tonight, on "Washington Week." Rep Dave Obey (D-WI) said, "I hate disagreement. I'm going to vote against the major portion of this agreement even though I negotiated." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "And I think at the top of our list is providing for the safety and security of the American people. That's at the top of our list." Congress sends the president a bill to pay for the war in Iraq, but with no timetables to force its end. Rep. Nancy Pelosi said, "The American people do not think that it is necessary for us to be refereeing a civil war in Iraq." But the majority Democrats lost this round, how and why? And how will any of this stem the increasing violence on the ground? Meanwhile, presidential candidates weigh in on Iraq: John Edwards said, "The worst thing about the Global War on Terror approach is that it's backfired." But also on immigration, Iowa, and each other. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "As I mentioned, maybe he can get out that varmint gun of his and chase those Guatemalans off his lawn." Plus the other Monica. Monica Goodling said, "I know I crossed the line." The culture of politics at Alberto Gonzales's Justice Department. In the aftermath of the fall of Saddam Hussein, a group of Americans led by Ambassador L. Paul Bremer III set off to Baghdad to build a new nation and establish democracy in the Arab Middle East. One year later, with Bremer forced to secretly exit what some have called "the most dangerous place on earth," the group left behind lawlessness, insurgency, economic collapse, death, destruction - and much of their idealism. Three years later, as the U.S. continues to look for an exit strategy, the government the Americans helped create and the infrastructure they designed are being tested. FRONTLINE producer Michael Kirk follows the early efforts and ideals of this group as they tried to seize control and disband the Iraqi police, army and Baathist government - and how they became hardened along the way to the realities of postwar Iraq. The program is based on numerous first-person interviews and extensive documentation from the FRONTLINE team that produced "Rumsfeld's War," "The Torture Question" and "The Dark Side."

The substance of politics and the politics of substance on Darfur, immigration, Iran, global warming, healthcare, and the science of getting elected, tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush said, "I made clear that the time for promises was over and that President Bashir had to do something to end the suffering." By the end of next year, America and other nations will set a long-term global goal for reducing greenhouse gases. The Bush administration sets the terms for debates that could define his legacy at home and abroad. Secretary Of State Condoleezza Rice said, "We are prepared to change 27 years of American policy and sit with Iran to talk about whatever Iran would like to talk about." What do this week's pronouncements tell us about where the nation is heading? While in the 2008 presidential campaign, the field expands. Senator Fred Thompson said, "Do you ever wonder why when our problems seem to be getting larger that so many of our politicians seem to be getting smaller?" Why not an actor? Senator Thompson said, "Everybody says that." And the Democrats roll out their healthcare plans: what they have in mind and why they're talking about it now. Immigration reform - dead or just on life support? Scooter Libby heading to jail or toward a pardon? And Russia's Vladimir Putin: friend or wily foe? Tonight, on "Washington Week." The immigration fight consumes the U.S. Senate. Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Every day we have - we continue without this legislation, we have these well trained, well disciplined, highly motivated bodyguards out there chasing people across the desert that are landscapers." Sen. Trent Lott (R-TN) said, "Do we have the courage, tenacity, and the ability to get anything done anymore?" Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "I doubt if the prospects will get better with the passage of time. And it dominates the Republican candidates' debate." Rudy Giuliani said, "The problem with this immigration plan is that it has no real unifying purpose. It's a typical Washington mess." While Democrats squabble over the war. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "This is George Bush's war. He is responsible for this war." Policy and politics collide. Scooter Libby gets the book thrown at him - two and a half years in jail. Will it stick? The president abroad - President George W. Bush said, "He made some interesting suggestions." - playing diplomatic chicken with an increasingly hostile Russian leader, plus a shake-up at the Pentagon. Fresh developments on immigration reform, Iraq, White House legal woes, and the 2008 campaign, tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush said, "Each day our nation fails to act, the problem only grows worse." Senator Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Doing nothing is not an alternative. It's not an alternative." The president and supporters of immigration reform bring their plan back from the death. President Bush said, "Gracias." But ultimately, will Congress go along? A new wave of violence reinforces old doubts on Iraq. Senator Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "The bloodiest three months of the war has been since the surge took place." Secretary John Negroponte said, "We expect that fight for security will get harder over the coming months as we engage an increasingly desperate enemy." While at the White House, officials brace for new legal challenges. Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) said, "Have I lost confidence in Attorney General Gonzales? Absolutely yes." Is the fight to remove the attorney general ending - Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said, "I don't recall specifically" -- or just beginning? And how is all this playing out on the 2008 campaign trail? Will Republicans have to answer for their president? As the United States begins one final effort to secure victory through a "surge" of troops, FRONTLINE investigates how strategic and tactical mistakes brought Iraq to virtual civil war. The film recounts how the early mandate to create the conditions for a quick exit of the American military lead to chaos, failure, and sectarian strife. In The Endgame, producer Michael Kirk (Rumsfeld's War, The Torture Question, The Dark Side, and The Lost Year in Iraq) traces why the president decided to risk what military planners once warned could be the worst way to fight in Iraq--door-to-door--and assesses the likelihood of its success. Top administration figures, military commanders, and journalists offer inside details about the new strategy.

For years, the U.S. healthcare system has been assailed from all sides. At best, it's portrayed as a frustrating bureaucracy. At worst, it's costing people their very lives. In his new documentary, "Sicko," Michael Moore has turned his eye toward our American Healthcare system, as dominated and regulated by insurance companies, health maintenance organizations and legislators who are too often bought off by "Big Pharmacy" and HMOs. As part of his research, Moore asked for and received thousands of healthcare nightmare stories, many of which are retold in the film. He also takes a hard look at how our system stacks up against those of Canada, France, Great Britain--and Cuba. NOW Host David Brancuccin sits down with the controversial chronicler of American culture to find out what makes him tick, and why our healthcare system ticks him off.

Everybody in the pool: if you're not at least thinking about running for president, you're not in the game. A look at the unannounced field, tonight on "Washington Week." Michael Bloomberg said, "Now don't you just hate those rumors about running for president? What do these men have in common: Bloomberg, Gore, Gingrich, Nader, Thompson?" Fred Thompson said, "There's always room for one more." All playing wait and see for 2008. We take a look at the outsider primary and at the problems lying in wait for the next president: Iraq - Secretary Robert Gates said, "I think that we'll just have to wait and see the progress of these offensives." and the complicated peace process elsewhere in the Middle East. President George W. Bush said, "We recognize that it was Hamas that attacked the unity government. They made a choice of violence." Does the U.S. have a plan for peace? Covering these stories this week: Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Jeffrey Birnbaum of the Washington Post, Linda Robinson of U.S. News and World Report, and Helene Cooper of the New York Times.

The Supreme Court exits stage right. Plus the president loses ground in Iraq and immigration, but pushes back anyway, tonight on "Washington Week." The Supreme Court ends its turn with a bang, ruling against urban desegregation plans, rolling back campaign finance reform, rejecting a student's free speech claims, and in a surprise today, reversing itself on a case involving Guantanamo prisoner's rights. We assess the term. On Capitol Hill, a White House smack-down as Republicans abandon the president on immigration and distance themselves on Iraq. Sen. Richard Lugar (R-IN) said, "The costs and risks of continuing down the current path outweigh the potential benefits that might be achieved." But the White House pushes back, asserting its executive right to ignore Senate subpoenas. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "It is stonewalling of the worst kind, and I think the reaction is now spreading to both parties in the Senate." A remarkable week for all three branches of government. Covering the stories, Linda Greenhouse of the New York Times, Joan Biskupic of the USA Today, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Alexis Simendinger of National Journal.

The debate over the Turin Shroud's origins has raged furiously since its first documented appearance in Lirey, France, in the 1350s. Is it the authentic burial shroud of Jesus Christ, or just a brilliant medieval fake? In 1988, three of the world's foremost carbon-dating labs announced in agreement that the Shroud could be dated only as far back as the 13th or 14th century. Then in the summer of 2002, Mechthild Flury-Leinberg, one of the world's foremost textile restorers, was invited to Turin to undertake an unprecedented renovation of the shroud, which called for the removal of both the backing cloth and all the medieval patches. It marked the first time a fabrics expert had worked so closely with the precious relic, and what she eventually uncovered shook the study of the shroud to its foundations. "Science of the Shroud" reveals the brand-new forensic evidence that Christianity's most treasured existing relic is indeed 2,000 years old, dating from the time of Christ. Adding to the latest fervor are bacteriologists' experiments that may prove once and for all how the image on the cloth was ever imprinted, and forensic experts' analysis of the wounds on the image that appear to closely reflect those described in the New Testament.

At the very center of Christianity, in one of the holiest cities on Earth, a mystery as old as the Christian faith is close to being solved. An academic couple from Oxford -- respected archaeologists both -- have within their grasp the proof as to whether or not Jerusalem's Church of the Holy Sepulcher houses the place where Jesus Christ was crucified and buried. After a decade of delicate probing Martin Biddle and his wife, Birthe Kjolbye-Biddle, have unearthed some astonishing truths about this venerable plot and gone some way to confirming that Christ was buried here, 2,000 years ago. Today's archaeologists use diplomacy, intelligence, traditional archaeological and architectural techniques, and state-of-the-art equipment to unveil the truth. The Biddles have been able to call upon a veritable arsenal of cutting edge technology such as thermal mapping, 3D computerized models and keyhole cameras that can inch through the slightest cracks. The equipment reveals the remains of the earlier structures and the original rock-cut tomb hidden within the walls of the present 19th-century "edicule" or "little house." Marking the site of the original tomb of Christ, the edicule has, incredibly, never been subject to any kind of archaeological study or scientific investigation.

A deal on immigration reform - maybe; a cloud over the attorney general and the White House; and politics meets religion: past and present. I'm John Harwood sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Politics is the art of the possible." Lawmakers and the president trumpet a deal on immigration, but the details are trouble in Congress and on the presidential campaign trip. Rep. Tom Tancredo said, "This is another amnesty. No matter how much lipstick you want to put on the pig, it is still a pig called amnesty." The president's men: one out, one in, one left hanging after dramatic congressional testimony. James Conroy said, "The door opened and in walked Mr. Gonzales." What is the faith of the embattled attorney general? And the passing of a controversial preacher spotlights the mix of politics and religion. With unconventional candidates in both parties, where will conservative Christians go in 2008? Covering these stories this week: Jeanne Cummings of the Politico, Peter Baker of the Washington Post, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Karen Turnulty of Time Magazine.

Twenty-Sixth Presiding Bishop and Primate of the Episcopal Church, Bishop Jefferts Schori became in November 2006 the first woman to lead a national church in the 520 year history of Anglicanism. She serves as chief pastor to the Episcopal Church's 2.4 million members in 16 countries and 10 dioceses, as well as the American representative to the worldwide Anglican Communion, a body of 38 provinces and 77 million worshippers. Bishop Jefferts Schori has assumed her leadership position at a particularly tumultuous time for the Episcopal Church, specifically due to mounting criticism from more conservative sectors of the Anglican Communion, in parts of Africa and Asia, regarding Episcopal stances on homosexuality, same-sex partnerships, and other social issues. In her first national interview since being elected, she told CNN that she does not believe homosexuality is a sin.

Back in 1999, Salon columnist Andrew Leonard coined the term, "Open-Source Journalism" while describing a story where a writer for JANI'S submitted an article for critique prior to publication to "Slashdot," after which readers "sliced and diced the story into tiny pieces," to such degree that an editor at the magazine later announced that the article would not be published after all. Leonard poses the question: Will better journalism ensue if more reporters and editors beta test their own work? Hard to say -- in the deadline-crazed world of technology journalism, there's often hardly enough time to get a story properly copy edited and proofed, let alone reviewed by hundreds of frothing critics. Still, the principle is worth taking a look at. There's an immense amount of expertise on the Net -- sites like Slashdot are pioneering new territory as they facilitate access to that knowledge, to the great and last benefit of all. The tremendous growth in readership of political blogs in the last five years, such as Josh Marshall's Talkingpointsmemo, which receives close to a million visitors a month, has put this concept to test outside just the technology news arena. As Marshall explains in a blog post from April 3, 2005: "It would have been impossible for me, for instance, to have written most of what I've written on Social Security over the last few months if I didn't have literally thousands of people reading their local papers and letting me know what they're seeing or reporting back from townhall meetings or giving me the heads up on things that are about to break on the hill. That's not a replacement for journalism; it's different. But it's potentially very powerful." Have blogs and the Internet in general strengthened or weakened the craft of journalism?

At the very center of Christianity, in one of the holiest cities on Earth, a mystery as old as the Christian faith is close to being solved. An academic couple from Oxford -- respected archaeologists both -- have within their grasp the proof as to whether or not Jerusalem's Church of the Holy Sepulcher houses the place where Jesus Christ was crucified and buried. After a decade of delicate probing Martin Biddle and his wife, Birthe Kjolbye-Biddle, have unearthed some astonishing truths about this venerable plot and gone some way to confirming that Christ was buried here, 2,000 years ago. Today's archaeologists use diplomacy, intelligence, traditional archaeological and architectural techniques, and state-of-the-art equipment to unveil the truth. The Biddles have been able to call upon a veritable arsenal of cutting edge technology such as thermal mapping, 3D computerized models and keyhole cameras that can inch through the slightest cracks. The equipment reveals the remains of the earlier structures and the original rock-cut tomb hidden within the walls of the present 19th-century "edicule" or "little house." Marking the site of the original tomb of Christ, the edicule has, incredibly, never been subject to any kind of archaeological study or scientific investigation.

Format: Documentary Segment Length: 01:26:46

On June 5, 1989, one day after Chinese troops expelled thousands of demonstrators from Tiananmen Square in Beijing, a solitary, unarmed protester stood his ground before a column of tanks advancing down the Avenue of Eternal Peace. Captured by Western photographers watching nearby, this extraordinary confrontation became an icon of the fight for freedom around the world. Veteran filmmaker Antony Thomas investigates the mystery of the tank man -- his identity, his fate, and his significance for the Chinese leadership. The search for the tank man reveals China's startling social compact -- its embrace of capitalism while dissent is squashed -- designed to stifle the nationwide unrest of 1989. This policy has allowed educated elites and entrepreneurs to profit handsomely, while the majority of Chinese still face brutal working conditions and low wages, and all Chinese must endure strict political and social controls. Some of these controls regulate speech on the Internet -- and have generated criticism over the involvement of major U.S. corporations such as Yahoo!, Cisco, Microsoft, and Google.

In 1918, at the tail end of the First World War, a flu pandemic ripped through the world with such speed and virulence that by the end of the following year an estimated 40 million people would be dead—outstripping by four-fold the number of victims claimed by the war. Where did this particular flu strain come from, and what made it so deadly? "Killer Flu" will show how 85 years later, virologists and epidemiologists the world over are still hunting down the answers to those two critical questions. Their quest has been imbued with a sense of urgency; modern health experts are bracing themselves for a return of the 1918 flu strain, with many suggesting a similar pandemic will occur within the next decade. The show features the work of American pathologist Jeffrey Taubenberger, who found lung tissue from a 1918 flu victim that contained fragments of the undamaged 1918 virus. For the past six years, Taubenberger has been working to map the virus's genetic code one gene at a time in an effort to learn the secret of its killing prowess. He has even introduced some of the old virus's genes into present-day live virus and injected it into lung tissue to better study the way it attacks its victims. His hope is to apply his research on the 1918 virus to the emergence of new influenza strains.

It started with a severed foot in a vacant lot. By the time the painstaking FBI investigation ended, a powerful Mafia crime family was shattered, and its once-invincible "don" faced life behind bars. With firsthand accounts from FBI special agents, this program explores the brave new world of federal investigation, which combines old-fashioned undercover work with cutting-edge financial sleuthing and forensics. The latest SECRETS OF THE DEAD installment tracks the dramatic downfall of "Big Joey" Massino, delving into the largely unheralded FBI effort to cripple the mob. Joseph D. Pistone, who posed as tough-talking jewel thief Donnie Brasco and whose time in the Mafia was later made into the movie Donnie Brasco, provides insight. Tony-winner Liev Schreiber narrates.

Twenty-Sixth Presiding Bishop and Primate of the Episcopal Church, Bishop Jefferts Schori became in November 2006 the first woman to lead a national church in the 520 year history of Anglicanism. She serves as chief pastor to the Episcopal Church's 2.4 million members in 16 countries and 10 dioceses, as well as the American representative to the worldwide Anglican Communion, a body of 38 provinces and 77 million worshippers. Bishop Jefferts Schori has assumed her leadership position at a particularly tumultuous time for the Episcopal Church, specifically due to mounting criticism from more conservative sectors of the Anglican Communion, in parts of Africa and Asia, regarding Episcopal stances on homosexuality, same-sex partnerships, and other social issues. In her first national interview since being elected, she told CNN that she does not believe homosexuality is a sin.

The flaming explosion of the Hindenburg over Lakehurst, New Jersey in 1937 is one of the most famous disasters of the 20th century. It took more than 100 years to develop what was, in its day, the fastest, most technologically advanced and most luxurious form of transportation in the world. It took only 34 seconds to destroy it. The accident that put an end to the golden age of airships is widely believed to have been caused by the ignition of hydrogen gas used for lift. But Addison Bain, a retired NASA scientist, was not satisfied with that explanation. A hydrogen specialist who believed that it is the clean and safe fuel of the future, he set out on a personal quest of theorizing and experimentation to prove that the Hindenburg's real flaw was only skin deep.

In April 1945, the largest battleship ever built set out on the ultimate suicide mission. With its crew of 3,000, Battleship Yamato, the pride of Japan's fleet, sailed to a solo confrontation with the 1500-strong United States Navy. Attacked by a swarm of U. S. dive bombers, the battleship sank within minutes. A NOVA team discovered the wreck and retells the Yamato's extraordinary saga through the eyes of the few Japanese crew who survived the sinking and are still living today. State-of-the-art CGI animation shows viewers what the colossal battleship was like in all its glory at the time of its launching. The program opens a dramatic perspective on the great age of battleships and why it ended so abruptly with the Yamato's disastrous sinking.

Political chaos on Iraq, both here and there. Alberto Gonzales: the e-mail trail. And a personal word about the Don Imus debacle, tonight on "Washington Week." The Iraqi Parliament under siege. The U.S. Military under stress. Secretary of defense Robert Gates said, "I think what this recognizes, though, is that our forces are stretched. There's no question about that." Senator Jim Webb (D-VA) said, "I think there are limits to human endurance, and there are limits to what families can put up with." The White House in search of a solution. Can the war in Iraq be saved? Senator John McCain is taking his presidential ambitions on the answer. Senator John McCain (R-AZ) said, "For my part - for my part - I would rather lose a campaign than a war." And Attorney General Alberto Gonzales stakes his career on the answers he gives an angry Congress about missing White House e-mails. Senator Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "They can't say they've been lost. That's like saying "the dog ate my homework." Dana Perino [Dep White House Press Secretary] said, "I will admit it, you know, there was - we screwed up and we're trying to fix it." Plus radio host Don Imus is fired. What that says about trash talk, journalists, and politics. Covering the week: Linda Robinson of U.S. News and World Report, David Sanger of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

Following 9/11, the U.S. government adopted some controversial new policies to help prevent terrorism here at home, including eavesdropping on Americans' phone calls, secret demands for records under the Patriot Act and the use of FBI sting operations. The Bush Administration contends these tactics have helped save American lives, but critics say they have taken a toll on our liberties. "Security Versus Liberty: The Other War" explores this urgent national debate by talking with both critics and advocates of the new policies and telling the compelling real-life stories of people whose lives have been directly affected. "The Brotherhood" investigates the Muslim Brotherhood's dedication to the spread of a fundamental form of Islam throughout the world -- but is it also supporting terrorists? Award-winning Newsweek journalists Mark Hosenball and Michael Isikoff investigate a movement that preaches peaceful co-existence while offering inspiration for jihadi groups.

Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) [Speaker of the House] said, "The American people are calling for accountability. I hope that the president will heed their call." President George W. Bush said, "It is what it is and will be vetoed, and my veto will be sustained." The debate over pulling troops out of Iraq comes to a head. Is there any room left for compromise? Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "If this president does not get us out of Iraq, when I'm president, I will." The Democrats who want to take the president's place go to South Carolina for their first big debate. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I am proud that I opposed this war from the start." John Edwards said, "Senator Clinton and anyone else who voted for this war has to search themselves and decide whether they believe they voted the right way." Did anyone break out of the pack? Paul Wolfowitz, one of the war's architects, fights to save his job at the World Bank. And the economy sends drastically mixed signals: weak growth but a surging stock market. What's that all about? BILL MOYERS: When people are having a good time, you don't want to be the skunk in the garden. And people were having such a good time at that big White House welcome for Queen Elizabeth II. The NEW YORK TIMES says Her Majesty was "making Americans go weak in the knees." Sometimes we colonials seem so dazzled by British royalty that I wonder if General Washington did defeat Cornwallis at Yorktown. But a less playful thought also occurred. Watching the first and royal families all gussied up I couldn't help but think of Prince Harry, the Queen's grandson, who is headed for Iraq with a cavalry regiment, even though he's a conspicuous target for assassination or kidnapping. There's angst that other members of his regiment will be put at greater risk because of his celebrity. So guess what his comrades -- his fellow soldiers -- are doing? Rather than petition the Queen to keep the young man home, they have gotten shirts printed up with the words across them: "I'm Harry." In other words, the commoners and the Prince are in this together: one for all and all for one. What a notion -- that war should be the great equalizer, that no one's son or daughter is privileged from duty or danger. I wonder how the last four years might have been different if only our president had asked sacrifice from everyone. Instead, mostly folks from the working class and professional soldiers are doing the dying, while the rich spend their tax cuts. War on the cheap, except for those fighting it. Watching all the wrangling in Washington this week over timetables and exit strategies and benchmarks, I wondered if it all wouldn't come quickly to a halt if the next time they pow-wow and palaver, the president and Congress were asked to wear shirts with the words written across them, "I'm Harry."

9/11 has indelibly altered America in ways that people are now starting to earnestly question: not only perpetual orange alerts, barricades and body frisks at the airport, but greater government scrutiny of people's records and electronic surveillance of their communications. The watershed, officials tell FRONTLINE, was the government's shift after 9/11 to a strategy of pre-emption at home -- not just prosecuting terrorists for breaking the law, but trying to find and stop them before they strike.

The Republican field and the fast forward political campaign, plus truth and consequences on Iraq at the Capitol, the White House, and in a high profile new book, tonight on "Washington Week." Mayor Rudolph Giuliani (R-NY) said, "Those are the things that Ronald Reagan taught us: you lead from optimism, you lead from hope, and we should never retreat in the face of terrorism." Embracing presidents past. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I want to thank Mrs. Reagan for the many kindnesses extended to me and my fellow prisoners of war many years ago when we came home." Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA) said, "I took the same course that Ronald Reagan and George Herbert Walker Bush and Henry Hyde took and I said I was wrong, and changed my mind and said I'm pro-life." Not as much affection though for the current president. What does that say about the direction of the 2008 campaign? In Washington, a long awaited veto becomes real. President George W. Bush said, "Setting a dateline for withdrawal is setting a date for failure, and that would be irresponsible." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "Now into the fifth year of a failed policy, this administration should get a clue: it's not working." But is compromise already afoot? And George Tenet's version of the run up to war - the hardcover edition. But why is he telling us now? The reporters covering the stories: John Harris of the Politico, Gloria Borger of CBS News and U.S. News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, and Michael Duffy of TIME magazine.

The White House and the Congress at loggerheads over the war. New faces in Europe and old issues facing the GOP, tonight on "Washington Week." Republicans looking for the exits. Sen. Arlen Specter (R-PA), "There is a sense here certainly about the Democrats and growing among Republicans that there has to be some progress - significant progress to sustain it beyond September." Can the president calm his own party long enough to win this war? President George W. Bush, "It makes sense to have benchmarks as a part of our discussion on how to go forward." Or will he have to use his veto pen once again? In Europe, new faces replace an old nemesis and an old friend. Tony Blair (From tape.), "Today I announce my decision to stand down from the leadership of the Labor Party." Political change abroad and its effect on U.S. policy. And on the 2008 campaign trail, Republicans battle their own pasts, their own policies, and even the Pope. The reporters covering the stories: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Michael Viqueira of NBC News, Helene Cooper of "The New York Times," and James Barnes of "National Journal."

On June 24, 1948, the Soviet Union blocked railroad and street access to West Berlin, starving the population and choking commerce. Allied forces refused to cede the city, and for nearly a year, succeeded in doing what even the best military minds considered impossible - supply two million civilians and 20,000 allied soldiers entirely from the air. Operating on a strict plan masterminded by U.S. General William Turner, allied forces landed planes every three minutes and delivered more than 4,500 tons of supplies each day. Former German soldiers built airfields and repaired engines for the enemies they had been shooting out of the sky just three years before. American and British pilots, so recently delivering death, were now angels of mercy, supplying coal, flour, coffee and chocolate to the beleaguered city. Through the personal stories of those who were there, this program provides a striking look at the first battle of the Cold War and the largest humanitarian campaign the world had ever seen.

In the aftermath of the fall of Saddam Hussein, a group of Americans led by Ambassador L. Paul Bremer III set off to Baghdad to build a new nation and establish democracy in the Arab Middle East. One year later, with Bremer forced to secretly exit what some have called "the most dangerous place on earth," the group left behind lawlessness, insurgency, economic collapse, death, destruction - and much of their idealism. Three years later, as the U.S. continues to look for an exit strategy, the government the Americans helped create and the infrastructure they designed are being tested. FRONTLINE producer Michael Kirk follows the early efforts and ideals of this group as they tried to seize control and disband the Iraqi police, army and Baathist government - and how they became hardened along the way to the realities of postwar Iraq. The program is based on numerous first-person interviews and extensive documentation from the FRONTLINE team that produced "Rumsfeld's War," "The Torture Question" and "The Dark Side."

Length: 60 Airdate: 6/5/2007 9:00:00 PM/501 Service: PBS Format: Documentary
The movie "The Great Escape," starring Steve McQueen, was based on fact - on the most daring and technically ingenious prison escape of World War II. The location was a remote, high-security internment camp for Allied airmen. Known as Stalag Luft III, the camp was at Sagan in present-day Poland. The escape emerged from a stunningly ambitious plan: Allied POWs set out to dig three tunnels more than three hundred feet long and thirty feet below ground, which they nicknamed 'Tom,' 'Dick,' and 'Harry,' so that if the Germans discovered one tunnel there would still be a fallback. NOVA follows a team of archaeologists on a hunt for the single surviving tunnel, 'Dick,' that the Germans never found. Accompanying the team was a group of three of the original escapers, who returned to the scene of their daring escapade for the first time in sixty years. The film shows the ingenious methods and devices improvised by the prisoners: how they surveyed the tunnels, disguised the entrance traps, and engineered an amazing air pump and railway system, all from materials scavenged from the camp. But when the time for the breakout came, the thrill of the escape would take an unexpected and tragic turn.

Immigration reform - dead or just on life support? Scooter Libby heading to jail or toward a pardon? And Russia's Vladimir Putin: friend or wily foe? Tonight, on "Washington Week." The immigration fight consumes the U.S. Senate. Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Every day we have - we continue without this legislation, we have these well trained, well disciplined, highly motivated bodyguards out there chasing people across the desert that are landscapers." Sen. Trent Lott (R-TN) said, "Do we have the courage, tenacity, and the ability to get anything done anymore?" Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "I doubt if the prospects will get better with the passage of time. And it dominates the Republican candidates' debate." Rudy Giuliani said, "The problem with this immigration plan is that it has no real unifying purpose. It's a typical Washington mess." While Democrats squabble over the war. Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "This is George Bush's war. He is responsible for this war." Policy and politics collide. Scooter Libby gets the book thrown at him - two and a half years in jail. Will it stick? The president abroad - President George W. Bush said, "He made some interesting suggestions." - playing diplomatic chicken with an increasingly hostile Russian leader, plus a shake-up at the Pentagon. Covering these stories this week: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, James Barnes of National Journal, Pierre Thomas of ABC News, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Fresh developments on immigration reform, Iraq, White House legal woes, and the 2008 campaign, tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush said, "Each day our nation fails to act, the problem only grows worse." Senator Edward Kennedy (D-MA) said, "Doing nothing is not an alternative. It's not an alternative." The president and supporters of immigration reform bring their plan back from the death. President Bush said, "Gracias." But ultimately, will Congress go along? A new wave of violence reinforces old doubts on Iraq. Senator Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "The bloodiest three months of the war has been since the surge took place." Secretary John Negroponte said, "We expect that fight for security will get harder over the coming months as we engage an increasingly desperate enemy." While at the White House, officials brace for new legal challenges. Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) said, "Have I lost confidence in Attorney General Gonzales? Absolutely yes." Is the fight to remove the attorney general ending - Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said, "I don't recall specifically" -- or just beginning? And how is all this playing out on the 2008 campaign trail? Will Republicans have to answer for their president? As the United States begins one final effort to secure victory through a "surge" of troops, FRONTLINE investigates how strategic and tactical mistakes brought Iraq to virtual civil war. The film recounts how the early mandate to create the conditions for a quick exit of the American military lead to chaos, failure, and sectarian strife. In The Endgame, producer Michael Kirk (Rumsfeld's War, The Torture Question, The Dark Side, and The Lost Year in Iraq) traces why the president decided to risk what military planners once warned could be the worst way to fight in Iraq--door--to--door--and assesses the likelihood of its success. Top administration figures, military commanders, and journalists offer inside details about the new strategy.

A woman in Portland, Oregon has a portable projection screen that may have helped save the Free World. It came with a letter stating that in 1962, it was borrowed from a club of 3D photography enthusiasts in Dayton, Ohio to show President John F. Kennedy the aerial spy photos that helped him resolve the Cuban Missile Crisis. Is it possible that, as the world faced nuclear Armageddon, the U.S. Air Force turned to an amateur club to help identify Russian missiles? Did this unassuming screen play a role in preventing World War III? History Detectives visits Wright-Patterson Air Force Base and learns how the world's first supersonic photo-recon aircraft was rigged with 3D cameras to improve its vantage on Cuba's camouflaged missiles.

In 1941, during the Nazi occupation of Paris, the Gestapo visited Pablo Picasso's Left Bank flat, where a member of the secret police spied a postcard of the artist's most famous work, Guernica. The giant mural memorialized Germany's 1937 aerial obliteration of a small Basque village. "Was it you who did this?" the Nazi demanded of Picasso, to which he replied, "No. It was you." In the eight-part SIMON SCHAMA'S POWER OF ART, internationally acclaimed scholar and writer Simon Schama recounts that story while challenging viewers with a typically provocative query: "Shouldn't art just stick to what it does best, the delivery of pleasure, and
