So much of our past is often lost forever the the passage of time. The Overton County Heritage Museum is dedicated to making sure our past is preserved for future generations to learn about.

The Heritage Museum, located in the old county jail building on West Broad Street in Livingston, houses momentos from decades and decades of life in Overton County. Residents and visitors alike have found it to be a wealth of information all under one roof.

From photos and artifacts about communities and people long since gone to artifacts commemorating our role in the nation's wars, to school day photos, books, clothing, private collections, regular rotating exhibitions, and much more, the Heritage Museum preserves and showcases who we were down through the years gone by.

WLIV has been honored to showcase the Heritage Museum. We encourage people to visit, donate, support and promote THEIR county's Historical Museum.

We recently ran a series encouraging people to join and make a financial commitment to the Heritage Museum at each individual's chosen level of monetary support.

Preserving our past is important for now and for the future. WLIV AM & FM are proud to feature the museum and its importance in our on-going public affairs programming.
