City of Livingston Police Chief Greg Etheredge discussed with WLIV the on-going issue of callers who prey on unsuspecting local individuals in a phone-scam operation.

The scams, according to Chief Etheredge, can take any number of forms. However, the one factor in all is that the caller attempts to get money from the local person who has been called.

The Chief says this is a very real and growing issue in our community. We invited the chief to do a series of announcements alerting the public of this issue and educating them on what to do if called.

While this problem/issue has surfaced in the past, Chief Etheredge says it's still a current, on-going and never ending.

We were pleased to provide airtime for the Chief to educate our listeners.
