Dear Mr. Jacobs,

This is to inform you that a copy of the Quarterly Issues / Program Topic Report for WDCQ/WDCP-TV covering the period from July 1, 2007 through September 30, 2007 is attached and has been filed in our Public Files.

Children's Educational and Informational Programming is listed at the end of the report with a summary of hours dedicated to this topic in compliance with the Children's Television Act of 1990. Also at the end of this report is a brief description of each of our Local Productions which address local community issues and concerns.

If you have any questions, please contact me by phone at 1-989-686-9348 or by e-mail: josephyezak@delta.edu.

Sincerely,

Joseph T. Yezak
Programming Manager, WDCQ/WDCP

QUARTERLY PROGRAM TOPIC REPORT

Report Covering 7/01/2007 through 9/30/2007

Prepared and Filed 10/10/2007
by Joseph T. Yezak, Programming Office, WDCQ/WDCP

This report is a sampling of programs that were aired from July 1, 2007 through September 30, 2007 that significantly addressed specific topics.

In addition to a sampling of alphabetical topical listings, at the end of this document is also a listing of educational and informational needs of children programming and local programming designed specifically for our viewing audience to address community issues. Many of the programs listed aired more than once but the only the primary airing is listed. Copies of the July, August and September 2007 Programming Newsletters are also attached which are a brief listing of the monthly program schedules.

T. REX BLOOD?: All we know about dinosaurs comes from fossils. Thanks to paleobiologist Mary Schweitzer, these old bones are telling us more than ever. Schweitzer defied the long-held belief that it was fruitless to search for preserved soft tissues in dinosaur remains. Most experts thought that such structures would have disappeared long ago, but Schweitzer has found evidence of delicate structures such as blood vessels and red blood cells that miraculously survived for millions of years. Recently she examined one cross-section of 68-million-year-old bone and confidently announced: What we have here is a pregnant Tyrannosaurus rex! EPIGENETICS: Once nurture seemed clearly distinct from nature. Now it appears that our diets and lifestyles literally change the expression of our genes. How? By influencing a vast network of chemical switches inside our cells. Called collectively the epigenome, the switches turn genes on and off and may account for the fact that identical twins grow less identical as they age. This new understanding may give us potent new medical therapies and even cures, because many diseases now appear to stem from errors in the epigenome, and such epigenetic errors seem easier to correct than genetic ones. Epigenetic cancer therapy, for example, already seems to be yielding stunning results. KRYPTOS: Get out your pencils: the most mysterious of all codes in the most clandestine of all places has yet to be fully broken. "Kryptos," a coded sculpture in the courtyard of CIA headquarters in Langley, Virginia, contains a long string of seemingly nonsensical letters that conceal a message devised by sculptor James Sanborn. Correspondent and supersleuth Chad Cohen gets cracking, covering the cipher techniques used by Sanborn and the success of amateur code breaker Jim Gillogly at reading portions of the text. The deciphered sections include a poem, a reference to something buried on CIA grounds, and an extract from an eyewitness report of the discovery of King Tut's tomb. But the beguiling last bit of the message remains a mystery. Solutions anyone? PROFILE: ARLIE PETTERS: How does a poor kid from Belize become one of the world's premier researchers in the field of gravitational lensing? Hard work and persistence help, as NOVA reports in its profile of Arlie Petters, Professor of Mathematics and Physics at Duke University. Petters' long journey from the shores of the Caribbean to the cutting edge of mathematical physics took him from Belize to a rough neighborhood in Brooklyn, where he immigrated as a teenager. Petters excelled in high school and then attended Hunter College, where he attracted the attention of the head of a scholarship program for minorities interested in science. A doctorate at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology followed. Throughout his amazing career, Petters has never forgotten his humble origins and continues to help and inspire those back home in Belize.

John James Audubon - whose name became synonymous with American conservation - killed thousands of birds during his quest to create Birds of America, arguably the largest and most beautiful book of the 19th century. Audubon was at once entrepreneur, artist, scientist, husband, father, legend - and walking contradiction. Born in what is now Haiti, the illegitimate son of a French plantation owner and his mistress, Audubon ultimately became the quintessential American pioneer. On the frontier, he played the debonair European. In the drawing rooms of Europe, he acted the part of wild woodsman. Although faithful to his long-suffering wife, he nonetheless wrote her lengthy letters bursting with details of his encounters with other women. Jailed once for bankruptcy, he went on to dine at the White House. The self-taught artist and self-made man was praised by royalty, shunned by his in-laws and blackballed by the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences. AMERICAN MASTERS "John James Audubon: Drawn From Nature," details Audubon's epic adventures while capturing the full-scale beauty of his definitive book.

Clive James was born in Sydney, Australia in 1939, where he was raised by his mother after his father was killed in a plane crash returning from a Japanese POW camp during World War II. He sailed to Britain in 1961 where he attended Cambridge University, excelling in numerous extracurricular activities, including ascending to the Presidency of Footlights, a popular comedy troupe. In Britain, he soon gained esteem as a television critic for THE OBSERVER, for which he wrote for 10 years, until venturing into the television world himself. In 1993, he released FAME IN THE TWENTIETH CENTURY, a PBS series examining film and television stars in the last 100 years, and in 1995, he brought us his innovative travel series, POSTCARDS. Despite television notoriety in Britain, James maintained his work in the literary medium, writing more than 20 books, essays and portraits in the coming years. His most recent collection of biographical essays, CULTURAL AMNESIA, which took him 40 years to accumulate, covers 106 cultural figures stretching from Duke Ellington to Adolph Hitler, all of whom James believes are most worthy of being remembered by generations to come.

The 1960s were years of change, experimentation and hope that transformed a nation. This two-hour film chronicles this era of widespread democratic activism and provocative music, focusing on critical events, from civil rights to the women's liberation movement, the youth counter-culture and the Vietnam War. Through film footage, rare archival photographs and interviews with historians, critics, participants and those on both sides of the generation gap, the documentary captures the electricity, fervor and anger of an era full of great hope and turmoil. And it reflects on the enormous changes that swept the globe during that time and profiles the coming of age of the baby boomers.

How far would you go to stop a war? "The Camden 28" recalls a 1971 raid on a Camden, New Jersey, draft board office by "Catholic left" activists protesting the Vietnam War and its effects on urban America. Arrested on site in a clearly planned sting, the protesters included four Catholic priests, a Lutheran minister and 23 others. The film reveals the story behind the arrests - a provocative tale of government intrigue and personal betrayal - and the ensuing legal battle, which Supreme Court Justice William Brennan called "one of the great trials of the 20th century." Thirty-five years later, the participants take stock of their motives, fears and the costs of their activism - and its relevance to America today. By Anthony Giacchino.

Often thought of as the other Mexican muralist, beside his more flamboyant compatriot Diego Rivera, Orozco was a leader of the Mexican Renaissance. His bold, dynamic frescoes had a profound impact on American painters and inspired Franklin D. Roosevelt to put artists to work during the Great Depression. His most famous U.S. murals -- The Table of Universal Brotherhood, The Epic of American Civilization and Prometheus -- still convey their power in New York, New Hampshire and California. An iconoclastic personality, Orozco survived the loss of his left hand and destruction of more than half his early work by border agents. His travels back and forth across the U.S.-Mexico border evoke the larger Mexican migrant-immigrant experience and have provocative parallels to present times.

After an overview of the Second World War, which engulfed the world from 1939 to 1945 and cost at least 50 million lives, inhabitants of four towns - Mobile, Alabama; Sacramento, California; Waterbury, Connecticut; and Luverne, Minnesota - recall their communities on the eve of the conflict. For them, the events overseas seem far away. Their tranquil lives are shattered by the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, and America is thrust into the great cataclysm. Along with millions of other young men, Sid Phillips and Willie Rushton of Mobile, Ray Leopold of Waterbury and Walter Thompson and Burnett Miller of Sacramento enter the armed forces. In the Philippines, two Americans, Corporal Glenn Frazier and Sascha Weinzheimer (who was eight years old in 1941), are caught up in the Japanese onslaught there, as American and Filipino forces retreat onto Bataan while thousands of civilians are rounded up and imprisoned in Manila. Back home, 110,000 Japanese Americans along the West Coast are forcibly relocated by the government to internment camps. On the East Coast, German U-boats menace Allied shipping offshore. The United States seems unprepared for this kind of total war. Witnessing all of this is Katharine Phillips of Mobile and Al McIntosh, editor of the Rock County Star Herald in Luverne, who chronicles the travails of every family in town. In June 1942, the Navy manages a victory over the Japanese at the Battle of Midway. In August, American land forces, including Sid Phillips of Mobile, face the Japanese army for the first time at Guadalcanal. Abandoned by their fleet with no sea or air support, the men are under constant attack. After six months, the Americans finally prevail and, in the process, stop Japan's expansion in the Pacific.

"Roosevelt's America" is a cinema verite profile of the struggles of a Lieberman refugee to build a new life in America. After being tortured and narrowly escaping execution during Liberia's civil war, Roosevelt Henderson makes his way to America with three of his children, but is forced to leave his pregnant wife behind. He works as a janitor, airport van driver and assembly line worker in order to support his family and help his wife flee their war-torn country. After two year of juggling low wage jobs, Roosevelt's perseverance pays off and he is reunited with his wife, Frances, and his baby daughter. By witnessing Roosevelt's day-to-day struggles, frustrations and achievements, viewers come to appreciate the distance he has traveled during his harrowing journey from torture and desperation in his native Liberia to security and stability in his newly adopted Hamlin. Ultimately "Roosevelt's America" becomes an inspiring story of quiet determination and dignity under duress.

Among inductees of the National Inventors Hall of Fame, his name comes alphabetically after Louis Pasteur. In the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, it follows Parliament-Funkadelic. This singular distinction belongs to Les Paul, whose insatiable curiosity and experiments gave us the musical instrument of the modern era -- the solid-body electric guitar -- and the predominant studio recording technique -- multi-tracking. Audacious and indefatigable at every turn of his career -- from small-town Waukesha to Harlem music haunts to Hollywood studios -- Paul, at age 92, still holds court every Monday night at the Iridium Jazz Club in New York City. AMERICAN MASTERS explores the revolutionary results of his drive to create sounds that had "never been heard on earth."

In 1941, during the Nazi occupation of Paris, the Gestapo visited Pablo Picasso's Left Bank flat, where a member of the secret police spied a postcard of the artist's most famous work, Guernica. The giant mural memorialized Germany's 1937 aerial obliteration of a small Basque village. "Was it you who did this?" the Nazi demanded of Picasso, to which he replied, "No. It was you." In the eight-part SIMON SCHAMA'S POWER OF ART, internationally acclaimed scholar and writer Simon Schama recounts that story while challenging viewers with a typically provocative query: "Shouldn't art just stick to what it does best, the delivery of pleasure, and forget about being a paintbrush warrior? John James Audubon - whose name became synonymous with American conservation - killed thousands of birds during his quest to create Birds of America, arguably the largest and most beautiful book of the 19th century. Audubon was at once entrepreneur, artist, scientist, husband, father, legend - and walking contradiction. Born in what is now Haiti, the illegitimate son of a French plantation owner and his mistress, Audubon ultimately became the quintessential American pioneer. On the frontier, he played the debonair European. In the drawing rooms of Europe, he acted the part of wild woodsman. Although faithful to his long-suffering wife, he nonetheless wrote her lengthy letters bursting with details of his encounters with other women. Jailed once for bankruptcy, he went on to dine at the White House. The self-taught artist and self-made man was praised by royalty, shunned by his in-laws and blackballed by the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences. AMERICAN MASTERS "John James Audubon: Drawn From Nature," details Audubon's epic adventures while capturing the full-scale beauty of his definitive book.

The Yes Men are Andy Bichlbaum and Mike Bonanno, two impersonators who use satire to bring media attention to issues that otherwise might be overlooked. "We actually see this as a form of journalism. Or perhaps more precisely, the form of collaboration of journalists," explains Bichlbaum in his interview with Bill Moyers. "A lot of the issues that we address journalists want to cover. But...in many situations, editorial control won't let them unless there's a good little hook behind it. And so, we've found a way to create funny spectacles that give journalists the excuse to cover issues." The Yes Men have impersonated representatives from Halliburton, Dow Chemical, Exxon, and others, giving public presentations aimed at exposing what they believe to be discrepancies between how these groups want to be seen and how they really act. They call this process, "identity correction." While some criticize them for deception and call their hijinx unethical, they argue "these kinds of [corporate and political] wrongdoings are at such a scale - they're so vast compared to our white lies that we think it's ethical."

Clive James was born in Sydney, Australia in 1939, where he was raised by his mother after his father was killed in a plane crash returning from a Japanese POW camp during World War II. He sailed to Britain in 1961 where he attended Cambridge University, excelling in numerous extracurricular activities, including ascending to the Presidency of Footlights, a popular comedy troupe. In Britain, he soon gained esteem as a television critic for THE OBSERVER, for which he wrote for 10 years, until venturing into the television world himself. In 1993, he released FAME IN THE TWENTIETH CENTURY, a PBS series examining film and television stars in the last 100 years, and in 1995, he brought us his innovative travel series, POSTCARDS. Despite television notoriety in Britain, James maintained his work in the literary medium, writing more than 20 books, essays and portraits in the coming years. His most recent collection of biographical essays, CULTURAL AMNESIA, which took him 40 years to accumulate, covers 106 cultural figures stretching from Duke Ellington to Adolph Hitler, all of whom James believes are most worthy of being remembered by generations to come.

The 1960s were years of change, experimentation and hope that transformed a nation. This two-hour film chronicles this era of widespread democratic activism and provocative music, focusing on critical events, from civil rights to the women's liberation movement, the youth counter-culture and the Vietnam War. Through film footage, rare archival photographs and interviews with historians, critics, participants and those on both sides of the generation gap, the documentary captures the electricity, fervor and anger of an era full of great hope and turmoil. And it reflects on the enormous changes that swept the globe during that time and profiles the coming of age of the baby boomers.

Latinos, this nation's largest and fastest-growing minority group, are big business. This program examines how efforts to profit from this group are shaping the contemporary Latino identity. The documentary, whose focal point is George Lopez, an icon and advocate for Latinos' move into the mainstream, offers rare behind-the-scenes access to Lopez' life and world as he shares his struggles to represent Latinos in a manner true to their realities and aspirations. As Cosby did for African Americans decades earlier, Lopez, through his comedy, aspires to normalize the image of Latinos in a way that delights and entertains. This program contrasts Lopez' endeavors with the efforts of marketers intent on spinning Latinos as a wholly distinct subculture. The show also features conversations with members of the much-coveted Latino youth market, whose tastes and interests are far more eclectic than one would think.

Often thought of as the other Mexican muralist, beside his more flamboyant compatriot Diego Rivera, Orozco was a leader of the Mexican Renaissance. His bold, dynamic frescoes had a profound impact on American painters and inspired Franklin D. Roosevelt to put artists to work during the Great Depression. His most famous U.S. murals -- The Table of Universal Brotherhood, The Epic of American Civilization and Prometheus -- still convey their power in New York, New Hampshire and California. An iconoclastic personality, Orozco survived the loss of his left hand and destruction of more than half his early work by border agents. His travels back and forth across the U.S.-Mexico border evoke the larger Mexican migrant-immigrant experience and have provocative parallels to present times.

The final episode features the history of salsa music and dance in Philadelphia, the first Mexican-American Prima Ballerina Evelyn Cisneros, Tejana music pioneer Lydia Mendoza and the father of Chicano music and National Medal of Arts recipient, Lalo Guerrero. The salsa segment includes commentary on renowned performers Celia Cruz and Tito Puente. Lydia Mendoza was part of the early emerging recording industry in the United States. At a time when Spanish language music was exclusively imported from Mexico and Latin America, she began recording the original music in Texas. She along with Lalo Guerrero made a mark in American music. Guerrero is best known for his musical parodies.

With the Federal government's increasing reliance on private corporations for military and intelligence projects, many government contractors have already become household names -- but there is a multi-billion dollar company, one that has received more private government contracts than any other, that you've probably never heard of: Science Applications International Corporation. SAIC, as it is known, has a workforce of 44,000, annual revenues that reached $8 billion in 2006, and a list of current and former board members that reads like a who's who of political and military heavyweights. In a story for VANITY FAIR, the venerable investigative team of Donald L. Barlett and James B. Steele pull back the curtain of government contracting to reveal that even though "several of SAIC's biggest projects have turned out to be colossal failures," in the end, the company always manages to get paid.

For thousands of residents living alongside industrial plants in Southeast Texas, the odors, dust and noise in the air were clear signs the plants were polluting the environment. But no one ever bothered to tell them exactly what they were breathing until the HOUSTON CHRONICLE published its series of investigative articles called "In Harm's Way." The CHRONICLE's testing confirmed that "air toxics," including known human carcinogens, were being emitted into local communities. At the same time, the paper reported, Texas's guidelines for regulating such toxics were among the most lenient and vague in the country. EXPOSÉ details the CHRONICLE investigation that put a human face on the issues of industrial pollution and regulation.

In the fall of 2003, one of the largest recorded wildfires in California's history destroyed over 2,200 houses and killed fifteen people. Soon after, many who'd lost their homes had a rude awakening: their insurance did not nearly cover their losses as expected. The insurance industry, which claims to cover "more property, more lives, more liability-related risks than any time at history," is busy fighting allegations that customers are receiving smaller payouts than what they were promised. NOW collaborates with Bloomberg Markets magazine to investigate tactics some insurance companies may be using to reduce, avoid, or stall homeowners' claims in an effort to boost their own earnings.

A tragedy is unfolding in the cotton-growing region of Vidarbha, central India, where crop failures, sinking global cotton prices, spiraling debts and a forbidding bureaucracy are driving farmers to unbearable levels of despair. In 2006, in Vidarbha alone, 1,044 suicides were reported - one suicide every eight hours. WIDE ANGLE captures the tense relations between farmers and illegal money lenders, traveling salesmen hawking expensive "miracle seeds" that often require irrigation few farmers have and a businessman-turned-activist who's staking a political career on the cause of Vidarbha's farmers and farm widows.

In 2004, an 18-wheeler crossed the median on a highway north of Dallas and collided with two vehicles, killing ten people, including three children - a tragedy that represented but a fraction of the roughly 5,000 Americans who die each year in accidents involving big trucks. However, it was this particular accident that set an investigative team from The Dallas Morning News on a 14 month-long exploration that revealed - among other things - unqualified drivers, dangerous working conditions, lack of safety inspections, and very little oversight of an industry that affects every city in the country.

Length: 90 Airdate: 9/5/2007 4:00 AM/500 Service: PBS Format: Documentary

Los Angeles is now the country's center for apparel manufacturing, but many of its factories bear an eerie resemblance to New York's early 20th-century sweatshops. "Made in L.A." follows the remarkable journey of three Latina immigrants working in L.A.'s garment factories and their struggle for self-empowerment as they wage a three-year battle to bring a major clothing retailer to the negotiating table. This intimate film offers a rare and poignant glimpse into the "other" California, where immigrants in many industries toil long hours for sub-minimum wages, fighting for an opportunity in a new country. A co-production with the Independent Television Service (ITVS). A Diverse Voices Project co-production. A co-presentation with Latino Public Broadcasting. By Almudena Carracedo and Robert Bahar.

Latinos, this nation's largest and fastest-growing minority group, are big business. This program examines how efforts to profit from this group are shaping the contemporary Latino identity. The documentary, whose focal point is George Lopez, an icon and advocate for Latinos' move into the mainstream, offers rare behind-the-scenes access to Lopez' life and world as he shares his struggles to represent Latinos in a manner true to their realities and aspirations. As Cosby did for African Americans decades earlier, Lopez, through his comedy, aspires to normalize the image of Latinos in a way that delights and entertains. This program contrasts Lopez' endeavors with the efforts of marketers intent on spinning Latinos as a wholly distinct subculture. The show also features conversations with members of the much-coveted Latino youth market, whose tastes and interests are far more eclectic than one would think.

When the Chicago Tribune's Cam Simpson heard a report on the evening news about 12 Nepalese men who were kidnapped and brutally executed by an extremist Islamic group in Iraq, he was disturbed and intrigued. The men were on their way to jobs in support of American troops, and, according to the group's website, they were killed for cooperating with America's "crusader forces" in Iraq. Simpson, familiar with the military's increasing privatization of support operations, smelled a big story. In a classic case of dogged investigative reporting, he traced each step of the Nepalese men's journey from the foothills of the Himalayas to their brutal murder in Iraq, and in the process illustrated a vast international human trafficking network with ties to American corporations.

A California Assemblywoman's personal environmental mission to reduce auto emissions inspired her colleagues to act and other states to follow suit. Supported by favorable federal court decisions, encouraged by Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger, and armed with new laws, her state is now on the cutting edge of efforts to reduce the carbon footprint of everything from American power plants to automobiles. This week NOW investigates not only California's aggressive stance against global warming, but also strong political opposition standing in the way of its expansion. Are California and the Environmental Protection Agency headed for a showdown?

For thousands of residents living alongside industrial plants in Southeast Texas, the odors, dust and noise in the air were clear signs the plants were polluting the environment. But no one ever bothered to tell them exactly what they were breathing until the HOUSTON CHRONICLE published its series of investigative articles called "In Harm's Way." The CHRONICLE's testing confirmed that "air toxics," including known human carcinogens, were being emitted into local communities. At the same time, the paper reported, Texas's guidelines for regulating such toxics were among the most lenient and vague in the country. EXPOSÉ details the CHRONICLE investigation that put a human face on the issues of industrial pollution and regulation.

The Miami real estate market has been booming, but that growth has left some residents out in the cold. With an innovative tax on commercial real estate transactions, money was flowing into the Miami-Dade Housing Agency, the body charged with building affordable housing. But there was a problem. A lot of money was going out. But not a lot of houses were being built. In an investigation one editor described as a "bomb going off in the city," reporter Debbie Cenziper went inside the agency's own records, interviewed dozens of residents and hunted down the money to expose the mismanagement, pet projects, and special favors taking place at the expense of the very people the agency was supposed to serve.

Length: 90 Airdate: 7/25/2007 4:00 AM/500 Service: PBS Format: Documentary

In the 1990s, at the height of the prison-building boom, a prison opened in rural America every 15 days. "Prison Town, USA" tells the story of Susanville, one California town that tries to resuscitate its economy by building a prison - with unforeseen consequences. Weaving the stories of a laid-off mill worker turned guard, a struggling dairy owner and an inmate's family stranded in Susanville, the film illuminates the legacy of an industry that is transforming rural America. Directors/producers/writers: Katie Galloway and Po Kutchins. Co-production with Independent Television Service (ITVS) and KQED/Truly California.

In the fall of 2003, one of the largest recorded wildfires in California's history destroyed over 2,200 houses and killed fifteen people. Soon after, many who'd lost their homes had a rude awakening: their insurance did not nearly cover their losses as expected. The insurance industry, which claims to cover "more property, more lives, more liability-related risks than any time at history," is busy fighting allegations that customers are receiving smaller payouts than what they were promised. NOW collaborates with Bloomberg Markets magazine to investigate tactics some insurance companies may be using to reduce, avoid, or stall homeowners' claims in an effort to boost their own earnings.

What does a family have to endure to create a future for itself? In April 2000, Alex White Plume and his Lakota family planted industrial hemp on the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota after other crops had failed. They put their hopes for a sustainable economy in hemp's hardiness and a booming worldwide demand for its many products, from clothing to food. Although growing hemp, a relative of marijuana, was banned in the U.S., Alex believed that tribal sovereignty, along with hemp's non-psychoactive properties, would protect him. But when federal agents raided the White Plumes' fields, the Lakota Nation was swept into a Byzantine struggle over tribal sovereignty, economic rights and common sense. Director: Suree Towfighnia; producer: Courtney Hermann.

A public opinion poll from the American Research Group recently reported that more than four in ten Americans -- 45% -- favor impeachment hearings for President Bush and more than half -- 54% -- favored impeachment for Vice President Cheney. Unhappiness about the war in Iraq isn't the only cause of the unsettled feelings of the electorate. Recent events like President Bush's pardoning of Scooter Libby, the refusal of Vice President Cheney's office to surrender emails under subpoena to Congress and the President's prohibition of testimony of former White House counsel Harriet E. Miers in front of the House Judiciary Committee have caused unease over claims of "executive privilege." In addition, many of the White House anti-terror initiatives and procedures -- from the status of "enemy combatants" in Guantanamo to warrantless wiretapping -- have come under legal scrutiny in Congress and the courts. Bill Moyers gets perspective on the role of impeachment in American political life from Constitutional scholar Bruce Fein, who wrote the first article of impeachment against President Bill Clinton, and THE NATION's John Nichols, author of THE GENIUS OF IMPEACHMENT.

In San Salvador, El Salvador, two thousand miles from Los Angeles's Eighteenth Street, a gang known as "18" governs its territory like an armed militia. In the mid 1990s, thousands of Salvadoran nationals living illegally in the U.S. were deported to their homeland. Some brought L.A. gang culture back with them to a country beset by poverty and awash in arms. Organizing support for gang members in need, meting out justice to those who would defy the gang's code and waging an endless vendetta against its enemies, 18 is helping to make El Salvador one of the most violent and crime-ridden countries in the world. 18 with a Bullet presents a chilling portrait of six months in the life of this notorious Central American gang.

A senator disgraced, an attorney general quits, the primary crunch, and conflicting reports on Iraq, tonight on "Washington Week." A United States senator spiraling toward resignation. Sen. Larry Craig (R-ID), said "I did nothing wrong at the Minneapolis Airport." The five-day scandal about homosexuality, hypocrisy and guilt, and why Republicans are moving so fast to get past the embarrassment. An attorney general prepared to leave town as well. Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said, "I have lived the American dream. Even my worst days as attorney general have been better than my father's best days." But his legacy and his actions remain under scrutiny. The primary clash: as state parties squeeze the voting calendar even more, will Iowa and New Hampshire still be first or will states like Florida and Michigan beat them to the punch? And a series of new reports and a new $50 billion price tag set the stage for yet another showdown over the war in Iraq. Covering the week, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, Pete Williams of NBC News, Karen Tumulty of TIME magazine, and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

How far would you go to stop a war? "The Camden 28" recalls a 1971 raid on a Camden, New Jersey, draft board office by "Catholic left" activists protesting the Vietnam War and its effects on urban America. Arrested on site in a clearly planned sting, the protesters included four Catholic priests, a Lutheran minister and 23 others. The film reveals the story behind the arrests - a provocative tale of government intrigue and personal betrayal - and the ensuing legal battle, which Supreme Court Justice William Brennan called "one of the great trials of the 20th century." Thirty-five years later, the participants take stock of their motives, fears and the costs of their activism - and its relevance to America today. By Anthony Giacchino.

Whispers in the courthouse about "missing cases" and a clandestine meeting at midnight started rookie reporter Peter Zuckerman of the Idaho Falls Post Register on an investigation that would lead to the exposure of a pedophile working within the local Boy Scouts. What was hidden from the public concealed within those court records - was the story of a Boy Scout leader named Brad Stowell, who had admitted under oath to molesting about two dozen children. Zuckerman, along with Executive Editor Dean Miller, fought successfully to unseal court records and then tracked down victims of abuse to reveal that Boy Scout leadership and at least one official in the Mormon Church - which sponsors most of the Boy Scout Troops in Eastern Idaho - knew of Stowell's history, yet allowed him to work in close proximity to children. The Post Register published the "Scouts' Honor" series in 2005 and the paper immediately came under fire from some in the community. And the fallout of the stories ended up being far more dramatic than anyone had anticipated when one of the reporters came under attack.

Have the Democrats already settled on a nominee? Maybe yes, maybe no. We'll sort it all out tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "When I'm president." Hillary Clinton's big week forces other candidates to redefine conventional wisdom. John Edwards said, "I've raised more money in this campaign than any candidate in 2003-2004 raised at this stage of the campaign." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "It's the candidate who raises the most money, but a lot of times it's the candidate who has the best message and then the money follows." Is it the money or the momentum? The Democratic race heats up. The Supreme Court steps back into two touchy issues: agreeing to decide who gets to vote and how felons get to die. And at the United Nations, Iranian leader Mahmoud Ahmadinejad enrages some and confounds others. Covering the week: James Barnes of "National Journal," Jeanne Cummings of Politico, Linda Greenhouse of the "New York Times," and Barbara Slavin of "U.S.A. Today."

The Miami real estate market has been booming, but that growth has left some residents out in the cold. With an innovative tax on commercial real estate transactions, money was flowing into the Miami-Dade Housing Agency, the body charged with building affordable housing. But there was a problem. A lot of money was going out. But not a lot of houses were being built. In an investigation one editor described as a "bomb going off in the city," reporter Debbie Cenziper went inside the agency's own records, interviewed dozens of residents and hunted down the money to expose the mismanagement, pet projects, and special favors taking place at the expense of the very people the agency was supposed to serve.

Airdate: 7/20/2007 8:00 PM/502 Service: PBS

How do we get out of Iraq and if we do, does the terror threat grow or diminish? That plus why money matters on the campaign trail and on Wall Street tonight on "Washington Week." In Washington and Baghdad it's all about the clock. Senator George Voinovich (R-OH) said, "What are you doing to let them know that this time is running out? The time is running out." Republicans want to get out of Iraq. Democrats want to get out of Iraq, but the president and the generals say "give us just a little more time." LIEUTENANT GENERAL ODIERNO said, "I'm hoping that this will continue over the next two to three months, another reason why as we give our assessment in September it's important that we have a bit more time so we can do evaluation of this progress." But is when the right question? What about how and who? Is al Qaeda the threat it's cracked up to be? A new intelligence report says yes, but Iraq may not be the biggest problem. On the campaign trail, we follow the money and the candidates raising it. What do the dollars tell us about what kind of president they would be? Governor Bill Richardson said, "This election should not be on who the biggest celebrity is or who has the most money or who's the biggest rock star, although I'm working on that." And on Wall Street only good news, so why is this guy so down beat? Covering the week, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of The Politico, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

Gold Futures is a David-and-Goliath story set in a scenic Romanian village in the heart of Transylvania. At stake: Europe's largest deposit of gold ore - and a 2000-year-old village community that has existed since the ancient Romans found gold in the mountains. Now, as a Canadian company plans the largest open-pit gold mine in Europe, mineral wealth and badly-needed jobs compete with time-honored rural traditions and concerns about poisoning the environment. Set against the backdrop of Rosia Montana's misty forests, Gold Futures captures the unfolding conflict between villagers who welcome the company's buy-out offers and their neighbors who remain fiercely defensive of their way of life and anxious to maintain the stunning landscape of their homeland.

The economy is on the mind of the president, and so is the precarious position of Pakistan's leader. Plus, GOP politics in middle America. I'm Alexis Simendinger sitting in for Gwen Ifill. All this, tonight on Washington Week. The president heads for his summer vacation by drawing a few lines in the sand, about the economy - President George W. Bush said, "The American economy is the envy of the world and we need to keep it that way." - about Iraq - Pres. Bush said, "The fundamental question facing America is, is it worth it? Does it matter whether or not we stay? My answer is it does matter." and about a looming battle with Congress in the fall. Pres. Bush said "The bill Congress sent to my desk leaves some of the key priorities unfulfilled." Is it the calm before the autumn storm for the commander-in-chief? Pres. Bush said, "Put up your dukes." He's a key ally in the fight against terrorism and a nuclear player too, but could Pervez Musharraf's days be numbered? And if so, what could that mean for the United States? And all eyes are on Iowa this week for an early GOP test of organization and support. A look at the national frontrunner - Mayor Rudolph Giuliani (R-NY) said, "A description of my mistakes in 30 seconds?" - and how his northeast urban sensibilities are playing in the heartland. Plus, the topsy-turvy primary calendar takes another twist. Could voting for campaign '08 actually start in 2007? Covering these stories this week: Peter Baker of the "Washington Post," Janine Zacharia of Bloomberg News, and Karen Tumulty of "TIME" magazine.

Gold Futures is a David-and-Goliath story set in a scenic Romanian village in the heart of Transylvania. At stake: Europe's largest deposit of gold ore - and a 2000-year-old village community that has existed since the ancient Romans found gold in the mountains. Now, as a Canadian company plans the largest open-pit gold mine in Europe, mineral wealth and badly-needed jobs compete with time-honored rural traditions and concerns about poisoning the environment. Set against the backdrop of Rosia Montana's misty forests, Gold Futures captures the unfolding conflict between villagers who welcome the company's buy-out offers and their neighbors who remain fiercely defensive of their way of life and anxious to maintain the stunning landscape of their homeland.

In 2003, Wide Angle profiled seven children from seven different countries as they started their first year of school in the unprecedented multi-year documentary project Time for School. This year, Back to School checks in on the students, now in third grade, some with their future education almost assured and others clearly in danger of dropping out. Like Michael Apted's 7-Up film series, Wide Angle will periodically visit these children through 2015 to update the events of their lives and their progress. How many will successfully graduate? How many will drop out, and why? What differences will we see between the boys and the girls? These children's stories will offer rich insight to American audiences about the striking disparities of circumstance and opportunity in different countries around the world.

Series Title: P.O.V. Episode Title: The Hobart Shakespeareans Version: SD-Base

Length: 60 Airdate: 8/8/2007 4:00 AM/500 Service: PBS Format: Documentary

Teacher Rafe Esquith has a point of view - a very strong one - about educating children of immigrants.

Teaching in Los Angeles at one of the nation's largest inner-city grade schools, Hobart Elementary, Esquith leads his class of fifth graders through an uncompromising curriculum of English, mathematics, geography and literature. He inspires them with cross-country trips to learn history firsthand. And at the end of the semester, every student performs in a full-length Shakespeare play: in this case Hamlet, with advice from actors Ian McKellen and Michael York. Despite language barriers and poverty, these "Hobart Shakespeareans" move on to attend outstanding colleges, motivated by a teacher honored with a National Medal of Arts.

age of 7, Wilson explains that he no longer was very good at bird-watching, so decided to "turn towards the little things in life," namely ants. At 13, he discovered the first U.S. colony of fire ants near the docks of Mobile, Alabama, well on his way to becoming one of the country's foremost myrmecologists (ant biologists), discovering the ways intricate chemical signals affect colony behavior. While a professor at Harvard, Wilson used his insect expertise as the basis for larger study into animal and human behavior, releasing in 1975, SOCIOBIOLOGY: THE NEW SYNTHESIS, advancing Darwin's study of evolution into the realm of behavior.

John James Audubon - whose name became synonymous with American conservation - killed thousands of birds during his quest to create Birds of America, arguably the largest and most beautiful book of the 19th century. Audubon was at once entrepreneur, artist, scientist, husband, father, legend - and walking contradiction. Born in what is now Haiti, the illegitimate son of a French plantation owner and his mistress, Audubon ultimately became the quintessential American pioneer. On the frontier, he played the debonair European. In the drawing rooms of Europe, he acted the part of wild woodsman. Although faithful to his long-suffering wife, he nonetheless wrote her lengthy letters bursting with details of his encounters with other women. Jailed once for bankruptcy, he went on to dine at the White House. The self-taught artist and self-made man was praised by royalty, shunned by his in-laws and blackballed by the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences. AMERICAN MASTERS "John James Audubon: Drawn From Nature," details Audubon's epic adventures while capturing the full-scale beauty of his definitive book.

A year and a half before the Federal Emergency Management Agency made national news with its botched response to Hurricane Katrina, the South Florida Sun-Sentinel was already on top of the story of waste and fraud at the troubled agency. The head of FEMA, Michael Brown, dismissed the paper's reporting. But the story wouldn't blow over, and as Hurricane Katrina approached Louisiana the whole country would become painfully aware of what the South Florida Sun-Sentinel already knew: FEMA was a national disaster in itself.

The hurricane season of 2004 is categorized as one of the most active on record. It begins with an uneventful June and July then suddenly turns violent in August. Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami are confronted with satellite images showing a steady stream of tropical storms spinning across the Atlantic from Africa. Combining their experience with the latest technology they focus on making the most accurate predictions. As Hurricane Specialist Jack Bevens says, "If you get it wrong you can get a lot of people killed." No one wants to risk a wrong forecast. Anatomy of a Hurricane goes behind the scenes at the National Hurricane Center to see forecasters on a mission to save lives and property. It is a look at the stressful work of a dedicated staff as they track Charley, Frances, Ivan and Jeanne - all major hurricanes with unexpected challenges. It is also a look at the complicated dynamics of the atmosphere - why these hurricanes form and where they go.

They're the flood victims who were left behind --the tens of thousands of household pets separated from their owners in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. Now, in this special episode of Nature, we take you to the front lines of the battle to rescue these helpless animals -- before it's too late. We travel with animal rescue teams by small boat through the flooded streets of the devastated city, searching for survivors -- a dog stranded on a rooftop -- a kitten trapped in the branches of a tree -- all without food and water for days -- or weeks. With the odds against them, rescuers use any means necessary -- up to and including a National Guard tank -- to reach these animals in distress. We're there as they retrieve the animals, and then -- amazingly, amidst all the chaos and destruction -- reunite the lucky few with their owners. Along the way, we'll see what happened to the other animal inhabitants of New Orleans -- from the zoo and aquarium to the wildlife of Lake Pontchartrain. Witness the heroic efforts to save Katrina's animal victims -- on Nature.

What does a family have to endure to create a future for itself? In April 2000, Alex White Plume and his Lakota family planted industrial hemp on the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota after other crops had failed. They put their hopes for a sustainable economy in hemp's hardiness and a booming worldwide demand for its many products, from clothing to food. Although growing hemp, a relative of marijuana, was banned in the U.S., Alex believed that tribal sovereignty, along with hemp's non-psychoactive properties, would protect him. But when federal agents raided the White Plumes' fields, the Lakota Nation was swept into a Byzantine struggle over tribal sovereignty, economic rights and common sense. Prior to the 20th century, most Americans prepared their dead for burial with the help of family and friends. Today, most funerals are part of a multi-million-dollar industry run by professionals. The increased reliance on mortuaries has alienated Americans from life's only inevitability - death. This program explores the growing home-funeral movement by following several families in their most intimate moments as they reclaim the end of life, forgoing a typical mortuary funeral to care for their loved ones at home.

Length: 60 Airdate: 9/15/2007 1:30 AM/500 Service: PBS

On the heels of a much-anticipated progress report in Washington, NOW travels to Iraq for an exclusive, hard look at the war through the telling eyes of U.S. soldiers on the ground, and of the families they left behind. We also examine first-hand the so-called "Anbar Awakening," a controversial partnership between U.S. soldiers and Sunni tribal leaders, many of whom who had previously been fighting the Americans. Some-including President Bush-are calling this a significant step forward in reestablishing peace and order in Iraq. Hear what soldiers on the ground have to say. We first met the Third Infantry's First Brigade from Georgia's Fort Stewart in a NOW show broadcast last January, only weeks before they headed back to Iraq for the third deployment in four years. As the long months of the "surge" unfold, we see them fighting an elusive enemy that prefers roadside bombs to pitched battles, while back at home their newborns become toddlers, and birthdays and anniversaries come and go. With the personal and political effects of constant redeployment and re-strategizing apparent everywhere, are we at a turning point or a breaking point?

Length: 30 Airdate: 9/27/2007 10:30 PM/502 Service: PBS

"Roosevelt's America" is a cinema verite profile of the struggles of a Lieberman refugee to build a new life in America. After being tortured and narrowly escaping execution during Liberia's civil war, Roosevelt Henderson makes his way to America with three of his children, but is forced to leave his pregnant wife behind. He works as a janitor, airport van driver and assembly line worker in order to support his family and help his wife flee their war-torn country. After two year of juggling low wage jobs, Roosevelt's perseverance pays off and he is reunited with his wife, Frances, and his baby daughter. By witnessing Roosevelt's day-to-day struggles, frustrations and achievements, viewers come to appreciate the distance he has traveled during his harrowing journey from torture and desperation in his native Liberia to security and stability in his newly adopted Hamlin. Ultimately "Roosevelt's America" becomes an inspiring story of quiet determination and dignity under duress.

For thousands of residents living alongside industrial plants in Southeast Texas, the odors, dust and noise in the air were clear signs the plants were polluting the environment. But no one ever bothered to tell them exactly what they were breathing until the HOUSTON CHRONICLE published its series of investigative articles called "In Harm's Way." The CHRONICLE's testing confirmed that "air toxics," including known human carcinogens, were being emitted into local communities. At the same time, the paper reported, Texas's guidelines for regulating such toxics were among the most lenient and vague in the country. EXPOSÉ details the CHRONICLE investigation that put a human face on the issues of industrial pollution and regulation.

Covering America's Kids: This week, both the House and Senate will likely vote on a bill to expand the federal program, called SCHIP, that provides health insurance to children from lower-income families that earn too much to qualify for Medicaid. Though support for the bill is bipartisan, President Bush has promised to veto it, claiming it covers too many families who don't need it. The fund will run out of money on September 30. Learn more about SCHIP. Reducing Greenhouse Gas Emissions: A federal court in Vermont this week endorsed state regulations that limit harmful tailpipe emissions. California was the first state to enact such rules and 13 others have followed its lead. Learn more about the battle to reduce auto emissions.

Bouts of fierce anger, depression, and anxiety that previous generations of soldiers described as "shell shock" or "combat/battle fatigue" now earn a clinical diagnosis: Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder. But the relatively new medical label doesn't guarantee soldiers will get the care they need. NOW looks at how America's newest crop of returning soldiers is coping with the emotional scars of war, and some new and innovative treatments for them. In the show, we spent time with Iraq War veteran Michael Zacchea, a Marine lieutenant colonel who trained Iraqi troops and fought in the battle of Fallujah. Haunted by the violence he saw there, Zacchea and other soldiers diagnosed with PTSD now face what could be a lifelong struggle to leave the horrors of war behind and reclaim their once-peaceful lives.

The Senate is set to soon vote on the Matthew Shepard Act, which would expand the coverage of federal hate crimes to include violent attacks against homosexuals. In a NOW web-exclusive interview, Judy Shepard, whose gay son Matthew was beaten to death in 1998, urges passage of the bill. "The America that I grew up believing in says that everyone is equal under the law," Shepard tells NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa. If the Senate approves the measure, which cleared the House in March, President Bush is expected to veto it. "It's very disheartening when the leader of our nation goes on national TV and says that gay people aren't deserving of every equality everyone else [has]," Shepard tells Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa.

A senator disgraced, an attorney general quits, the primary crunch, and conflicting reports on Iraq, tonight on "Washington Week." A United States senator spiraling toward resignation. Sen. Larry Craig (R-ID), said "I did nothing wrong at the Minneapolis Airport." The five-day scandal about homosexuality, hypocrisy and guilt, and why Republicans are moving so fast to get past the embarrassment. An attorney general prepared to leave town as well. Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said, "I have lived the American dream. Even my worst days as attorney general have been better than my father's best days." But his legacy and his actions remain under scrutiny. The primary clash: as state parties squeeze the voting calendar even more, will Iowa and New Hampshire still be first or will states like Florida and Michigan beat them to the punch? And a series of new reports and a new $50 billion price tag set the stage for yet another showdown over the war in Iraq. The Miami real estate market has been booming, but that growth has left some residents out in the cold. With an innovative tax on commercial real estate transactions, money was flowing into the Miami-Dade Housing Agency, the body charged with building affordable housing. But there was a problem. A lot of money was going out. But not a lot of houses were being built. In an investigation one editor described as a "bomb going off in the city," reporter Debbie Cenziper went inside the agency's own records, interviewed dozens of residents and hunted down the money to expose the mismanagement, pet projects, and special favors taking place at the expense of the very people the agency was supposed to serve.

In San Salvador, El Salvador, two thousand miles from Los Angeles's Eighteenth Street, a gang known as "18" governs its territory like an armed militia. In the mid 1990s, thousands of Salvadoran nationals living illegally in the U.S. were deported to their homeland. Some brought L.A. gang culture back with them to a country beset by poverty and awash in arms. Organizing support for gang members in need, meting out justice to those who would defy the gang's code and waging an endless vendetta against its enemies, 18 is helping to make El Salvador one of the most violent and crime-ridden countries in the world. 18 with a Bullet presents a chilling portrait of six months in the life of this notorious Central American gang.

Often thought of as the other Mexican muralist, beside his more flamboyant compatriot Diego Rivera, Orozco was a leader of the Mexican Renaissance. His bold, dynamic frescoes had a profound impact on American painters and inspired Franklin D. Roosevelt to put artists to work during the Great Depression. His most famous U.S. murals -- The Table of Universal Brotherhood, The Epic of American Civilization and Prometheus -- still convey their power in New York, New Hampshire and California. An iconoclastic personality, Orozco survived the loss of his left hand and destruction of more than half his early work by border agents. His travels back and forth across the U.S.-Mexico border evoke the larger Mexican migrant-immigrant experience and have provocative parallels to present times.

Becoming the Story: While investigating the story of elite professional athletes and their possible use of performance-enhancing drugs, two journalists for the SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE, found themselves making the news instead of reporting it. Through a confidential source, Lance Williams and Mark Fainaru-Wada gained access to sealed grand jury testimony that included statements from baseball superstars Barry Bonds and Jason Giambi and Olympic Gold Medalist Tim Montgomery. The information Williams and Fainaru-Wada uncovered led to a series of investigative reports detailing what came to be known nationally as the BALCO (the Bay Area Laboratory Cooperative) scandal.

The Yes Men are Andy Bichlbaum and Mike Bonanno, two impersonators who use satire to bring media attention to issues that otherwise might be overlooked. "We actually see this as a form of journalism. Or perhaps more precisely, the form of collaboration of journalists," explains Bichlbaum in his interview with Bill Moyers. "A lot of the issues that we address journalists want to cover. But...in many situations, editorial control won't let them unless there's a good little hook behind it. And so, we've found a way to create funny spectacles that give journalists the excuse to cover issues." The Yes Men have impersonated representatives from Halliburton, Dow Chemical, Exxon, and others, giving public presentations aimed at exposing what they believe to be discrepancies between how these groups want to be seen and how they really act. They call this process, "identity correction." While some criticize them for deception and call their hijinx unethical, they argue "these kinds of [corporate and political] wrongdoings are at such a scale - they're so vast compared to our white lies that we think it's ethical."

Clive James was born in Sydney, Australia in 1939, where he was raised by his mother after his father was killed in a plane crash returning from a Japanese POW camp during World War II. He sailed to Britain in 1961 where he attended Cambridge University, excelling in numerous extracurricular activities, including ascending to the Presidency of Footlights, a popular comedy troupe. In Britain, he soon gained esteem as a television critic for THE OBSERVER, for which he wrote for 10 years, until venturing into the television world himself. In 1993, he released FAME IN THE TWENTIETH CENTURY, a PBS series examining film and television stars in the last 100 years, and in 1995, he brought us his innovative travel series, POSTCARDS. Despite television notoriety in Britain, James maintained his work in the literary medium, writing more than 20 books, essays and portraits in the coming years. His most recent collection of biographical essays, CULTURAL AMNESIA, which took him 40 years to accumulate, covers 106 cultural figures stretching from Duke Ellington to Adolph Hitler, all of whom James believes are most worthy of being remembered by generations to come.

Latinos, this nation's largest and fastest-growing minority group, are big business. This program examines how efforts to profit from this group are shaping the contemporary Latino identity. The documentary, whose focal point is George Lopez, an icon and advocate for Latinos' move into the mainstream, offers rare behind-the-scenes access to Lopez' life and world as he shares his struggles to represent Latinos in a manner true to their realities and aspirations. As Cosby did for African Americans decades earlier, Lopez, through his comedy, aspires to normalize the image of Latinos in a way that delights and entertains. This program contrasts Lopez' endeavors with the efforts of marketers intent on spinning Latinos as a wholly distinct subculture. The show also features conversations with members of the much-coveted Latino youth market, whose tastes and interests are far more eclectic than one would think.

When the Chicago Tribune's Cam Simpson heard a report on the evening news about 12 Nepalese men who were kidnapped and brutally executed by an extremist Islamic group in Iraq, he was disturbed and intrigued. The men were on their way to jobs in support of American troops, and, according to the group's website, they were killed for cooperating with America's "crusader forces" in Iraq. Simpson, familiar with the military's increasing privatization of support operations, smelled a big story. In a classic case of dogged investigative reporting, he traced each step of the Nepalese men's journey from the foothills of the Himalayas to their brutal murder in Iraq, and in the process illustrated a vast international human trafficking network with ties to American corporations.

Whispers in the courthouse about "missing cases" and a clandestine meeting at midnight started rookie reporter Peter Zuckerman of the Idaho Falls Post Register on an investigation that would lead to the exposure of a pedophile working within the local Boy Scouts. What was hidden from the public concealed within those court records - was the story of a Boy Scout leader named Brad Stowell, who had admitted under oath to molesting about two dozen children. Zuckerman, along with Executive Editor Dean Miller, fought successfully to unseal court records and then tracked down victims of abuse to reveal that Boy Scout leadership and at least one official in the Mormon Church - which sponsors most of the Boy Scout Troops in Eastern Idaho - knew of Stowell's history, yet allowed him to work in close proximity to children. The Post Register published the "Scouts' Honor" series in 2005 and the paper immediately came under fire from some in the community. And the fallout of the stories ended up being far more dramatic than anyone had anticipated when one of the reporters came under attack.

What does a family have to endure to create a future for itself? In April 2000, Alex White Plume and his Lakota family planted industrial hemp on the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota after other crops had failed. They put their hopes for a sustainable economy in hemp's hardiness and a booming worldwide demand for its many products, from clothing to food. Although growing hemp, a relative of marijuana, was banned in the U.S., Alex believed that tribal sovereignty, along with hemp's non-psychoactive properties, would protect him. But when federal agents raided the White Plumes' fields, the Lakota Nation was swept into a Byzantine struggle over tribal sovereignty, economic rights and common sense. Amid the stacks at the Wesleyan University Library, a student has found a book emblazoned with the name and address of the legendary anarchist Lucy Parsons. The biracial black and Native American activist fought in the late 1800s for the rights of the poor and disenfranchised in the face of an increasingly oppressive industrial economic system. Did this once-feared radical own the manifesto? If so, it would pose a mystery: after Parsons died, police supposedly raided her house and confiscated all of her subversive literature. So how did this book elude them? History Detectives explores a major labor movement uprising and Parsons' abiding acts of defiance.

Teacher Rafe Esquith has a point of view - a very strong one - about educating children of immigrants. Teaching in Los Angeles at one of the nation's largest inner-city grade schools, Hobart Elementary, Esquith leads his class of fifth graders through an uncompromising curriculum of English, mathematics, geography and literature. He inspires them with cross-country trips to learn history firsthand. And at the end of the semester, every student performs in a full-length Shakespeare play: in this case Hamlet, with advice from actors Ian McKellen and Michael York. Despite language barriers and poverty, these "Hobart Shakespeareans" move on to attend outstanding colleges, motivated by a teacher honored with a National Medal of Arts.

A Nebraska man obtained a curious letter from his grandfather, who spent time on South Dakota's Pine Ridge Reservation during the early part of the 20th Century. The letter is from the sculptor of Mount Rushmore, Gutzon Borglum, to a Lakota leader named James Red Cloud. It makes several ambiguous references to treaties between the U.S. government and the Lakota, and, moreover, to Borglum's desire to help the tribe. How was a leader of the Lakota people connected with creator of a monument that was regarded by many as a desecration of sacred land?

Los Angeles is now the country's center for apparel manufacturing, but many of its factories bear an eerie resemblance to New York's early 20th-century sweatshops. "Made in L.A." follows the remarkable journey of three Latina immigrants working in L.A.'s garment factories and their struggle for self-empowerment as they wage a three-year battle to bring a major clothing retailer to the negotiating table. This intimate film offers a rare and poignant glimpse into the "other" California, where immigrants in many industries toil long hours for sub-minimum wages, fighting for an opportunity in a new country. A co-production with the Independent Television Service (ITVS). A Diverse Voices Project co-production. A co-presentation with Latino Public Broadcasting. By Almudena Carracedo and Robert Bahar.

Latinos, this nation's largest and fastest-growing minority group, are big business. This program examines how efforts to profit from this group are shaping the contemporary Latino identity. The documentary, whose focal point is George Lopez, an icon and advocate for Latinos' move into the mainstream, offers rare behind-the-scenes access to Lopez' life and world as he shares his struggles to represent Latinos in a manner true to their realities and aspirations. As Cosby did for African Americans decades earlier, Lopez, through his comedy, aspires to normalize the image of Latinos in a way that delights and entertains. This program contrasts Lopez' endeavors with the efforts of marketers intent on spinning Latinos as a wholly distinct subculture. The show also features conversations with members of the much-coveted Latino youth market, whose tastes and interests are far more eclectic than one would think.

Often thought of as the other Mexican muralist, beside his more flamboyant compatriot Diego Rivera, Orozco was a leader of the Mexican Renaissance. His bold, dynamic frescoes had a profound impact on American painters and inspired Franklin D. Roosevelt to put artists to work during the Great Depression. His most famous U.S. murals -- The Table of Universal Brotherhood, The Epic of American Civilization and Prometheus -- still convey their power in New York, New Hampshire and California. An iconoclastic personality, Orozco survived the loss of his left hand and destruction of more than half his early work by border agents. His travels back and forth across the U.S.-Mexico border evoke the larger Mexican migrant-immigrant experience and have provocative parallels to present times.

After an overview of the Second World War, which engulfed the world from 1939 to 1945 and cost at least 50 million lives, inhabitants of four towns - Mobile, Alabama; Sacramento, California; Waterbury, Connecticut; and Luverne, Minnesota - recall their communities on the eve of the conflict. For them, the events overseas seem far away. Their tranquil lives are shattered by the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, and America is thrust into the great cataclysm. Along with millions of other young men, Sid Phillips and Willie Rushton of Mobile, Ray Leopold of Waterbury and Walter Thompson and Burnett Miller of Sacramento enter the armed forces. In the Philippines, two Americans, Corporal Glenn Frazier and Sascha Weinzheimer (who was eight years old in 1941), are caught up in the Japanese onslaught there, as American and Filipino forces retreat onto Bataan while thousands of civilians are rounded up and imprisoned in Manila. Back home, 110,000 Japanese Americans along the West Coast are forcibly relocated by the government to internment camps. On the East Coast, German U-boats menace Allied shipping offshore. The United States seems unprepared for this kind of total war. Witnessing all of this is Katharine Phillips of Mobile and Al McIntosh, editor of the Rock County Star Herald in Luverne, who chronicles the travails of every family in town. In June 1942, the Navy manages a victory over the Japanese at the Battle of Midway. In August, American land forces, including Sid Phillips of Mobile, face the Japanese army for the first time at Guadalcanal. Abandoned by their fleet with no sea or air support, the men are under constant attack. After six months, the Americans finally prevail and, in the process, stop Japan's expansion in the Pacific.

"Roosevelt's America" is a cinema verite profile of the struggles of a Lieberman refugee to build a new life in America. After being tortured and narrowly escaping execution during Liberia's civil war, Roosevelt Henderson makes his way to America with three of his children, but is forced to leave his pregnant wife behind. He works as a janitor, airport van driver and assembly line worker in order to support his family and help his wife flee their war-torn country. After two year of juggling low wage jobs, Roosevelt's perseverance pays off and he is reunited with his wife, Frances, and his baby daughter. By witnessing Roosevelt's day-to-day struggles, frustrations and achievements, viewers come to appreciate the distance he has traveled during his harrowing journey from torture and desperation in his native Liberia to security and stability in his newly adopted Hamlin. Ultimately "Rosevelt's America" becomes an inspiring story of quiet determination and dignity under duress.

With the Federal government's increasing reliance on private corporations for military and intelligence projects, many government contractors have already become household names -- but there is a multi-billion dollar company, one that has received more private government contracts than any other, that you've probably never heard of: Science Applications International Corporation. SAIC, as it is known, has a workforce of 44,000, annual revenues that reached $8 billion in 2006, and a list of current and former board members that reads like a who's who of political and military heavyweights. In a story for VANITY FAIR, the venerable investigative team of Donald L. Barlett and James B. Steele pull back the curtain of government contracting to reveal that even though "several of SAIC's biggest projects have turned out to be colossal failures," in the end, the company always manages to get paid.

A public opinion poll from the American Research Group recently reported that more than four in ten Americans -- 45% -- favor impeachment hearings for President Bush and more than half -- 54% -- favored impeachment for Vice President Cheney. Unhappiness about the war in Iraq isn't the only cause of the unsettled feelings of the electorate. Recent events like President Bush's pardoning of Scooter Libby, the refusal of Vice President Cheney's office to surrender emails under subpoena to Congress and the President's prohibition of testimony of former White House counsel Harriet E. Miers in front of the House Judiciary Committee have caused unease over claims of "executive privilege." In addition, many of the White House anti-terror initiatives and procedures -- from the status of "enemy combatants" in Guantanamo to warrantless wiretapping -- have come under legal scrutiny in Congress and the courts. Bill Moyers gets perspective on the role of impeachment in American political life from Constitutional scholar Bruce Fein, who wrote the first article of impeachment against President Bill Clinton, and THE NATION's John Nichols, author of THE GENIUS OF IMPEACHMENT.

Welcome to Colorado and the Annual Aspen Ideas Festival. The 2008 elections are off to a roaring start. Our political roundtable looks at the state of the campaign tonight on "Washington Week." Eighteen candidates running for president, all fighting to get to this. But first they have to raise the millions. Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA): (From tape.) "You're going to have to do what's necessary." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL): (From tape.) "We've got 250,000 people who have donated to our campaign." And they have to survive the debates. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ): (From tape.) "I don't want to be president of a failed nation." And the campaign trail. Sen. John Edwards (D-NC): (From tape.) "It's time for a different kind of leadership in this country." And YouTube. Is this any way to elect a president? President Bill Clinton: (From tape.) "No onion rings?" Sen. Hillary Clinton: (From tape.) "I'm looking out for you." We ask that question tonight to four of the nation's top reporters: Dan Balz of the "Washington Post," John Dickerson of "Slate" magazine, Martha Raddatz of "ABC News," and Alexis Simendinger of "National Journal."

Talk about Murphy's Law, on Iraq policy and for John McCain almost nothing went right this week. We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush: Well, I can fully understand why people are tired of the war. The question they have is, can we win it? But the president is resolute, Congress is fractious, and a new report on report on progress in Iraq falls short. Sen. Joseph Biden (D-DE): We continue to send out kids in the middle of a meat-grinder based on a policy that is fundamentally flawed. Sen. Lindsay Graham (R-SC): If you think this war is lost, stop the funding. Bring the troops home with honor. Stop this game of trying to play politics to put Republicans in boxes which will result in people coming back in boxes. The very recipe for political and policy gridlock. What happens next in Iraq? What can happen next? We assess the situation in Washington and on the ground. Plus, the political collapse of Republican senator John McCain: out of money and out of staff. Is he also out of time? Covering these stories this week: Peter Baker of the "Washington Post," Michael Viqueira of NBC News, James Kitfield of "National Journal," and Gloria Borger of "U.S. News and World Report."

According to the recent National Intelligence Estimate, a collaborative document reflecting the knowledge-base of the U.S. Intelligence community: "Al Qaeda is and will remain the most serious threat to the Homeland, as it's central leadership continues to plan high-impact plots, while pushing others in extreme Sunni communities to mimic its efforts and to supplement its capabilities." And President Bush seemed to echo this sentiment when, at a recent speech in West Virginia about our mission in Iraq, he evoked the name "al Qaeda" 27 times. "Many of the spectacular car bombings and killings you see are as a result of al Qaeda - the very same folks that attacked us on September 11th." But how strong truly is the connection between the central al Qaeda network of Osama bin Laden and al Qaeda in Iraq? Some experts argue that the war on terror, with global al Qaeda at its center as the recent NIE tells us, has little to do with the sectarian war in Iraq, and that our presence there and current tactics have actually worked to bolster al Qaeda's position in the world.

Amid the stacks at the Wesleyan University Library, a student has found a book emblazoned with the name and address of the legendary anarchist Lucy Parsons. The biracial black and Native American activist fought in the late 1800s for the rights of the poor and disenfranchised in the face of an increasingly oppressive industrial economic system. Did this once-feared radical own the manifesto? If so, it would pose a mystery: after Parsons died, police supposedly raided her house and confiscated all of her subversive literature. So how did this book elude them? History Detectives explores a major labor movement uprising and Parsons' abiding acts of defiance.

How do we get out of Iraq and if we do, does the terror threat grow or diminish? That plus why money matters on the campaign trail and on Wall Street tonight on "Washington Week." In Washington and Baghdad it's all about the clock. Senator George Voinovich (R-OH) said, "What are you doing to let them know that this time is running out? The time is running out." Republicans want to get out of Iraq. Democrats want to get out of Iraq, but the president and the generals say "give us just a little more time." LIEUTENANT GENERAL ODIERNO said, "I'm hoping that this will continue over the next two to three months, another reason why as we give our assessment in September it's important that we have a bit more time so we can do evaluation of this progress." But is when the right question? What about how and who? Is al Qaeda the threat it's cracked up to be? A new intelligence report says yes, but Iraq may not be the biggest problem. On the campaign trail, we follow the money and the candidates raising it. What do the dollars tell us about what kind of president they would be? Governor Bill Richardson said, "This election should not be on who the biggest celebrity is or who has the most money or who's the biggest rock star, although I'm working on that." And on Wall Street only good news, so why is this guy so down beat? Covering the week, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of The Politico, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

A year and a half before the Federal Emergency Management Agency made national news with its botched response to Hurricane Katrina, the South Florida Sun-Sentinel was already on top of the story of waste and fraud at the troubled agency. The head of FEMA, Michael Brown, dismissed the paper's reporting. But the story wouldn't blow over, and as Hurricane Katrina approached Louisiana the whole country would become painfully aware of what the South Florida Sun-Sentinel already knew: FEMA was a national disaster in itself.

Washington's responsibilities, infrastructure at home, ethics at the Capitol, peace in the Middle East, and what the next president would do about it all, tonight on "Washington Week." Senator Obama's mixed signals. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) Said, "If we have actionable intelligence about high-value terrorist targets and President Musharraf will not act, we will." He suggests he would attack a U.S. ally, but declares the use of nuclear weapons off the table. The second place Democrat makes waves. We look at why. And as the secretaries of state and defense make yet another trip to the Middle East - Secretary Of State Condoleezza Rice said, "There needs to be a renunciation of violence because you can't have one foot in the camp of terror and one foot in the camp of politics." - we are reminded why talking about foreign policy can be so much simpler than acting on it. While on Capitol Hill lawmakers take a big step toward fixing their own glass house with sweeping ethics reform. And a tragedy renews debate about what it will take to fix the nation's crumbling bridges. Sen. Amy Klobuchar (D-MN) said, "A bridge in America just shouldn't fall down." Covering the stories this week, Dan Balz of The Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The economy is on the mind of the president, and so is the precarious position of Pakistan's leader. Plus, GOP politics in middle America. I'm Alexis Simendinger sitting in for Gwen Ifill. All this, tonight on Washington Week. The president heads for his summer vacation by drawing a few lines in the sand, about the economy - President George W. Bush said, "The American economy is the envy of the world and we need to keep it that way." - about Iraq - Pres. Bush said, "The fundamental question facing America is, is it worth it? Does it matter whether or not we stay? My answer is it does matter." and about a looming battle with Congress in the fall. Pres. Bush said "The bill Congress sent to my desk leaves some of the key priorities unfulfilled." Is it the calm before the autumn storm for the commander-in-chief? Pres. Bush said, "Put up your dukes." He's a key ally in the fight against terrorism and a nuclear player too, but could Pervez Musharraf's days be numbered? And if so, what could that mean for the United States? And all eyes are on Iowa this week for an early GOP test of organization and support. A look at the national frontrunner - Mayor Rudolph Giuliani (R-NY) said, "A description of my mistakes in 30 seconds?" - and how his northeast urban sensibilities are playing in the heartland. Plus, the topsy-turvy primary calendar takes another twist. Could voting for campaign '08 actually start in 2007? Covering these stories this week: Peter Baker of the "Washington Post," Janine Zacharia of Bloomberg News, and Karen Tumulty of "TIME" magazine.

War, terror, and politics: the stuff that keeps Washington humming even in August, tonight on "Washington Week." Terror suspect Jose Padilla guilty on all counts. Craig Morford [Acting U.S. Attorney General] said, "Cases like this one are central to the United States government's efforts to neutralize the threat posed by terrorists and those who support them." But what was Padilla, a U.S. citizen, found guilty of? A hint: it was not for plotting to set off dirty bombs. In Iraq at least 400 are killed in coordinated attacks far from Baghdad. Major General Benjamin Mixon said, "This is an act of ethnic cleansing, if you will, almost genocide." Civil war or something completely different? And is there a political solution in sight? At home, the nation's most famous political consultant steps aside. President George W. Bush said "Karl Rove is moving on down the road." And the gloves come off in the presidential campaign. Senator Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Apparently I must have struck a nerve." As Democrats and Republicans taken aim at the White House and at each other? Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, James Kitfield of National Journal, Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

Reality check at home, presidential candidates weigh in on the growing credit crisis. What would they do to solve it? The rise of the presidential spouse. Outspoken and invaluable: the women, and the man, who are saying the things the candidates won't. And the role of faith in presidential politics: a new book about the charismatic preacher who started it all. Covering the week: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Jeffrey Birnbaum of the "Washington Post," Gloria Borger of "U.S. News and World Report," and Michael Duffy of "Time" magazine.

A senator disgraced, an attorney general quits, the primary crunch, and conflicting reports on Iraq, tonight on "Washington Week." A United States senator spiraling toward resignation. Sen. Larry Craig (R-ID), said "I did nothing wrong at the Minneapolis Airport." The five-day scandal about homosexuality, hypocrisy and guilt, and why Republicans are moving so fast to get past the embarrassment. An attorney general prepared to leave town as well. Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said, "I have lived the American dream. Even my worst days as attorney general have been better than my father's best days." But his legacy and his actions remain under scrutiny. The primary clash: as state parties squeeze the voting calendar even more, will Iowa and New Hampshire still be first or will states like Florida and Michigan beat them to the punch? And a series of new reports and a new $50 billion price tag set the stage for yet another showdown over the war in Iraq. Covering the week, John Dickerson of Slate magazine, Pete Williams of NBC News, Karen Tumulty of TIME magazine, and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

Six years later, a critical question continues to haunt America's national psyche: how could the most powerful nation on earth have been so utterly unprepared to protect its homeland? In "9/11: For the Record," a special one-hour analysis of the 9/11 Commission Report first broadcast in 2004, BILL MOYERS JOURNAL connects the dots of what happened that day and the warning signs leading up to it. The program highlights the agonizing close calls, missteps, and outright failures of two successive administrations and America's intelligence and security agencies in the months and years leading up to 9/11.

On the heels of a much-anticipated progress report in Washington, NOW travels to Iraq for an exclusive, hard look at the war through the telling eyes of U.S. soldiers on the ground, and of the families they left behind. We also examine first-hand the so-called "Anbar Awakening," a controversial partnership between U.S. soldiers and Sunni tribal leaders, many of whom who had previously been fighting the Americans. Some-including President Bush-are calling this a significant step forward in reestablishing peace and order in Iraq. Hear what soldiers on the ground have to say. We first met the Third Infantry's First Brigade from Georgia's Fort Stewart in a NOW show broadcast last January, only weeks before they headed back to Iraq for the third deployment in four years. As the long months of the "surge" unfold, we see them fighting an elusive enemy that prefers roadside bombs to pitched battles, while back at home their newborns become toddlers, and birthdays and anniversaries come and go. With the personal and political effects of constant redeployment and re-strategizing apparent everywhere, are we at a turning point or a breaking point?

The war in Iraq assessed by the president, the generals, the diplomats, and the lawmakers, a turning point week tonight on "Washington Week." PRESIDENT GEORGE W. BUSH: The principle guiding my decisions on troop levels in Iraq is return on success. MS. IFILL: The president stakes his legacy on that one word: "success." PRES. BUSH: Strength and success. . . because of the success. . . military successes are paving the way. . . if the kind of success we're now seeing continues. MS. IFILL: And on the determination of his top general on the ground. GENERAL DAVID PETRAEUS: I'm not a pessimist or optimist at this point. I'm a realist about Iraq and Iraq is hard. MS. IFILL: But Democrats and Republicans alike are asking, how hard? SENATOR CHUCK HAGEL (R-NE): Are we going to continue to invest American blood and treasure at the same rate we're doing now? For what? The president said let's buy time. Buy time? For what? MS. IFILL: The presidential candidates are asking that, too. SENATOR BARACK OBAMA (D-IL): So let me be clear, there is no military solution in Iraq. There never was. SENATOR JOHN MCCAIN (R-AZ): Congress must not choose to lose in Iraq. I will do everything in my power to ensure that we do not. MS. IFILL: On the political front, Republicans may be losing ground in the Senate, while Democrats take a hit in a big money mystery that involves an arrest, tainted contributions, and a suicide note. Have the Democrats already settled on a nominee? Maybe yes, maybe no. We'll sort it all out tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "When I'm president." Hillary Clinton's big week forces other candidates to redefine conventional wisdom. John Edwards said, "I've raised more money in this campaign than any candidate in 2003-2004 raised at this stage of the campaign." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "It's the candidate who raises the most money, but a lot of times it's the candidate who has the best message and then the money follows." Is it the money or the momentum? The Democratic race heats up. The Supreme Court steps back into two touchy issues: agreeing to decide who gets to vote and how felons get to die. And at the United Nations, Iranian leader Mahmoud Ahmadinejad enrages some and confounds others. How far would you go to stop a war? "The Camden 28" recalls a 1971 raid on a Camden, New Jersey, draft board office by "Catholic left" activists protesting the Vietnam War and its effects on urban America. Arrested on site in a clearly planned sting, the protesters included four Catholic priests, a Lutheran minister and 23 others. The film reveals the story behind the arrests - a provocative tale of government intrigue and personal betrayal - and the ensuing legal battle, which Supreme Court Justice William Brennan called "one of the great trials of the 20th century." Thirty-five years later, the participants take stock of their motives, fears and the costs of their activism - and its relevance to America today. By Anthony Giacchino.

Edward Osborne Wilson grew up off the gulf coast of Alabama and Florida, becoming fascinated at a very early age by the diversity of the natural world surrounding him. After blinding himself in one eye while fishing at the age of 7, Wilson explains that he no longer was very good at bird-watching, so decided to "turn towards the little things in life," namely ants. At 13, he discovered the first U.S. colony of fire ants near the docks of Mobile, Alabama, well on his way to becoming one of the country's foremost myrmecologists (ant biologists), discovering the ways intricate chemical signals affect colony behavior. While a professor at Harvard, Wilson used his insect expertise as the basis for larger study into animal and human behavior, releasing in 1975, SOCIOBIOLOGY: THE NEW SYNTHESIS, advancing Darwin's study of evolution into the realm of behavior.

Our home galaxy, the Milky Way, is a pretty big place. It harbors 200 to 400 billion stars and spans roughly 100,000 light-years from one edge to the other. (To put it in perspective, Earth is only about 8.3 light-minutes from our own star, the sun.) This is one reason why some scientists feel that alien civilizations are common in the galaxy, possibly numbering in the tens of thousands, and why a small band of astronomers have devoted themselves to the Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence (SETI). Yet other scientists think we humans are the only creatures in this vast neighborhood with the smarts and technology to communicate across space.

The hurricane season of 2004 is categorized as one of the most active on record. It begins with an uneventful June and July then suddenly turns violent in August. Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami are confronted with satellite images showing a steady stream of tropical storms spinning across the Atlantic from Africa. Combining their experience with the latest technology they focus on making the most accurate predictions. As Hurricane Specialist Jack Bevens says, "If you get it wrong you can get a lot of people killed." No one wants to risk a wrong forecast. Anatomy of a Hurricane goes behind the scenes at the National Hurricane Center to see forecasters on a mission to save lives and property. It is a look at the stressful work of a dedicated staff as they track Charley, Frances, Ivan and Jeanne - all major hurricanes with unexpected challenges. It is also a look at the complicated dynamics of the atmosphere - why these hurricanes form and where they go.

As global warming turns up the heat, researchers are stunned to discover that our sun is actually growing dimmer. Increasing air pollution allows less and less sunlight to reach earth's surface, a 'global dimming' that disturbs rainfall patterns and is creates severe droughts. In an even more alarming twist, there is concern that recent success in solving the dimming problem is greatly accelerating global warming, melting ice caps and flooding coastal cities. Length: 60 Airdate: 9/5/2007 8:00 PM/502 Service: PBS Format: Documentary

This program tells the story behind the construction and destruction of one of the most heralded World War II engineering feats: the 250-mile River Kwai railway in Thailand. Forced to work under savage conditions by the Japanese army, more than 100,000 Allied POWs and Asian laborers lost their lives in the building of the railway, which immediately became a top target of the Allied forces. To destroy it, they had to rely on new and relatively untested technological weapons -- AZON bombs, the guided, radio-controlled precursors to the modern military's smart bombs. Using first-hand survivor testimony, modern science, a blend of reconstructions and archival footage, and never-before-seen photographs of the railway as it was being constructed, "Bridge on the River Kwai" will piece together the real story behind the birth and death of this lost railway. Among those featured in the program is Frank Nelson, one of many specially trained American cadets responsible for destroying the railway, who will speak publicly for the first time about his experience at the head of the AZON squadron.

In a gloomy cave perched high in a canyon near the Dead Sea, archaeologists made a startling discovery in 1960: a bag containing letters written on papyrus nearly two thousand years ago. The letters were written by one of the great figures of Jewish history, the rebel Bar-Kokhba, who led a heroic guerilla uprising against the Romans. Now Biblical scholar Richard Freund returns to the cave with the latest archaeological techniques, hoping to find more traces of Bar-Kokhba's epic struggle. Instead, Freund comes up with tantalizing new finds that lead him to a radical and controversial theory. Could the treasure concealed in the cave be a long-lost relic of the great temple in Jerusalem destroyed by the Romans? Every year, more than a million people visit the Rotunda at the National Archives in Washington to gaze at three documents that define our nation's heritage: the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. But these touchstones of democracy are in serious trouble. The ink is flaking from parchments that are already badly faded, while the glass casements built to exhibit them are disintegrating. To head off the danger, the Archives embarked on a five-year project to design state-of-the-art encasements and a new rotunda. NOVA was given exclusive behind-the-scenes access to this unique project from start to finish. The result is a brilliant evocation of the colorful history of these documents and an insider's look at the extraordinary engineering efforts that are safeguarding America's equivalent of the Crown Jewels.

Roughly one in seven of America's active duty military soldiers is a woman, but a NOW investigation found that sexual assault and rape is widespread. One study of National Guard and Reserve forces found that almost one in four women had been assaulted or raped. Last year alone, almost 3,000 soldiers reported sexual assault and rape by other soldiers. NOW features women who speak out for the first time about what happened. One woman recounts her ordeal of rape by her superior officer. Many more don't report the incidents for fear of how it will affect their careers. The shocking phenomenon has a label: military sexual trauma, or MST. NOW meets women courageously battling to overcome their MST, bringing light to an issue that's putting the army in shame. A NOW exclusive investigation.

This program tells the story behind the construction and destruction of one of the most heralded World War II engineering feats: the 250-mile River Kwai railway in Thailand. Forced to work under savage conditions by the Japanese army, more than 100,000 Allied POWs and Asian laborers lost their lives in the building of the railway, which immediately became a top target of the Allied forces. To destroy it, they had to rely on new and relatively untested technological weapons -- AZON bombs, the guided, radio-controlled precursors to the modern military's smart bombs. Using first-hand survivor testimony, modern science, a blend of reconstructions and archival footage, and never-before-seen photographs of the railway as it was being constructed, "Bridge on the River Kwai" will piece together the real story behind the birth and death of this lost railway. Among those featured in the program is Frank Nelson, one of many specially trained American cadets responsible for destroying the railway, who will speak publicly for the first time about his experience at the head of the AZON squadron.

A public opinion poll from the American Research Group recently reported that more than four in ten Americans -- 45% -- favor impeachment hearings for President Bush and more than half -- 54% -- favored impeachment for Vice President Cheney. Unhappiness about the war in Iraq isn't the only cause of the unsettled feelings of the electorate. Recent events like President Bush's pardoning of Scooter Libby, the refusal of Vice President Cheney's office to surrender emails under subpoena to Congress and the President's prohibition of testimony of former White House counsel Harriet E. Miers in front of the House Judiciary Committee have caused unease over claims of "executive privilege." In addition, many of the White House anti-terror initiatives and procedures -- from the status of "enemy combatants" in Guantanamo to warrantless wiretapping -- have come under legal scrutiny in Congress and the courts. Bill Moyers gets perspective on the role of impeachment in American political life from Constitutional scholar Bruce Fein, who wrote the first article of impeachment against President Bill Clinton, and THE NATION's John Nichols, author of THE GENIUS OF IMPEACHMENT.

A Civil War enthusiast owns a striking vintage photograph that depicts about 20 older white men in full dress uniform, standing shoulder-to-shoulder with two black men. In Reconstructionist-era America, association between blacks and whites was frequently taboo. So what brought them together for this portrait? Their bond, it turns out, was the Grand Army of the Republic, a remarkable fraternal order organized for war veterans. In fact, integration was actually a GAR standard. The reason? The men had in common an affliction that transcended race -- a struggle with post traumatic stress. History Detectives investigates the first national social group to challenge the color barrier.

Talk about Murphy's Law, on Iraq policy and for John McCain almost nothing went right this week. We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush: Well, I can fully understand why people are tired of the war. The question they have is, can we win it? But the president is resolute, Congress is fractious, and a new report on report on progress in Iraq falls short. Sen. Joseph Biden (D-DE): We continue to send out kids in the middle of a meat-grinder based on a policy that is fundamentally flawed. Sen. Lindsay Graham (R-SC): If you think this war is lost, stop the funding. Bring the troops home with honor. Stop this game of trying to play politics to put Republicans in boxes which will result in people coming back in boxes. The very recipe for political and policy gridlock. What happens next in Iraq? What can happen next? We assess the situation in Washington and on the ground. Plus, the political collapse of Republican senator John McCain: out of money and out of staff. Is he also out of time? According to the recent National Intelligence Estimate, a collaborative document reflecting the knowledge-base of the U.S. Intelligence community: "Al Qaeda is and will remain the most serious threat to the Homeland, as it's central leadership continues to plan high-impact plots, while pushing others in extreme Sunni communities to mimic its efforts and to supplement its capabilities." And President Bush seemed to echo this sentiment when, at a recent speech in West Virginia about our mission in Iraq, he evoked the name "al Qaeda" 27 times. "Many of the spectacular car bombings and killings you see are as a result of al Qaeda - the very same folks that attacked us on September 11th." But how strong truly is the connection between the central al Qaeda network of Osama bin Laden and al Qaeda in Iraq? Some experts argue that the war on terror, with global al Qaeda at its center as the recent NIE tells us, has little to do with the sectarian war in Iraq, and that our presence there and current tactics have actually worked to bolster al Qaeda's position in the world.

A Civil War enthusiast owns a striking vintage photograph that depicts about 20 older white men in full dress uniform, standing shoulder-to-shoulder with two black men. In Reconstructionist-era America, association between blacks and whites was frequently taboo. So what brought them together for this portrait? Their bond, it turns out, was the Grand Army of the Republic, a remarkable fraternal order organized for war veterans. In fact, integration was actually a GAR standard. The reason? The men had in common an affliction that transcended race -- a struggle with post traumatic stress. History Detectives investigates the first national social group to challenge the color barrier.

How do we get out of Iraq and if we do, does the terror threat grow or diminish? That plus why money matters on the campaign trail and on Wall Street tonight on "Washington Week." In Washington and Baghdad it's all about the clock. Senator George Voinovich (R-OH) said, "What are you doing to let them know that this time is running out? The time is running out." Republicans want to get out of Iraq. Democrats want to get out of Iraq, but the president and the generals say "give us just a little more time." LIEUTENANT GENERAL ODIERNO said, "I'm hoping that this will continue over the next two to three months, another reason why as we give our assessment in September it's important that we have a bit more time so we can do evaluation of this progress." But is when the right question? What about how and who? Is al Qaeda the threat it's cracked up to be? A new intelligence report says yes, but Iraq may not be the biggest problem. On the campaign trail, we follow the money and the candidates raising it. What do the dollars tell us about what kind of president they would be? Governor Bill Richardson said, "This election should not be on who the biggest celebrity is or who has the most money or who's the biggest rock star, although I'm working on that." And on Wall Street only good news, so why is this guy so down beat? Covering the week, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of The Politico, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

Washington's responsibilities, infrastructure at home, ethics at the Capitol, peace in the Middle East, and what the next president would do about it all, tonight on "Washington Week." Senator Obama's mixed signals. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) Said, "If we have actionable intelligence about high-value terrorist targets and President Musharraf will not act, we will." He suggests he would attack a U.S. ally, but declares the use of nuclear weapons off the table. The second place Democrat makes waves. We look at why. And as the secretaries of state and defense make yet another trip to the Middle East - Secretary Of State Condoleezza Rice said, "There needs to be a renunciation of violence because you can't have one foot in the camp of terror and one foot in the camp of politics." - we are reminded why talking about foreign policy can be so much simpler than acting on it. While on Capitol Hill lawmakers take a big step toward fixing their own glass house with sweeping ethics reform. And a tragedy renews debate about what it will take to fix the nation's crumbling bridges. Sen. Amy Klobuchar (D-MN) said, "A bridge in America just shouldn't fall down." All this, tonight on Washington Week. The president heads for his summer vacation by drawing a few lines in the sand, about the economy - President George W. Bush said, "The American economy is the envy of the world and we need to keep it that way." - about Iraq - Pres. Bush said, "The fundamental question facing America is, is it worth it? Does it matter whether or not we stay? My answer is it does matter." and about a looming battle with Congress in the fall. Pres. Bush said "The bill Congress sent to my desk leaves some of the key priorities unfulfilled." Is it the calm before the autumn storm for the commander-in-chief? Pres. Bush said, "Put up your dukes." He's a key ally in the fight against terrorism and a nuclear player too, but could Pervez Musharraf's days be numbered? And if so, what could that mean for the United States? And all eyes are on Iowa this week for an early GOP test of organization and support. A look at the national frontrunner - Mayor Rudolph Giuliani (R-NY) said, "A description of my mistakes in 30 seconds?" - and how his northeast urban sensibilities are playing in the heartland. Plus, the topsy-turvy primary calendar takes another twist. Could voting for campaign '08 actually start in 2007? Covering these stories this week: Peter Baker of the "Washington Post," Janine Zacharia of Bloomberg News, and Karen Tumulty of "TIME" magazine.

We talk to two soldiers who went AWOL and eventually left the Army, but who took very different paths. NOW captures the moment when one man turns himself in, and when another applies for refugee status in Canada, becoming one of the 20,000 soldiers who have deserted the army since the War in Iraq began. Each describes what drove him to follow his conscience over his call to duty, and what penalties and criticism were endured as a result.

War, terror, and politics: the stuff that keeps Washington humming even in August, tonight on "Washington Week." Terror suspect Jose Padilla guilty on all counts. Craig Morford [Acting U.S. Attorney General] said, "Cases like this one are central to the United States government's efforts to neutralize the threat posed by terrorists and those who support them." But what was Padilla, a U.S. citizen, found guilty of? A hint: it was not for plotting to set off dirty bombs. In Iraq at least 400 are killed in coordinated attacks far from Baghdad. Major General Benjamin Mixon said, "This is an act of ethnic cleansing, if you will, almost genocide." Civil war or something completely different? And is there a political solution in sight? At home, the nation's most famous political consultant steps aside. President George W. Bush said "Karl Rove is moving on down the road." And the gloves come off in the presidential campaign. Senator Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Apparently I must have struck a nerve." As Democrats and Republicans taken aim at the White House and at each other? A senator disgraced, an attorney general quits, the primary crunch, and conflicting reports on Iraq, tonight on "Washington Week." A United States senator spiraling toward resignation. Sen. Larry Craig (R-ID), said "I did nothing wrong at the Minneapolis Airport." The five-day scandal about homosexuality, hypocrisy and guilt, and why Republicans are moving so fast to get past the embarrassment. An attorney general prepared to leave town as well. Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said, "I have lived the American dream. Even my worst days as attorney general have been better than my father's best days." But his legacy and his actions remain under scrutiny. The primary clash: as state parties squeeze the voting calendar even more, will Iowa and New Hampshire still be first or will states like Florida and Michigan beat them to the punch? And a series of new reports and a new $50 billion price tag set the stage for yet another showdown over the war in Iraq. How far would you go to stop a war? "The Camden 28" recalls a 1971 raid on a Camden, New Jersey, draft board office by "Catholic left" activists protesting the Vietnam War and its effects on urban America. Arrested on site in a clearly planned sting, the protesters included four Catholic priests, a Lutheran minister and 23 others. The film reveals the story behind the arrests - a provocative tale of government intrigue and personal betrayal - and the ensuing legal battle, which Supreme Court Justice William Brennan called "one of the great trials of the 20th century." Thirty-five years later, the participants take stock of their motives, fears and the costs of their activism - and its relevance to America today. By Anthony Giacchino.

Born to unmarried parents during the strict Victorian era, Lawrence is embarrassed by his illegitimacy. He spends most of his childhood alone, striving for physical and academic achievement. At Oxford, his passion for medieval history results in an expedition to study the great crusader castles of Syria, where he gains invaluable knowledge of the Arabs. While employed as an archaeologist, he is recruited by British intelligence to monitor Turkish activities. He also befriends an Arab who will deeply influence his views towards Arabs and their cause. After World War I begins, Lawrence becomes an intelligence officer in the British Army. His mission is to gather information about an Arab revolt planned against Turkish rulers. In return for a promise guaranteeing their independence, the Arabs join the war on the British side, but a secret agreement between the British and French will shatter this dream. Torn by conflicting loyalties, Lawrence continues to assist the Arabs, becoming more deeply entrenched in their fight. Against all odds, he leads the Arabs in a daring attack on the Turkish port of Aqaba. It is a stunning success and a turning point for Lawrence, the Arabs and the British.

We also examine first-hand the so-called "Anbar Awakening," a controversial partnership between U.S. soldiers and Sunni tribal leaders, many of whom had previously been fighting the Americans. Some-including President Bush-are calling this a significant step forward in reestablishing peace and order in Iraq. Hear what soldiers on the ground have to say. We first met the Third Infantry's First Brigade from Georgia's Fort Stewart in a NOW show broadcast last January, only weeks before they headed back to Iraq for the third deployment in four years.

As the long months of the "surge" unfold, we see them fighting an elusive enemy that prefers roadside bombs to pitched battles, while back at home their newborns become toddlers, and birthdays and anniversaries come and go. Length: 60 Airdate: 9/5/2007 8:00 PM/502 Service: PBS Format: Documentary

This program tells the story behind the construction and destruction of one of the most heralded World War II engineering feats: the 250-mile River Kwai railway in Thailand. Forced to work under savage conditions by the Japanese army, more than 100,000 Allied POWs and Asian laborers lost their lives in the building of the railway, which immediately became a top target of the Allied forces. To destroy it, they had to rely on new and relatively untested technological weapons -- AZON bombs, the guided, radio-controlled precursors to the modern military's smart bombs. Using first-hand survivor testimony, modern science, a blend of reconstructions and archival footage, and never-before-seen photographs of the railway as it was being constructed, "Bridge on the River Kwai" will piece together the real story behind the birth and death of this lost railway. Among those featured in the program is Frank Nelson, one of many specially trained American cadets responsible for destroying the railway, who will speak publicly for the first time about his experience at the head of the AZON squadron.

When the Chicago Tribune's Cam Simpson heard a report on the evening news about 12 Nepalese men who were kidnapped and brutally executed by an extremist Islamic group in Iraq, he was disturbed and intrigued. The men were on their way to jobs in support of American troops, and, according to the group's website, they were killed for cooperating with America's "crusader forces" in Iraq. Simpson, familiar with the military's increasing privatization of support operations, smelled a big story. In a classic case of dogged investigative reporting, he traced each step of the Nepalese men's journey from the foothills of the Himalayas to their brutal murder in Iraq, and in the process illustrated a vast international human trafficking network with ties to American corporations.

Length: 60 Airdate: 9/21/2007 5:00 AM/500 Service: PBS Format: Documentary

Born to unmarried parents during the strict Victorian era, Lawrence is embarrassed by his illegitimacy. He spends most of his childhood alone, striving for physical and academic achievement. At Oxford, his passion for medieval history results in an expedition to study the great crusader castles of Syria, where he gains invaluable knowledge of the Arabs. While employed as an archaeologist, he is recruited by British intelligence to monitor Turkish activities. He also befriends an Arab who will deeply influence his views towards Arabs and their cause. After World War I begins, Lawrence becomes an intelligence officer in the British Army. His mission is to gather information about an Arab revolt planned against Turkish rulers. In return for a promise guaranteeing their independence, the Arabs join the war on the British side, but a secret agreement between the British and French will shatter this dream. Torn by conflicting loyalties, Lawrence continues to assist the Arabs, becoming more deeply entrenched in their fight. Against all odds, he leads the Arabs in a daring attack on the Turkish port of Aqaba. It is a stunning success and a turning point for Lawrence, the Arabs and the British.

After an overview of the Second World War, which engulfed the world from 1939 to 1945 and cost at least 50 million lives, inhabitants of four towns - Mobile, Alabama; Sacramento, California; Waterbury, Connecticut; and Luverne, Minnesota - recall their communities on the eve of the conflict. For them, the events overseas seem far away. Their tranquil lives are shattered by the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, and America is thrust into the great cataclysm. Along with millions of other young men, Sid Phillips and Willie Rushton of Mobile, Ray Leopold of Waterbury and Walter Thompson and Burnett Miller of Sacramento enter the armed forces. In the Philippines, two Americans, Corporal Glenn Frazier and Sascha Weinzheimer (who was eight years old in 1941), are caught up in the Japanese onslaught there, as American and Filipino forces retreat onto Bataan while thousands of civilians are rounded up and imprisoned in Manila. Back home, 110,000 Japanese Americans along the West Coast are forcibly relocated by the government to internment camps. On the East Coast, German U-boats menace Allied shipping offshore. The United States seems unprepared for this kind of total war. Witnessing all of this is Katharine Phillips of Mobile and Al McIntosh, editor of the Rock County Star Herald in Luverne, who chronicles the travails of every family in town. In June 1942, the Navy manages a victory over the Japanese at the Battle of Midway. In August, American land forces, including Sid Phillips of Mobile, face the Japanese army for the first time at Guadalcanal. Abandoned by their fleet with no sea or air support, the men are under constant attack. After six months, the Americans finally prevail and, in the process, stop Japan's expansion in the Pacific.

Bouts of fierce anger, depression, and anxiety that previous generations of soldiers described as "shell shock" or "combat/battle fatigue" now earn a clinical diagnosis: Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder. But the relatively new medical label doesn't guarantee soldiers will get the care they need. NOW looks at how America's newest crop of returning soldiers is coping with the emotional scars of war, and some new and innovative treatments for them. In the show, we spent time with Iraq War veteran Michael Zacchea, a Marine lieutenant colonel who trained Iraqi troops and fought in the battle of Fallujah. Haunted by the violence he saw there, Zacchea and other soldiers diagnosed with PTSD now face what could be a lifelong struggle to leave the horrors of war behind and reclaim their once-peaceful lives.

Like Michael Apted's 7-Up film series, Wide Angle will periodically visit these children through 2015 to update the events of their lives and their progress. How many will successfully graduate? How many will drop out, and why? What differences will we see between the boys and the girls? These children's stories will offer rich insight to American audiences about the striking disparities of circumstance and opportunity in different countries around the world.

Teacher Rafe Esquith has a point of view - a very strong one - about educating children of immigrants. Teaching in Los Angeles at one of the nation's largest inner-city grade schools, Hobart Elementary, Esquith leads his class of fifth graders through an uncompromising curriculum of English, mathematics, geography and literature. He inspires them with cross-country trips to learn history firsthand. And at the end of the semester, every student performs in a full-length Shakespeare play: in this case Hamlet, with advice from actors Ian McKellen and Michael York. Despite language barriers and poverty, these "Hobart Shakespeareans" move on to attend outstanding colleges, motivated by a teacher honored with a National Medal of Arts.

The 1960s were years of change, experimentation and hope that transformed a nation. This two-hour film chronicles this era of widespread democratic activism and provocative music, focusing on critical events, from civil rights to the women's liberation movement, the youth counter-culture and the Vietnam War. Through film footage, rare archival photographs and interviews with historians, critics, participants and those on both sides of the generation gap, the documentary captures the electricity, fervor and anger of an era full of great hope and turmoil. And it reflects on the enormous changes that swept the globe during that time and profiles the coming of age of the baby boomers.

Whispers in the courthouse about "missing cases" and a clandestine meeting at midnight started rookie reporter Peter Zuckerman of the Idaho Falls Post Register on an investigation that would lead to the exposure of a pedophile working within the local Boy Scouts. What was hidden from the public concealed within those court records - was the story of a Boy Scout leader named Brad Stowell, who had admitted under oath to molesting about two dozen children. Zuckerman, along with Executive Editor Dean Miller, fought successfully to unseal court records and then tracked down victims of abuse to reveal that Boy Scout leadership and at least one official in the Mormon Church - which sponsors most of the Boy Scout Troops in Eastern Idaho - knew of Stowell's history, yet allowed him to work in close proximity to children. The Post Register published the "Scouts' Honor" series in 2005 and the paper immediately came under fire from some in the community. And the fallout of the stories ended up being far more dramatic than anyone had anticipated when one of the reporters came under attack.

Margin of Victory – Q-TV newest documentary “Margin Of Victory” , hosted by Eric Jylha, will examine the local war effort of the Saginaw Valley’s men and women who went to work in factories and shops all over the Saginaw Valley to supply our WWII troops with all the machinery and supplies needed to help win World War II.

Highlighted in this 60 minute documentary will be the Defoe Shipbuilding in Bay City, The General Motors Gun Plant in Saginaw, and The Dow Chemical Company and Dow Corning in Midland. All were an integral part of the “War production machine”.

Q-TV also looks at the German POW’s who were sent over here to work as laborers in the farm fields of the Saginaw Valley. Plus other interesting stories from the people who worked in these plants and by their sacrifice and hard work, truly became the “Margin of Victory”.

Whatever Happened to Organized Labor? A Michigan at Risk Special–

A look at the rise and decline of the Michigan labor movement.

Labor unions are in trouble.

For two decades, support for unions has eroded along with membership. Consider Michigan's biggest and most powerful union, the United Auto Workers. Its national membership has gone from a high of 1.5 million members in the 1960s, to 625,000 in 2004.

Conservatives and businesses say the age of unions has passed; that they are no longer needed in a state where jobs have long been drifting to Mexico, China and Indonesia. Will unions survive?

“Whatever Happened to Organized Labor? A Michigan at Risk Special”, takes a step back in time to see how unions came about in Michigan, how they prospered, where they got into trouble, and when they began to decline.

The story comes up with some surprising answers. While the industrial labor unions are indeed in trouble, viewers may be surprised to learn that other unions, those serving teachers, government employees and service and food industry workers, are actually holding their own, surviving, and in fact are increasing their membership.

These successful unions wiped the slate clean of many traditional union ways of doing business, offered bold ideas and adopted a whole new business attitude.

College Financial Aid of Michigan– Fred Martino will host this one-hour live call-in show discussion on college financial aid in Michigan. Our panel will be:

Becky Powell - Montcalm Community College

Larry Fisher - Head Counselor East Grand Rapids High School

Robin Lott - Director of the Michigan Education Trust

Ed Kerestly - Director of Financial Aid, GVSU

We can field questions about high school preparation for college and financial aid, the financial aid needs and availability of public and private institutions, community colleges, and the State of Michigan programs like the Michigan Education Trust.

We will give an overview of the financial aid process, highlight FAFSA- what it is and why it is necessary, where to go for financial-aid information, explain how financial need is determined and the consequences of this analysis, as well as general advice and financial planning tips and common questions and answers.
