Shooting and gun violence at churches has been in the news often in recent months.

Closer to home, the shooting at a Nashville-area church on a Sunday morning has brought the realization that it could also happen here to the forefront of local Sheriff John Garrett's mind.

The Sheriff has scheduled a number of training sessions at various locations throughout our county to train church leaders on how to put effective safety plans into place to increase safety while church services are going on.

Church safety training sessions were planned for: April 9 at Wilson; April 10 at Rickman; April 12 at Allons; April 16 at Hilham; April 17 & 19 at Livingston.

Through our local news coverage, coverage on our community events segments and on our community calendar programs – and through our special information campaign – devoted to informing the public of these training sessions and aired on both WLIV AM and WLIV FM – we have extensively used our facilities to inform the public about this matter of importance to church leaders who serve churches located all over our listening area.

Placed in the public file 2ND QUARTER, 2018.
