Segment Length: 01:56:46

When Adolf Hitler became chancellor of Germany in 1933, one of his earliest actions was to ban Jews from working in that country's storied film industry, praised as the most creative cinema in the world. Men and women who had created landmarks of movie history fled their homeland in the ensuing months and years. More than 800 film professionals escaped to Hollywood in the years between 1933 and 1939. The list includes actors Felix Bressart, Hedy Lamarr and Peter Lorre; directors Fritz Lang, Henry Koster, Billy Wilder and Fred Zinnemann; composers Frederick Hollander, Erich Wolfgang Korngold and Franz Waxman; and cinematographer Rudy Mate. Through film clips, behind-the-scenes archival and rare footage, photographs and first-person accounts, "Cinema's Exiles" traces the experiences of the exiles who took refuge in Hollywood and examines their impact on both German and American cinema. Sigourney Weaver narrates.

"Nerds, Jerks & Oddballs: Would Ya Hit a Guy with Glasses?": While America, a country of immigrants, has always championed the idea of inclusiveness, the outsider has been a source of constant amusement. Perhaps best epitomized today by characters in such blockbuster Judd Apatow comedies as "The 40 Year-Old Virgin," "Knocked Up" and "Superbad," this episode also looks back at the bespectacled wannabe (Harold Lloyd) and the vain coward (Bob Hope) as the ultimate outsiders of their day. Along with pioneering women in comedy like Phyllis Diller and truly zany characters who seem to have arrived from another planet (Jonathan Winters, Andy Kaufman and Robin Williams), the great social upheaval of the 60s and 70s introduced counter-culture favorites Cheech & Chong, as well as superstar nerds like Woody Allen and jerks like Steve Martin - who ultimately became so popular that the idea of the outsider had to be re-cast; "Breadwinners and Homemakers: Honey, I'm Home!": The domestic farce may be the most American of comic concepts. The moment that Burns and Allen admitted to their radio audience that they were a married couple, a tradition of laughter on the home front began. Groundbreaking television sitcoms like "The Goldbergs," "I Love Lucy," "The Honeymooners," "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "All in the Family," "The Cosby Show," "Roseanne," "Seinfeld" and "The Simpsons" reflect the ongoing changes at home and in the workplace. Sitcoms continue to be a consistent and hilarious barometer of American gender roles and attitudes toward racism and politics.

"Nerds, Jerks & Oddballs: Would Ya Hit a Guy with Glasses?": While America, a country of immigrants, has always championed the idea of inclusiveness, the outsider has been a source of constant amusement. Perhaps best epitomized today by characters in such blockbuster Judd Apatow comedies as "The 40 Year-Old Virgin," "Knocked Up" and "Superbad," this episode also looks back at the bespectacled wannabe (Harold Lloyd) and the vain coward (Bob Hope) as the ultimate outsiders of their day. Along with pioneering women in comedy like Phyllis Diller and truly zany characters who seem to have arrived from another planet (Jonathan Winters, Andy Kaufman and Robin Williams), the great social upheaval of the 60s and 70s introduced counter-culture favorites Cheech & Chong, as well as superstar nerds like Woody Allen and jerks like Steve Martin - who ultimately became so popular that the idea of the outsider had to be re-cast; "Breadwinners and Homemakers: Honey, I'm Home!": The domestic farce may be the most American of comic concepts. The moment that Burns and Allen admitted to their radio audience that they were a married couple, a tradition of laughter on the home front began. Groundbreaking television sitcoms like "The Goldbergs," "I Love Lucy," "The Honeymooners," "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "All in the Family," "The Cosby Show," "Roseanne," "Seinfeld" and "The Simpsons" reflect the ongoing changes at home and in the workplace. Sitcoms continue to be a consistent and hilarious barometer of American gender roles and attitudes toward racism and politics.

Reaching the time of the Fall of Rome in the West, Michael Wood seeks out the amazing achievements of India's golden age from 300 to 1000 AD. Viewers learn how India discovered zero, calculated the circumference of the earth and wrote the world's first sex guide, "The Kama Sutra." In the south, he visits the giant temple of Tanjore, meets the current "Senior Prince" and watches traditional bronze casters, working as their ancestors did 1,000 years ago. After sampling southern vegetarian food with a Tamil family, Wood goes on pilgrimage to a sacred mountain, where the annual fire festival was already famous in 700 AD. With unprecedented access to amazing festivals, age-old crafts and intimate family rituals, Wood shows how the Middle Ages laid the social and imaginative foundations of today's India.

With the economy in a downward spiral, more and more people are taking advantage of credit card offers to make ends meet, but are the credit card companies actually taking advantage of their customers? In the week in which federal regulators adopted sweeping new rules for the credit card industry, NOW meets families struggling to pay off their credit card debt. Such debt has become significantly larger thanks to questionable industry practices like doubling and tripling interest rates, increasing fees and penalties, and shrinking credit limits. We meet people like Andrew Spurlock and his wife Michelle, who are raising three children while watching the interest rates and fees on their credit cards skyrocket. Michelle was horrified when her interest rate jumped from seven percent to 30 percent from one day to the next, despite claiming she always paid her monthly minimum. Michelle and her husband are fighting off financial ruin as they struggle to pay off their debt. Harvard Professor Elizabeth Warren, an expert on debt and the middle class, says credit card companies are deceiving customers in order to maximize profits. "You would think that if you upheld your end of the contract that the contract would be binding. But in the case of credit cards, you would be wrong," Warren, tells NOW. This week, NOW takes a hard look at the small print in credit card offers, and at Congressional legislation aimed at regulating the industry. Are you getting the credit you deserve? Watch "Credit Crunch" to find out.

Six months after Hurricane Katrina slammed into New Orleans, producer June Cross came across 82-year-old Herbert Gettridge working alone on his home in the lower Ninth Ward, a neighborhood devastated when the levees broke in August 2005. Over the next two years, Cross would document the story of the extended Gettridge clan -- an African-American family with deep roots in New Orleans -- as they struggled to rebuild their homes and their lives. Their efforts would be deeply impacted by larger decisions about urban planning, public health, and the insurance industry, by the decisions of policymakers about federal funding for rebuilding the Gulf, and state and city plans for dispersing those monies. The moving personal story of Mr. Gettridge and his family reveals the human cost of this tragedy, the continued inadequacies of government's response in the aftermath of Katrina, and how race, class, and politics have affected the attempts to rebuild this American city.

With the economy in a downward spiral, more and more people are taking advantage of credit card offers to make ends meet, but are the credit card companies actually taking advantage of their customers? In the week in which federal regulators adopted sweeping new rules for the credit card industry, NOW meets families struggling to pay off their credit card debt. Such debt has become significantly larger thanks to questionable industry practices like doubling and tripling interest rates, increasing fees and penalties, and shrinking credit limits. We meet people like Andrew Spurlock and his wife Michelle, who are raising three children while watching the interest rates and fees on their credit cards skyrocket. Michelle was horrified when her interest rate jumped from seven percent to 30 percent from one day to the next, despite claiming she always paid her monthly minimum. Michelle and her husband are fighting off financial ruin as they struggle to pay off their debt. Harvard Professor Elizabeth Warren, an expert on debt and the middle class, says credit card companies are deceiving customers in order to maximize profits. "You would think that if you upheld your end of the contract that the contract would be binding. But in the case of credit cards, you would be wrong," Warren, tells NOW. This week, NOW takes a hard look at the small print in credit card offers, and at Congressional legislation aimed at regulating the industry. Are you getting the credit you deserve? Watch "Credit Crunch" to find out.

A new year piles old problems on a soon-to-be new president's plate, tonight on "Washington Week." Airstrikes target Gaza, rockets fall on southern Israel. Israeli Acting Prime Minister Tzipi Livni said, "The responsibility of the Israeli government is to defend its citizens and to act against terror and to bring calm and peace to this region." President-Elect Barack Obama said, "If somebody was sending rockets into my house where my two daughters sleep at night, I'm going to do everything in my power to stop that and I would expect Israelis to do the same thing." The incoming president's first foreign policy test was at hand: the intractable conflict in the Middle East. But other challenges await. Which policies will provide the first domestic tests: healthcare, the environment, homeland security? Can Congress help Obama kick off the new year with a stimulus package? And the Illinois Senate replacement drama drags on as the governor defends himself and stages an end run around his critics. Gov. Rod Blagojevich (D-IL) said, "Don't allow the allegations against me to taint this good and honest man." We look at the change the new year offers with Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

The economic meltdown that ate Washington, plus who's coming to D.C. and who's not, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "What we can't do is drag this out when we just saw half a million more jobs lost." The bad news gets worse. Trillion-dollar deficits, unemployment rates at their highest in years. Issue one clearly is fixing the economy, but how? Speaker Nancy Pelosi said, "Put me down as clearly as you possibly can as one who wants to have those tax cuts for the wealthiest in America repealed." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "Given the deficit numbers, it really ought not to be a trillion-dollar spending bill." Pres. Elect Obama said, "Just show me. If you can show me that something's going to work, I will welcome it." Also an outsider pick for spy chief. CIA Director-Designate Leon Panetta said, "I will be honored to lead the men and women of the CIA to seek and speak the truth and in so doing to help preserve this nation's freedom." Who else is coming and who else is going? Rep. Michael Madigan (D-IL) said, "Governor Blagojevich is hereby impeached." Gov. Bill Richardson (D-NM) said, "It was my idea to withdraw." Two governors on the outs, one senator apparently heading in - a raucous week. The reporters covering it: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

The second hour chronicles the successful 1903-1906 crossing of the passage by the 29-year-old Norwegian Roald Amundsen, who had just six men and a tiny vessel, the Gjoa. Amundsen did what the earlier British crew had been unable or unwilling to do: he turned to the native Inuit to learn their ancient skills of Arctic survival. The secrets they taught him, such as building snug igloos and handling dog teams, ensured the success of both this voyage and his conquest of the South Pole in 1912. In this hour, NOVA retraces Amundsen's northern voyage, taking viewers to the Canadian Arctic, where his name is still legendary among the Inuit.

Michael Wood's fascinating journey through the history of the Indian subcontinent chronicles the incredible richness and diversity of its peoples, cultures and landscapes; outlines the originality and continuing relevance of its ideas; and relates some of the most momentous and moving events in world history. Beginning with the first human migrations out of Africa, using DNA and climate science, ancient manuscripts and oral tales, Wood takes viewers from the tropical backwaters of South India to lost ancient cities in Pakistan - the scene of India's first civilization. He travels on to Turkmenistan in Central Asia, where dramatic new archaeological discoveries cast fresh light on India's deep past. Finally, Wood travels to the vibrant cities of the Ganges plain, where India's ancient myths and histories still intertwine.

Traveling by road and rail between the ancient cities of the Ganges plain, he tells the tale of the young prince who gave up the good life and became the Buddha: "India's first and greatest protester." Then, moving by army convoy through Northern Iraq and down the Khyber Pass into Pakistan, Wood shows how Alexander the Great's invasion changed the course of India's history and inspired her first empire. He visits India's earliest capital, Patna, and using archaeology, legend and "India's Rosetta Stone," explains how the ideas of the Buddha were turned into political reality by the great Indian emperor Ashoka - "one of the most remarkable figures in history" - who sowed the seeds of "history's most dangerous idea."

Michael Wood takes viewers to India in the days of the Roman Empire. In India's tropical deep south in Kerala, the spice trade opened India to the world - and gave the world a recipe for dormouse stuffed with pepper! Wood takes one of the great old sailing boats that still cross the Indian Ocean carrying pepper and cloves. He discovers the lost site of Rome's greatest trading port in India and visits the fabulous ancient city of Madurai, with its giant temple and its gold and silk bazaars that were a delight for visiting Greek traders - and still are today. Moving north, Wood takes the Silk Road from the deserts of Turkmenistan through the Khyber Pass into Pakistan to unveil the forgotten Indian empire of the Kushans, who opened up the Silk Road and built a lost Wonder of the World in the caravan city of Peshawar. "In today's world, with the Asian powers rising again," says Wood, "this time looks like the precursor - the first globalization."

A new year piles old problems on a soon-to-be new president's plate, tonight on "Washington Week." Airstrikes target Gaza, rockets fall on southern Israel. Israeli Acting Prime Minister Tzipi Livni said, "The responsibility of the Israeli government is to defend its citizens and to act against terror and to bring calm and peace to this region." President-Elect Barack Obama said, "If somebody was sending rockets into my house where my two daughters sleep at night, I'm going to do everything in my power to stop that and I would expect Israelis to do the same thing." The incoming president's first foreign policy test was at hand: the intractable conflict in the Middle East. But other challenges await. Which policies will provide the first domestic tests: healthcare, the environment, homeland security? Can Congress help Obama kick off the new year with a stimulus package? And the Illinois Senate replacement drama drags on as the governor defends himself and stages an end run around his critics. Gov. Rod Blagojevich (D-IL) said, "Don't allow the allegations against me to taint this good and honest man." We look at the change the new year offers with Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

The economic meltdown that ate Washington, plus who's coming to D.C. and who's not, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "What we can't do is drag this out when we just saw half a million more jobs lost." The bad news gets worse. Trillion-dollar deficits, unemployment rates at their highest in years. Issue one clearly is fixing the economy, but how? Speaker Nancy Pelosi said, "Put me down as clearly as you possibly can as one who wants to have those tax cuts for the wealthiest in America repealed." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "Given the deficit numbers, it really ought not to be a trillion-dollar spending bill." Pres. Elect Obama said, "Just show me. If you can show me that something's going to work, I will welcome it." Also an outsider pick for spy chief. CIA Director-Designate Leon Panetta said, "I will be honored to lead the men and women of the CIA to seek and speak the truth and in so doing to help preserve this nation's freedom." Who else is coming and who else is going? Rep. Michael Madigan (D-IL) said, "Governor Blagojevich is hereby impeached." Gov. Bill Richardson (D-NM) said, "It was my idea to withdraw." Two governors on the outs, one senator apparently heading in - a raucous week. Six months after Hurricane Katrina slammed into New Orleans, producer June Cross came across 82-year-old Herbert Gettridge working alone on his home in the lower Ninth Ward, a neighborhood devastated when the levees broke in August 2005. Over the next two years, Cross would document the story of the extended Gettridge clan -- an African-American family with deep roots in New Orleans -- as they struggled to rebuild their homes and their lives. Their efforts would be deeply impacted by larger decisions about urban planning, public health, and the insurance industry, by the decisions of policymakers about federal funding for rebuilding the Gulf, and state and city plans for dispersing those monies. The moving personal story of Mr. Gettridge and his family reveals the human cost of this tragedy, the continued inadequacies of government's response in the aftermath of Katrina, and how race, class, and politics have affected the attempts to rebuild this American city.

In 1974, renowned primatologist Dian Fossey introduced a young researcher named Kelly Stewart to a gorilla family Fossey was studying. Stewart, daughter of actor Jimmy Stewart, was the first to see a tiny new baby gorilla. She named him Titus, and her journal entry began the up-close observation of his life that researchers have continued to this day. NATURE retraces the life of Titus, silverback leader, from birth to present reign, spanning a tumultuous period in the history of a species and a nation in "The Gorilla King."

Ancient maps, legends and fairy tales all tell of dragons in our world. In nearly every culture, children are taught that dragons are big and fearsome, that they fly, breathe fire, are found in caves and live nearly forever. Where did these stories come from? Are they based on real animals? And are there any dragons still to be found today? Romulus Whitaker, renowned reptile expert and conservationist, puts a bit of history together with documented science and some compelling contemporary reports, and sets off to find out. He encounters lizards large and small that can breathe life into medieval legends even today.

The second hour chronicles the successful 1903-1906 crossing of the passage by the 29-year-old Norwegian Roald Amundsen, who had just six men and a tiny vessel, the Gjoa. Amundsen did what the earlier British crew had been unable or unwilling to do: he turned to the native Inuit to learn their ancient skills of Arctic survival. The secrets they taught him, such as building snug igloos and handling dog teams, ensured the success of both this voyage and his conquest of the South Pole in 1912. In this hour, NOVA retraces Amundsen's northern voyage, taking viewers to the Canadian Arctic, where his name is still legendary among the Inuit.

A rise in sea levels isn't the only impact global warming is having on the world's oceans. A growing body of evidence suggests that climate change is also affecting ocean currents and the chemistry of the seas, with potentially catastrophic results. This week, NOW travels deep into the oceans with scientists from the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution (WHOI) with help from other researchers for a first hand look at this stunning sea change, and what we can do about it. "We've been aware of global warming for several decades now. We haven't taken any substantive action, and we're now what many scientists would call at tipping points," Ruth Curry, an ocean scientist at the WHOI. In a simple experiment, using ice cubes, a beaker of water, and a hot plate, Curry shows NOW's David Brancaccio how ice acts as a heat buffer in the oceans. When the ice melts, the buffer collapses, and may cause a rapid rise in ocean temperatures, with unpredictable results. Some ocean scientists believe that if action isn't taken quickly to address climate change, our oceans could face their biggest shock in 100 million years. The world's oceans face a global-warming catastrophe. President-elect Barack Obama has pledged to act quickly to fight climate change but can his Administration make a difference?

Michael Wood's fascinating journey through the history of the Indian subcontinent chronicles the incredible richness and diversity of its peoples, cultures and landscapes; outlines the originality and continuing relevance of its ideas; and relates some of the most momentous and moving events in world history. Beginning with the first human migrations out of Africa, using DNA and climate science, ancient manuscripts and oral tales, Wood takes viewers from the tropical backwaters of South India to lost ancient cities in Pakistan - the scene of India's first civilization. He travels on to Turkmenistan in Central Asia, where dramatic new archaeological discoveries cast fresh light on India's deep past. Finally, Wood travels to the vibrant cities of the Ganges plain, where India's ancient myths and histories still intertwine.

Traveling by road and rail between the ancient cities of the Ganges plain, he tells the tale of the young prince who gave up the good life and became the Buddha: "India's first and greatest protester." Then, moving by army convoy through Northern Iraq and down the Khyber Pass into Pakistan, Wood shows how Alexander the Great's invasion changed the course of India's history and inspired her first empire. He visits India's earliest capital, Patna, and using archaeology, legend and "India's Rosetta Stone," explains how the ideas of the Buddha were turned into political reality by the great Indian emperor Ashoka - "one of the most remarkable figures in history" - who sowed the seeds of "history's most dangerous idea."

He discovers the lost site of Rome's greatest trading port in India and visits the fabulous ancient city of Madurai, with its giant temple and its gold and silk bazaars that were a delight for visiting Greek traders - and still are today. Moving north, Wood takes the Silk Road from the deserts of Turkmenistan through the Khyber Pass into Pakistan to unveil the forgotten Indian empire of the Kushans, who opened up the Silk Road and built a lost Wonder of the World in the caravan city of Peshawar. "In today's world, with the Asian powers rising again," says Wood, "this time looks like the precursor - the first globalization."

A new year piles old problems on a soon-to-be new president's plate, tonight on "Washington Week." Airstrikes target Gaza, rockets fall on southern Israel. Israeli Acting Prime Minister Tzipi Livni said, "The responsibility of the Israeli government is to defend its citizens and to act against terror and to bring calm and peace to this region." President-Elect Barack Obama said, "If somebody was sending rockets into my house where my two daughters sleep at night, I'm going to do everything in my power to stop that and I would expect Israelis to do the same thing." The incoming president's first foreign policy test was at hand: the intractable conflict in the Middle East. But other challenges await. Which policies will provide the first domestic tests: healthcare, the environment, homeland security? Can Congress help Obama kick off the new year with a stimulus package? And the Illinois Senate replacement drama drags on as the governor defends himself and stages an end run around his critics. Gov. Rod Blagojevich (D-IL) said, "Don't allow the allegations against me to taint this good and honest man." We look at the change the new year offers with Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

Six months after Hurricane Katrina slammed into New Orleans, producer June Cross came across 82-year-old Herbert Gettridge working alone on his home in the lower Ninth Ward, a neighborhood devastated when the levees broke in August 2005. Over the next two years, Cross would document the story of the extended Gettridge clan -- an African-American family with deep roots in New Orleans -- as they struggled to rebuild their homes and their lives. Their efforts would be deeply impacted by larger decisions about urban planning, public health, and the insurance industry, by the decisions of policymakers about federal funding for rebuilding the Gulf, and state and city plans for dispersing those monies. The moving personal story of Mr. Gettridge and his family reveals the human cost of this tragedy, the continued inadequacies of government's response in the aftermath of Katrina, and how race, class, and politics have affected the attempts to rebuild this American city.

"Nerds, Jerks & Oddballs: Would Ya Hit a Guy with Glasses?": While America, a country of immigrants, has always championed the idea of inclusiveness, the outsider has been a source of constant amusement. Perhaps best epitomized today by characters in such blockbuster Judd Apatow comedies as "The 40 Year-Old Virgin," "Knocked Up" and "Superbad," this episode also looks back at the bespectacled wannabe (Harold Lloyd) and the vain coward (Bob Hope) as the ultimate outsiders of their day. Along with pioneering women in comedy like Phyllis Diller and truly zany characters who seem to have arrived from another planet (Jonathan Winters, Andy Kaufman and Robin Williams), the great social upheaval of the 60s and 70s introduced counter-culture favorites Cheech & Chong, as well as superstar nerds like Woody Allen and jerks like Steve Martin - who ultimately became so popular that the idea of the outsider had to be re-cast; "Breadwinners and Homemakers: Honey, I'm Home!": The domestic farce may be the most American of comic concepts. The moment that Burns and Allen admitted to their radio audience that they were a married couple, a tradition of laughter on the home front began. Groundbreaking television sitcoms like "The Goldbergs," "I Love Lucy," "The Honeymooners," "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "All in the Family," "The Cosby Show," "Roseanne," "Seinfeld" and "The Simpsons" reflect the ongoing changes at home and in the workplace. Sitcoms continue to be a consistent and hilarious barometer of American gender roles and attitudes toward racism and politics.

With the economy in a downward spiral, more and more people are taking advantage of credit card offers to make ends meet, but are the credit card companies actually taking advantage of their customers? In the week in which federal regulators adopted sweeping new rules for the credit card industry, NOW meets families struggling to pay off their credit card debt. Such debt has become significantly larger thanks to questionable industry practices like doubling and tripling interest rates, increasing fees and penalties, and shrinking credit limits. We meet people like Andrew Spurlock and his wife Michelle, who are raising three children while watching the interest rates and fees on their credit cards skyrocket. Michelle was horrified when her interest rate jumped from seven percent to 30 percent from one day to the next, despite claiming she always paid her monthly minimum. Michelle and her husband are fighting off financial ruin as they struggle to pay off their debt. Harvard Professor Elizabeth Warren, an expert on debt and the middle class, says credit card companies are deceiving customers in order to maximize profits. "You would think that if you upheld your end of the contract that the contract would be binding. But in the case of credit cards, you would be wrong," Warren, tells NOW. This week, NOW takes a hard look at the small print in credit card offers, and at Congressional legislation aimed at regulating the industry. Are you getting the credit you deserve? Watch "Credit Crunch" to find out.

When Adolf Hitler became chancellor of Germany in 1933, one of his earliest actions was to ban Jews from working in that country's storied film industry, praised as the most creative cinema in the world. Men and women who had created landmarks of movie history fled their homeland in the ensuing months and years. More than 800 film professionals escaped to Hollywood in the years between 1933 and 1939. The list includes actors Felix Bressart, Hedy Lamarr and Peter Lorre; directors Fritz Lang, Henry Koster, Billy Wilder and Fred Zinnemann; composers Frederick Hollander, Erich Wolfgang Korngold and Franz Waxman; and cinematographer Rudy Mate. Through film clips, behind-the-scenes archival and rare footage, photographs and first-person accounts, "Cinema's Exiles" traces the experiences of the exiles who took refuge in Hollywood and examines their impact on both German and American cinema. "Nerds, Jerks & Oddballs: Would Ya Hit a Guy with Glasses?": While America, a country of immigrants, has always championed the idea of inclusiveness, the outsider has been a source of constant amusement. Perhaps best epitomized today by characters in such blockbuster Judd Apatow comedies as "The 40 Year-Old Virgin," "Knocked Up" and "Superbad," this episode also looks back at the bespectacled wannabe (Harold Lloyd) and the vain coward (Bob Hope) as the ultimate outsiders of their day. Along with pioneering women in comedy like Phyllis Diller and truly zany characters who seem to have arrived from another planet (Jonathan Winters, Andy Kaufman and Robin Williams), the great social upheaval of the 60s and 70s introduced counter-culture favorites Cheech & Chong, as well as superstar nerds like Woody Allen and jerks like Steve Martin - who ultimately became so popular that the idea of the outsider had to be re-cast; "Breadwinners and Homemakers: Honey, I'm Home!": The domestic farce may be the most American of comic concepts. The moment that Burns and Allen admitted to their radio audience that they were a married couple, a tradition of laughter on the home front began. Groundbreaking television sitcoms like "The Goldbergs," "I Love Lucy," "The Honeymooners," "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "All in the Family," "The Cosby Show," "Roseanne," "Seinfeld" and "The Simpsons" reflect the ongoing changes at home and in the workplace. Sitcoms continue to be a consistent and hilarious barometer of American gender roles and attitudes toward racism and politics.

With the economy in a downward spiral, more and more people are taking advantage of credit card offers to make ends meet, but are the credit card companies actually taking advantage of their customers? In the week in which federal regulators adopted sweeping new rules for the credit card industry, NOW meets families struggling to pay off their credit card debt. Such debt has become significantly larger thanks to questionable industry practices like doubling and tripling interest rates, increasing fees and penalties, and shrinking credit limits. We meet people like Andrew Spurlock and his wife Michelle, who are raising three children while watching the interest rates and fees on their credit cards skyrocket. Michelle was horrified when her interest rate jumped from seven percent to 30 percent from one day to the next, despite claiming she always paid her monthly minimum. Michelle and her husband are fighting off financial ruin as they struggle to pay off their debt. Harvard Professor Elizabeth Warren, an expert on debt and the middle class, says credit card companies are deceiving customers in order to maximize profits. "You would think that if you upheld your end of the contract that the contract would be binding. But in the case of credit cards, you would be wrong," Warren, tells NOW. This week, NOW takes a hard look at the small print in credit card offers, and at Congressional legislation aimed at regulating the industry. Are you getting the credit you deserve? Watch "Credit Crunch" to find out.

A rise in sea levels isn't the only impact global warming is having on the world's oceans. A growing body of evidence suggests that climate change is also affecting ocean currents and the chemistry of the seas, with potentially catastrophic results. This week, NOW travels deep into the oceans with scientists from the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution (WHOI) with help from other researchers for a first hand look at this stunning sea change, and what we can do about it. "We've been aware of global warming for several decades now. We haven't taken any substantive action, and we're now what many scientists would call at tipping points," Ruth Curry, an ocean scientist at the WHOI. In a simple experiment, using ice cubes, a beaker of water, and a hot plate, Curry shows NOW's David Brancaccio how ice acts as a heat buffer in the oceans. When the ice melts, the buffer collapses, and may cause a rapid rise in ocean temperatures, with unpredictable results. Some ocean scientists believe that if action isn't taken quickly to address climate change, our oceans could face their biggest shock in 100 million years. The world's oceans face a global-warming catastrophe. President-elect Barack Obama has pledged to act quickly to fight climate change but can his Administration make a difference?

A new year piles old problems on a soon-to-be new president's plate, tonight on "Washington Week." Airstrikes target Gaza, rockets fall on southern Israel. Israeli Acting Prime Minister Tzipi Livni said, "The responsibility of the Israeli government is to defend its citizens and to act against terror and to bring calm and peace to this region." President-Elect Barack Obama said, "If somebody was sending rockets into my house where my two daughters sleep at night, I'm going to do everything in my power to stop that and I would expect Israelis to do the same thing." The incoming president's first foreign policy test was at hand: the intractable conflict in the Middle East. But other challenges await. Which policies will provide the first domestic tests: healthcare, the environment, homeland security? Can Congress help Obama kick off the new year with a stimulus package? And the Illinois Senate replacement drama drags on as the governor defends himself and stages an end run around his critics. Gov. Rod Blagojevich (D-IL) said, "Don't allow the allegations against me to taint this good and honest man." We look at the change the new year offers with Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

The economic meltdown that ate Washington, plus who's coming to D.C. and who's not, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "What we can't do is drag this out when we just saw half a million more jobs lost." The bad news gets worse. Trillion-dollar deficits, unemployment rates at their highest in years. Issue one clearly is fixing the economy, but how? Speaker Nancy Pelosi said, "Put me down as clearly as you possibly can as one who wants to have those tax cuts for the wealthiest in America repealed." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "Given the deficit numbers, it really ought not to be a trillion-dollar spending bill." Pres. Elect Obama said, "Just show me. If you can show me that something's going to work, I will welcome it." Also an outsider pick for spy chief. CIA Director-Designate Leon Panetta said, "I will be honored to lead the men and women of the CIA to seek and speak the truth and in so doing to help preserve this nation's freedom." Who else is coming and who else is going? Rep. Michael Madigan (D-IL) said, "Governor Blagojevich is hereby impeached." Gov. Bill Richardson (D-NM) said, "It was my idea to withdraw." Two governors on the outs, one senator apparently heading in - a raucous week. The reporters covering it: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Michael Wood's epic series moves into the revolutionary years after 500 BC - the Age of the Buddha. Traveling by road and rail between the ancient cities of the Ganges plain, he tells the tale of the young prince who gave up the good life and became the Buddha: "India's first and greatest protester." Then, moving by army convoy through Northern Iraq and down the Khyber Pass into Pakistan, Wood shows how Alexander the Great's invasion changed the course of India's history and inspired her first empire. He visits India's earliest capital, Patna, and using archaeology, legend and "India's Rosetta Stone," explains how the ideas of the Buddha were turned into political reality by the great Indian emperor Ashoka - "one of the most remarkable figures in history" - who sowed the seeds of "history's most dangerous idea."

Amundsen did what the earlier British crew had been unable or unwilling to do: he turned to the native Inuit to learn their ancient skills of Arctic survival. The secrets they taught him, such as building snug igloos and handling dog teams, ensured the success of both this voyage and his conquest of the South Pole in 1912. In this hour, NOVA retraces Amundsen's northern voyage, taking viewers to the Canadian Arctic, where his name is still legendary among the Inuit.

Six months after Hurricane Katrina slammed into New Orleans, producer June Cross came across 82-year-old Herbert Gettridge working alone on his home in the lower Ninth Ward, a neighborhood devastated when the levees broke in August 2005. Over the next two years, Cross would document the story of the extended Gettridge clan -- an African-American family with deep roots in New Orleans -- as they struggled to rebuild their homes and their lives. Their efforts would be deeply impacted by larger decisions about urban planning, public health, and the insurance industry, by the decisions of policymakers about federal funding for rebuilding the Gulf, and state and city plans for dispersing those monies. The moving personal story of Mr. Gettridge and his family reveals the human cost of this tragedy, the continued inadequacies of government's response in the aftermath of Katrina, and how race, class, and politics have affected the attempts to rebuild this American city.

A new year piles old problems on a soon-to-be new president's plate, tonight on "Washington Week." Airstrikes target Gaza, rockets fall on southern Israel. Israeli Acting Prime Minister Tzipi Livni said, "The responsibility of the Israeli government is to defend its citizens and to act against terror and to bring calm and peace to this region." President-Elect Barack Obama said, "If somebody was sending rockets into my house where my two daughters sleep at night, I'm going to do everything in my power to stop that and I would expect Israelis to do the same thing." The incoming president's first foreign policy test was at hand: the intractable conflict in the Middle East. But other challenges await. Which policies will provide the first domestic tests: healthcare, the environment, homeland security? Can Congress help Obama kick off the new year with a stimulus package? And the Illinois Senate replacement drama drags on as the governor defends himself and stages an end run around his critics. Gov. Rod Blagojevich (D-IL) said, "Don't allow the allegations against me to taint this good and honest man." We look at the change the new year offers with Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

The economic meltdown that ate Washington, plus who's coming to D.C. and who's not, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "What we can't do is drag this out when we just saw half a million more jobs lost." The bad news gets worse. Trillion-dollar deficits, unemployment rates at their highest in years. Issue one clearly is fixing the economy, but how? Speaker Nancy Pelosi said, "Put me down as clearly as you possibly can as one who wants to have those tax cuts for the wealthiest in America repealed." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "Given the deficit numbers, it really ought not to be a trillion-dollar spending bill." Pres. Elect Obama said, "Just show me. If you can show me that something's going to work, I will welcome it." Also an outsider pick for spy chief. CIA Director-Designate Leon Panetta said, "I will be honored to lead the men and women of the CIA to seek and speak the truth and in so doing to help preserve this nation's freedom." Who else is coming and who else is going? Rep. Michael Madigan (D-IL) said, "Governor Blagojevich is hereby impeached." Gov. Bill Richardson (D-NM) said, "It was my idea to withdraw." Two governors on the outs, one senator apparently heading in - a raucous week. The reporters covering it: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

"Nerds, Jerks & Oddballs: Would Ya Hit a Guy with Glasses?": While America, a country of immigrants, has always championed the idea of inclusiveness, the outsider has been a source of constant amusement. Perhaps best epitomized today by characters in such blockbuster Judd Apatow comedies as "The 40 Year-Old Virgin," "Knocked Up" and "Superbad," this episode also looks back at the bespectacled wannabe (Harold Lloyd) and the vain coward (Bob Hope) as the ultimate outsiders of their day. Along with pioneering women in comedy like Phyllis Diller and truly zany characters who seem to have arrived from another planet (Jonathan Winters, Andy Kaufman and Robin Williams), the great social upheaval of the 60s and 70s introduced counter-culture favorites Cheech & Chong, as well as superstar nerds like Woody Allen and jerks like Steve Martin - who ultimately became so popular that the idea of the outsider had to be re-cast; "Breadwinners and Homemakers: Honey, I'm Home!": The domestic farce may be the most American of comic concepts. The moment that Burns and Allen admitted to their radio audience that they were a married couple, a tradition of laughter on the home front began. Groundbreaking television sitcoms like "The Goldbergs," "I Love Lucy," "The Honeymooners," "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "All in the Family," "The Cosby Show," "Roseanne," "Seinfeld" and "The Simpsons" reflect the ongoing changes at home and in the workplace. Sitcoms continue to be a consistent and hilarious barometer of American gender roles and attitudes toward racism and politics.

The economic crisis is affecting people in all income and social brackets, but America's baby boomers and seniors don't have the option to wait it out. The housing meltdown, market crash, and rising costs of everything from food to medicine have taken the luster out of seniors' "golden years" or worse, put them into deep debt. In fact, Americans over 50 account for about a quarter of all delinquent mortgages. Some baby boomers and seniors are reluctantly exiting retirement to look for jobs, while others are falling prey to predatory lending companies. This week NOW travels to South Carolina, a state where many retirees and winter refugees are being forced to rewrite the last chapter in their lives, to see how they are coping and what options are left.

J. Robert Oppenheimer's life and legacy are inextricably linked to America's most famous top-secret initiative - the Manhattan Project. But after World War II, this brilliant and intense scientist, tasked with the development of the atomic bomb and widely considered one of the most important minds of the 20th century, fell from the innermost circles of American science. At the height of the Red Scare, the veil of suspicion fell over Oppenheimer. He was accused of having communist sympathies and was pressed to explain his relationships with known communists. This biography presents a complex and revealing portrait of one of America's most influential scientists. Interweaving interviews with family members, scholars and colleagues with dramatic re-creations featuring Academy Award-nominated actor David Strathairn ("Good Night, and Good Luck" and "The Bourne Ultimatum"), this film follows Oppenheimer's fascinating arc from the heady world of international physics to the top-secret Manhattan Project and finally to the dark days of the Red Scare and McCarthyism. Campbell Scott narrates.

The Haitian Revolution was the only successful slave insurrection in history. Its leaders grasped the full meaning of French revolutionary ideas and used them to create the world's first black republic. The event elevated a black general, Toussaint Louverture, to such international fame that admirers ranked him on par with George Washington. The movement has been called the birth moment of universal human rights. Vaguely remembered today, the Haitian Revolution was a hurricane at the turn of the 19th century, traumatizing Southern planters and inspiring U.S. slaves. ÉGALITÉ FOR ALL explores this history through music, voodoo ritual, powerful re-creations and the comments of insightful writers and historians.

"The Knockabouts: Slip on a Banana Peel": Physical comedy and slapstick have always found rich soil in America. From the mastery of Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton to the computer-generated antics that helped transform Jim Carrey into a human cartoon, slapstick has evolved into a sophisticated art, stretching the boundaries of time and space. This episode explores the comic genius of teams like Laurel and Hardy, the Three Stooges, Martin and Lewis and the Marx Brothers, and the one and only Lucille Ball; "The Groundbreakers: When I'm Bad, I'm Better": In the ongoing war against hypocrisy, conservatism, political correctness, prejudice, prudery, censorship, sentimentality, liberalism, extremism and complacency, it was always the comedian who led the first wave of attack. Rather than using risqué jokes and four letter words simply to get a rise out of an audience, the most audacious comedians - from pioneers like Mae West and Moms Mabley to 60s and 70s bad boys like Lenny Bruce, Richard Pryor and George Carlin - invoked what the First Amendment to the American Constitution calls "freedom of speech" to bring the biggest and most dangerous laughs to the American public.

The current president leaves. The new president arrives, a look tonight at the peaceful handover of power. Our inaugural preview tonight on "Washington Week." There will be pomp and circumstance, welcomes and farewells. Pres. George W. Bush said, "I join all Americans in offering best wishes to President-elect Obama, his wife Michelle, and their two beautiful girls." Then, the tough part begins: getting the cabinet in place. Attorney General Appointee Eric Holder said, "I'll work to restore the credibility of a department badly shaken by allegations of improper political interference." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I have no illusions about the fact that no matter what we do, there will be those who will raise conflicts." Putting out confirmation fires. Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "Is this an embarrassment for him? Yes. He said so himself." And preparing for tough times ahead. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We've got an uphill climb if we're going to bring this economic recovery package to something that looks sane to the American people." What can President Obama expect? Looking ahead for us, James Barnes of National Journal, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, Shailagh Murray of the Washington Post, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

This episode tells the epic story of possibly the greatest of all clashes of civilization - the coming of Islam to the Indian subcontinent. The story culminates in one of the most glamorous ages of world civilization - the Moghul Empire. Michael Wood visits the shrines of wandering Muslim Sufi saints in Old Delhi, where people of all religions come to worship; viewers see desert fortresses in Rajasthan and the fabulous cities of Lahore and Agra, where Wood offers a new theory on the design of arguably the most famous building in the world, the Taj Mahal. He tells the story of Akbar, a Muslim emperor who decreed that no single religion could hold the ultimate truth and that humans should try to find the common basis of all creeds ("an idea that would be unthinkable today," says Wood). At its height in 1600, Moghul India had the world's highest GDP, but Akbar's dream of unity ended in a savage civil war. And waiting in the wings to pick up the spoils was a new invader - the British.

President Obama has issued a scathing critique of Wall Street following news that Wall Street employees were paid more than $18 billion in bonuses last year as the financial sector melted down. What should his administration do to crack down on banks, given that some experts are suggesting an additional $1 trillion to $2 trillion may be needed to bail them out? This week, David Brancaccio sits down with financial reporter Bethany McLean "who broke the Enron story" to look at options on the table for stabilizing the country's financial system. Is nationalizing our banks a viable solution? Almost everyone agrees that our banks need federal money to avoid even more calamity, but how much is too much, and who's watching how they spend it?

Michael Wood's "10,000-year epic" reaches the time of the British occupation of India - the Raj - and India's struggle for freedom. Wood begins in South India, where viewers learn how the forerunner of modern multinational corporations, the British East India Company, used private armies to control much of the Indian subcontinent. In Calcutta, he traces the beginnings of a world economy and describes an 18th-century British general who "went native" and adopted Hinduism. He samples the magical culture - and food - of the city of Lucknow and outlines its terrible fate in India's great rebellion against the British in 1857. He recounts the story of the enigmatic Briton, "the rebel in the Raj," who helped found the Indian freedom movement. After the First World War, the Amritsar massacre helped speed the rise of Gandhi and Nehru and the fateful events that led to the partition of India in 1947 - an episode whose repercussions are felt to this day. The series ends as India rises again to be the global giant she has been for most of her amazing history.

Arnold Schwarzenegger is betting on green. He wants to roll California's greenhouse gas emissions back to their 1990 levels, and he's promising Californians that their lifestyles - and their pocketbooks- won't feel the pinch. But is Schwarzenegger gambling with his state's economy? With help from eco-celebrities like Ed Begley, Jr. and Bill Nye "The Science Guy," NOVA examines California's aggressive pursuit of a sustainable energy future. From San Francisco's Luscious Garage, where mechanics create custom plug-in hybrids for customers like Google, to the Tehachapi Valley, where thousands of wind turbines are spinning out electricity, NOVA visits the places where green energy is already becoming a reality. Yet some critics fear that, as the nation struggles through an economic meltdown, the state's new policies are inviting dire consequences. Will California be a role model for the rest of the country or a cautionary tale?

Will the green energy dream come to fruition? This week NOW explores obstacles to the promise of renewables - energy generated from natural resources such as sunlight, wind, and rain. As America looks to dramatically increase its use of renewable energy, an inconvenient reality stands in the way: the need to upgrade the country's antiquated electricity grid. Part of that overhaul involves the construction of gigantic and expensive long-distance transmission lines to carry clean energy from remote sites to population centers. NOW travels to California, which has the most ambitious clean energy plan in the nation. But the state's efforts face stiff opposition from property owners and conservationists who prefer renewable energy from "local sources," such as photovoltaic rooftop solar panels. Complicating the matter are claims that the transmission lines are not actually carrying renewable energy at all, but represent a thinly-disguised strategy to stick to old energy practices. The green energy dream: Why it may not happen.

The economic crisis is affecting people in all income and social brackets, but America's baby boomers and seniors don't have the option to wait it out. The housing meltdown, market crash, and rising costs of everything from food to medicine have taken the luster out of seniors' "golden years" or worse, put them into deep debt. In fact, Americans over 50 account for about a quarter of all delinquent mortgages. Some baby boomers and seniors are reluctantly exiting retirement to look for jobs, while others are falling prey to predatory lending companies. This week NOW travels to South Carolina, a state where many retirees and winter refugees are being forced to rewrite the last chapter in their lives, to see how they are coping and what options are left.

The current president leaves. The new president arrives, a look tonight at the peaceful handover of power. Our inaugural preview tonight on "Washington Week." There will be pomp and circumstance, welcomes and farewells. Pres. George W. Bush said, "I join all Americans in offering best wishes to President-elect Obama, his wife Michelle, and their two beautiful girls." Then, the tough part begins: getting the cabinet in place. Attorney General Appointee Eric Holder said, "I'll work to restore the credibility of a department badly shaken by allegations of improper political interference." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I have no illusions about the fact that no matter what we do, there will be those who will raise conflicts." Putting out confirmation fires. Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "Is this an embarrassment for him? Yes. He said so himself." And preparing for tough times ahead. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We've got an uphill climb if we're going to bring this economic recovery package to something that looks sane to the American people." What can President Obama expect? Looking ahead for us, James Barnes of National Journal, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, Shailagh Murray of the Washington Post, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

Flying high on Tuesday, hitting the ground running Wednesday. President Obama gets to work tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Today, I say to you that the challenges we face are real, they are serious, and they are many. They will not be met easily or in a short span of time. But know this, America, they will be met." The record breaking inaugural crowd, the parties, the excitement, all give way now to the tough choices. Pres. Obama said, "Here we go." Closing Guantanamo. Pres. Obama said, "I can say without exception or equivocation that the United States will not torture." Passing an economic recovery act, getting U.S. troops out of Iraq, even reopening the Statue of Liberty's crown, all are on the new president's plate, his first week, even without three key members of his team in place - no commerce secretary, no attorney general, and no treasury secretary. Secretary of the Treasury Nominee Timothy Geithner said, "They were avoidable mistakes, but they were unintentional. I should have been more careful. I take full responsibility for them." Are there storm clouds ahead? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "I think at this point we believe that spending nearly a trillion dollars is really more than what we ought to be putting on the backs of our kids and their kids." We look at the pomp and the possibility tonight with Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

The Haitian Revolution was the only successful slave insurrection in history. Its leaders grasped the full meaning of French revolutionary ideas and used them to create the world's first black republic. The event elevated a black general, Toussaint Louverture, to such international fame that admirers ranked him on par with George Washington. The movement has been called the birth moment of universal human rights. Vaguely remembered today, the Haitian Revolution was a hurricane at the turn of the 19th century, traumatizing Southern planters and inspiring U.S. slaves. ÉGALITÉ FOR ALL explores this history through music, voodoo ritual, powerful re-creations and the comments of insightful writers and historians.

"Wiseguys and Smart-Alecks: Never Give a Sucker an Even Break": America loves the wiseguy who defies convention by speaking the truth no matter the consequences. Whether in the form of the curmudgeonly W.C. Fields of the 1930s or today's Larry David, who manages to perturb everyone within reach, the wiseguy (or gal) always gets the last - and funniest - word. Along with classic smart-alecks like Groucho Marx and con men like Phil Silvers, other legendary names in this episode's "Wiseguy Hall of Fame" include Jack Benny, Paul Lynde, Joan Rivers, Redd Foxx, Eddie Murphy and Chris Rock; "Satire and Parody: Sock It to Me?": Americans have always loved to make fun of the world around them using the slings and arrows of parody and satire. Whether it was Will Rogers, Johnny Carson, Jon Stewart and Stephen Colbert poking a finger in the eye of the government or Sid Caesar, Mel Brooks and the "Saturday Night Live" gang lampooning the latest blockbuster, generations have reveled in the anarchic tradition of mocking American life, politics and preoccupations.

This episode tells the epic story of possibly the greatest of all clashes of civilization - the coming of Islam to the Indian subcontinent. The story culminates in one of the most glamorous ages of world civilization - the Moghul Empire. Michael Wood visits the shrines of wandering Muslim Sufi saints in Old Delhi, where people of all religions come to worship; viewers see desert fortresses in Rajasthan and the fabulous cities of Lahore and Agra, where Wood offers a new theory on the design of arguably the most famous building in the world, the Taj Mahal. He tells the story of Akbar, a Muslim emperor who decreed that no single religion could hold the ultimate truth and that humans should try to find the common basis of all creeds ("an idea that would be unthinkable today," says Wood). At its height in 1600, Moghul India had the world's highest GDP, but Akbar's dream of unity ended in a savage civil war. And waiting in the wings to pick up the spoils was a new invader - the British.

Michael Wood's "10,000-year epic" reaches the time of the British occupation of India - the Raj - and India's struggle for freedom. Wood begins in South India, where viewers learn how the forerunner of modern multinational corporations, the British East India Company, used private armies to control much of the Indian subcontinent. In Calcutta, he traces the beginnings of a world economy and describes an 18th-century British general who "went native" and adopted Hinduism. He samples the magical culture - and food - of the city of Lucknow and outlines its terrible fate in India's great rebellion against the British in 1857. He recounts the story of the enigmatic Briton, "the rebel in the Raj," who helped found the Indian freedom movement. After the First World War, the Amritsar massacre helped speed the rise of Gandhi and Nehru and the fateful events that led to the partition of India in 1947 - an episode whose repercussions are felt to this day. The series ends as India rises again to be the global giant she has been for most of her amazing history.

Arnold Schwarzenegger is betting on green. He wants to roll California's greenhouse gas emissions back to their 1990 levels, and he's promising Californians that their lifestyles - and their pocketbooks- won't feel the pinch. But is Schwarzenegger gambling with his state's economy? With help from eco-celebrities like Ed Begley, Jr. and Bill Nye "The Science Guy," NOVA examines California's aggressive pursuit of a sustainable energy future. From San Francisco's Luscious Garage, where mechanics create custom plug-in hybrids for customers like Google, to the Tehachapi Valley, where thousands of wind turbines are spinning out electricity, NOVA visits the places where green energy is already becoming a reality. Yet some critics fear that, as the nation struggles through an economic meltdown, the state's new policies are inviting dire consequences. Will California be a role model for the rest of the country or a cautionary tale?

The economic crisis is affecting people in all income and social brackets, but America's baby boomers and seniors don't have the option to wait it out. The housing meltdown, market crash, and rising costs of everything from food to medicine have taken the luster out of seniors' "golden years" or worse, put them into deep debt. In fact, Americans over 50 account for about a quarter of all delinquent mortgages. Some baby boomers and seniors are reluctantly exiting retirement to look for jobs, while others are falling prey to predatory lending companies. This week NOW travels to South Carolina, a state where many retirees and winter refugees are being forced to rewrite the last chapter in their lives, to see how they are coping and what options are left.

President Obama has issued a scathing critique of Wall Street following news that Wall Street employees were paid more than $18 billion in bonuses last year as the financial sector melted down. What should his administration do to crack down on banks, given that some experts are suggesting an additional $1 trillion to $2 trillion may be needed to bail them out? This week, David Brancaccio sits down with financial reporter Bethany McLean "who broke the Enron story" to look at options on the table for stabilizing the country's financial system. Is nationalizing our banks a viable solution? Almost everyone agrees that our banks need federal money to avoid even more calamity, but how much is too much, and who's watching how they spend it?

Michael Wood's "10,000-year epic" reaches the time of the British occupation of India - the Raj - and India's struggle for freedom. Wood begins in South India, where viewers learn how the forerunner of modern multinational corporations, the British East India Company, used private armies to control much of the Indian subcontinent. In Calcutta, he traces the beginnings of a world economy and describes an 18th-century British general who "went native" and adopted Hinduism. He samples the magical culture - and food - of the city of Lucknow and outlines its terrible fate in India's great rebellion against the British in 1857. He recounts the story of the enigmatic Briton, "the rebel in the Raj," who helped found the Indian freedom movement. After the First World War, the Amritsar massacre helped speed the rise of Gandhi and Nehru and the fateful events that led to the partition of India in 1947 - an episode whose repercussions are felt to this day. The series ends as India rises again to be the global giant she has been for most of her amazing history.

The current president leaves. The new president arrives, a look tonight at the peaceful handover of power. Our inaugural preview tonight on "Washington Week." There will be pomp and circumstance, welcomes and farewells. Pres. George W. Bush said, "I join all Americans in offering best wishes to President-elect Obama, his wife Michelle, and their two beautiful girls." Then, the tough part begins: getting the cabinet in place. Attorney General Appointee Eric Holder said, "I'll work to restore the credibility of a department badly shaken by allegations of improper political interference." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I have no illusions about the fact that no matter what we do, there will be those who will raise conflicts." Putting out confirmation fires. Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "Is this an embarrassment for him? Yes. He said so himself." And preparing for tough times ahead. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We've got an uphill climb if we're going to bring this economic recovery package to something that looks sane to the American people." What can President Obama expect? Looking ahead for us, James Barnes of National Journal, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, Shailagh Murray of the Washington Post, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

Flying high on Tuesday, hitting the ground running Wednesday. President Obama gets to work tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Today, I say to you that the challenges we face are real, they are serious, and they are many. They will not be met easily or in a short span of time. But know this, America, they will be met." The record breaking inaugural crowd, the parties, the excitement, all give way now to the tough choices. Pres. Obama said, "Here we go." Closing Guantanamo. Pres. Obama said, "I can say without exception or equivocation that the United States will not torture." Passing an economic recovery act, getting U.S. troops out of Iraq, even reopening the Statue of Liberty's crown, all are on the new president's plate, his first week, even without three key members of his team in place - no commerce secretary, no attorney general, and no treasury secretary. Secretary of the Treasury Nominee Timothy Geithner said, "They were avoidable mistakes, but they were unintentional. I should have been more careful. I take full responsibility for them." Are there storm clouds ahead? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "I think at this point we believe that spending nearly a trillion dollars is really more than what we ought to be putting on the backs of our kids and their kids." We look at the pomp and the possibility tonight with Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

A week of extending olive branches and rubbing elbows for Barack Obama. But will it make a difference? I'm Michele Norris sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't expect 100 percent agreement from my Republican colleagues, but I do hope that we can all put politics aside and do the American people's business right now." Wishful thinking when it came to the president's economic stimulus plan. It was the first test of Barack Obama's powers of persuasion, yet he found no takers on the other side of the aisle. Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "This Democrat bill won't stimulate anything but more government and more debt." What does that mean moving forward amid a steady stream of bleak economic news? Meanwhile outreach to old adversaries. Pres. Obama said, "If countries like Iran are willing to unclench their fist, they will find an extended hand from us." Reaction is mixed as Obama signals peace is a priority. Covering these stories this week: Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, Greg Ip of the Economist, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

Will the green energy dream come to fruition? This week NOW explores obstacles to the promise of renewables - energy generated from natural resources such as sunlight, wind, and rain. As America looks to dramatically increase its use of renewable energy, an inconvenient reality stands in the way: the need to upgrade the country's antiquated electricity grid. Part of that overhaul involves the construction of gigantic and expensive long-distance transmission lines to carry clean energy from remote sites to population centers. NOW travels to California, which has the most ambitious clean energy plan in the nation. But the state's efforts face stiff opposition from property owners and conservationists who prefer renewable energy from "local sources," such as photovoltaic rooftop solar panels. Complicating the matter are claims that the transmission lines are not actually carrying renewable energy at all, but represent a thinly-disguised strategy to stick to old energy practices. The green energy dream: Why it may not happen.

Out of an Ice Age emerged one of our most majestic creatures -- the polar bear. From its brown bear ancestry, the predator evolved to be a master of a harsh and unwelcoming ice kingdom. Intelligent, adaptable and fierce, the polar bear learned how to survive in a place that offers few comforts to any creature. But now that very environment is in flux. And so is the polar bear's fate. The Arctic is changing. As temperatures slowly rise and the ice recedes, the shore is getting further away. Food sources that the polar bear have come to rely on are becoming less plentiful. In this changing climate, the polar bear is already showing signs of distress. While polar bears struggle, opportunistic grizzlies fare well, as they benefit from the melting Arctic's effects on its ecosystem. While the grizzly moves into newly opened territories, the polar bear can only wait for the freezing of its one-time kingdom. If the changing world proclaims the grizzly the new king of the Arctic, what will become of the polar bear?

Arnold Schwarzenegger is betting on green. He wants to roll California's greenhouse gas emissions back to their 1990 levels, and he's promising Californians that their lifestyles - and their pocketbooks- won't feel the pinch. But is Schwarzenegger gambling with his state's economy? With help from eco-celebrities like Ed Begley, Jr. and Bill Nye "The Science Guy," NOVA examines California's aggressive pursuit of a sustainable energy future. From San Francisco's Luscious Garage, where mechanics create custom plug-in hybrids for customers like Google, to the Tehachapi Valley, where thousands of wind turbines are spinning out electricity, NOVA visits the places where green energy is already becoming a reality. Yet some critics fear that, as the nation struggles through an economic meltdown, the state's new policies are inviting dire consequences. Will California be a role model for the rest of the country or a cautionary tale?

Will the green energy dream come to fruition? This week NOW explores obstacles to the promise of renewables - energy generated from natural resources such as sunlight, wind, and rain. As America looks to dramatically increase its use of renewable energy, an inconvenient reality stands in the way: the need to upgrade the country's antiquated electricity grid. Part of that overhaul involves the construction of gigantic and expensive long-distance transmission lines to carry clean energy from remote sites to population centers. NOW travels to California, which has the most ambitious clean energy plan in the nation. But the state's efforts face stiff opposition from property owners and conservationists who prefer renewable energy from "local sources," such as photovoltaic rooftop solar panels. Complicating the matter are claims that the transmission lines are not actually carrying renewable energy at all, but represent a thinly-disguised strategy to stick to old energy practices. The green energy dream: Why it may not happen.

This episode tells the epic story of possibly the greatest of all clashes of civilization - the coming of Islam to the Indian subcontinent. The story culminates in one of the most glamorous ages of world civilization - the Moghul Empire. Michael Wood visits the shrines of wandering Muslim Sufi saints in Old Delhi, where people of all religions come to worship; viewers see desert fortresses in Rajasthan and the fabulous cities of Lahore and Agra, where Wood offers a new theory on the design of arguably the most famous building in the world, the Taj Mahal. He tells the story of Akbar, a Muslim emperor who decreed that no single religion could hold the ultimate truth and that humans should try to find the common basis of all creeds ("an idea that would be unthinkable today," says Wood). At its height in 1600, Moghul India had the world's highest GDP, but Akbar's dream of unity ended in a savage civil war. And waiting in the wings to pick up the spoils was a new invader - the British.

Michael Wood's "10,000-year epic" reaches the time of the British occupation of India - the Raj - and India's struggle for freedom. Wood begins in South India, where viewers learn how the forerunner of modern multinational corporations, the British East India Company, used private armies to control much of the Indian subcontinent. In Calcutta, he traces the beginnings of a world economy and describes an 18th-century British general who "went native" and adopted Hinduism. He samples the magical culture - and food - of the city of Lucknow and outlines its terrible fate in India's great rebellion against the British in 1857. He recounts the story of the enigmatic Briton, "the rebel in the Raj," who helped found the Indian freedom movement. After the First World War, the Amritsar massacre helped speed the rise of Gandhi and Nehru and the fateful events that led to the partition of India in 1947 - an episode whose repercussions are felt to this day. The series ends as India rises again to be the global giant she has been for most of her amazing history.

The economic crisis is affecting people in all income and social brackets, but America's baby boomers and seniors don't have the option to wait it out. The housing meltdown, market crash, and rising costs of everything from food to medicine have taken the luster out of seniors' "golden years" or worse, put them into deep debt. In fact, Americans over 50 account for about a quarter of all delinquent mortgages. Some baby boomers and seniors are reluctantly exiting retirement to look for jobs, while others are falling prey to predatory lending companies. This week NOW travels to South Carolina, a state where many retirees and winter refugees are being forced to rewrite the last chapter in their lives, to see how they are coping and what options are left.

The Haitian Revolution was the only successful slave insurrection in history. Its leaders grasped the full meaning of French revolutionary ideas and used them to create the world's first black republic. The event elevated a black general, Toussaint Louverture, to such international fame that admirers ranked him on par with George Washington. The movement has been called the birth moment of universal human rights. Vaguely remembered today, the Haitian Revolution was a hurricane at the turn of the 19th century, traumatizing Southern planters and inspiring U.S. slaves. ÉGALITÉ FOR ALL explores this history through music, voodoo ritual, powerful re-creations and the comments of insightful writers and historians.

"The Knockabouts: Slip on a Banana Peel": Physical comedy and slapstick have always found rich soil in America. From the mastery of Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton to the computer-generated antics that helped transform Jim Carrey into a human cartoon, slapstick has evolved into a sophisticated art, stretching the boundaries of time and space. This episode explores the comic genius of teams like Laurel and Hardy, the Three Stooges, Martin and Lewis and the Marx Brothers, and the one and only Lucille Ball; "The Groundbreakers: When I'm Bad, I'm Better": In the ongoing war against hypocrisy, conservatism, political correctness, prejudice, prudery, censorship, sentimentality, liberalism, extremism and complacency, it was always the comedian who led the first wave of attack. Rather than using risqué jokes and four letter words simply to get a rise out of an audience, the most audacious comedians - from pioneers like Mae West and Moms Mabley to 60s and 70s bad boys like Lenny Bruce, Richard Pryor and George Carlin - invoked what the First Amendment to the American Constitution calls "freedom of speech" to bring the biggest and most dangerous laughs to the American public.

Whether it was Will Rogers, Johnny Carson, Jon Stewart and Stephen Colbert poking a finger in the eye of the government or Sid Caesar, Mel Brooks and the "Saturday Night Live" gang lampooning the latest blockbuster, generations have reveled in the anarchic tradition of mocking American life, politics and preoccupations.

"Wiseguys and Smart-Alecks: Never Give a Sucker an Even Break": America loves the wiseguy who defies convention by speaking the truth no matter the consequences. Whether in the form of the curmudgeonly W.C. Fields of the 1930s or today's Larry David, who manages to perturb everyone within reach, the wiseguy (or gal) always gets the last - and funniest - word. Along with classic smart-alecks like Groucho Marx and con men like Phil Silvers, other legendary names in this episode's "Wiseguy Hall of Fame" include Jack Benny, Paul Lynde, Joan Rivers, Redd Foxx, Eddie Murphy and Chris Rock; "Satire and Parody: Sock It to Me?": Americans have always loved to make fun of the world around them using the slings and arrows of parody and satire. Whether it was Will Rogers, Johnny Carson, Jon Stewart and Stephen Colbert poking a finger in the eye of the government or Sid Caesar, Mel Brooks and the "Saturday Night Live" gang lampooning the latest blockbuster, generations have reveled in the anarchic tradition of mocking American life, politics and preoccupations.

President Obama has issued a scathing critique of Wall Street following news that Wall Street employees were paid more than $18 billion in bonuses last year as the financial sector melted down. What should his administration do to crack down on banks, given that some experts are suggesting an additional $1 trillion to $2 trillion may be needed to bail them out? This week, David Brancaccio sits down with financial reporter Bethany McLean "who broke the Enron story" to look at options on the table for stabilizing the country's financial system. Is nationalizing our banks a viable solution? Almost everyone agrees that our banks need federal money to avoid even more calamity, but how much is too much, and who's watching how they spend it?

The current president leaves. The new president arrives, a look tonight at the peaceful handover of power. Our inaugural preview tonight on "Washington Week." There will be pomp and circumstance, welcomes and farewells. Pres. George W. Bush said, "I join all Americans in offering best wishes to President-elect Obama, his wife Michelle, and their two beautiful girls." Then, the tough part begins: getting the cabinet in place. Attorney General Appointee Eric Holder said, "I'll work to restore the credibility of a department badly shaken by allegations of improper political interference." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I have no illusions about the fact that no matter what we do, there will be those who will raise conflicts." Putting out confirmation fires. Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "Is this an embarrassment for him? Yes. He said so himself." And preparing for tough times ahead. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We've got an uphill climb if we're going to bring this economic recovery package to something that looks sane to the American people." What can President Obama expect? Looking ahead for us, James Barnes of National Journal, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, Shailagh Murray of the Washington Post, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

Flying high on Tuesday, hitting the ground running Wednesday. President Obama gets to work tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Today, I say to you that the challenges we face are real, they are serious, and they are many. They will not be met easily or in a short span of time. But know this, America, they will be met." The record breaking inaugural crowd, the parties, the excitement, all give way now to the tough choices. Pres. Obama said, "Here we go." Closing Guantanamo. Pres. Obama said, "I can say without exception or equivocation that the United States will not torture." Passing an economic recovery act, getting U.S. troops out of Iraq, even reopening the Statue of Liberty's crown, all are on the new president's plate, his first week, even without three key members of his team in place - no commerce secretary, no attorney general, and no treasury secretary. Secretary of the Treasury Nominee Timothy Geithner said, "They were avoidable mistakes, but they were unintentional. I should have been more careful. I take full responsibility for them." Are there storm clouds ahead? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "I think at this point we believe that spending nearly a trillion dollars is really more than what we ought to be putting on the backs of our kids and their kids." We look at the pomp and the possibility tonight with Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

A week of extending olive branches and rubbing elbows for Barack Obama. But will it make a difference? I'm Michele Norris sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't expect 100 percent agreement from my Republican colleagues, but I do hope that we can all put politics aside and do the American people's business right now." Wishful thinking when it came to the president's economic stimulus plan. It was the first test of Barack Obama's powers of persuasion, yet he found no takers on the other side of the aisle. Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "This Democrat bill won't stimulate anything but more government and more debt." What does that mean moving forward amid a steady stream of bleak economic news? Meanwhile outreach to old adversaries. Pres. Obama said, "If countries like Iran are willing to unclench their fist, they will find an extended hand from us." Reaction is mixed as Obama signals peace is a priority. Covering these stories this week: Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, Greg Ip of the Economist, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

J. Robert Oppenheimer's life and legacy are inextricably linked to America's most famous top-secret initiative - the Manhattan Project. But after World War II, this brilliant and intense scientist, tasked with the development of the atomic bomb and widely considered one of the most important minds of the 20th century, fell from the innermost circles of American science. At the height of the Red Scare, the veil of suspicion fell over Oppenheimer. He was accused of having communist sympathies and was pressed to explain his relationships with known communists. This biography presents a complex and revealing portrait of one of America's most influential scientists. Interweaving interviews with family members, scholars and colleagues with dramatic re-creations featuring Academy Award-nominated actor David Strathairn ("Good Night, and Good Luck" and "The Bourne Ultimatum"), this film follows Oppenheimer's fascinating arc from the heady world of international physics to the top-secret Manhattan Project and finally to the dark days of the Red Scare and McCarthyism. Campbell Scott narrates.

The economic crisis is affecting people in all income and social brackets, but America's baby boomers and seniors don't have the option to wait it out. The housing meltdown, market crash, and rising costs of everything from food to medicine have taken the luster out of seniors' "golden years" or worse, put them into deep debt. In fact, Americans over 50 account for about a quarter of all delinquent mortgages. Some baby boomers and seniors are reluctantly exiting retirement to look for jobs, while others are falling prey to predatory lending companies. This week NOW travels to South Carolina, a state where many retirees and winter refugees are being forced to rewrite the last chapter in their lives, to see how they are coping and what options are left.

This episode tells the epic story of possibly the greatest of all clashes of civilization - the coming of Islam to the Indian subcontinent. The story culminates in one of the most glamorous ages of world civilization - the Moghul Empire. Michael Wood visits the shrines of wandering Muslim Sufi saints in Old Delhi, where people of all religions come to worship; viewers see desert fortresses in Rajasthan and the fabulous cities of Lahore and Agra, where Wood offers a new theory on the design of arguably the most famous building in the world, the Taj Mahal. He tells the story of Akbar, a Muslim emperor who decreed that no single religion could hold the ultimate truth and that humans should try to find the common basis of all creeds ("an idea that would be unthinkable today," says Wood). At its height in 1600, Moghul India had the world's highest GDP, but Akbar's dream of unity ended in a savage civil war. And waiting in the wings to pick up the spoils was a new invader - the British.

Michael Wood's "10,000-year epic" reaches the time of the British occupation of India - the Raj - and India's struggle for freedom. Wood begins in South India, where viewers learn how the forerunner of modern multinational corporations, the British East India Company, used private armies to control much of the Indian subcontinent. In Calcutta, he traces the beginnings of a world economy and describes an 18th-century British general who "went native" and adopted Hinduism. He samples the magical culture - and food - of the city of Lucknow and outlines its terrible fate in India's great rebellion against the British in 1857. He recounts the story of the enigmatic Briton, "the rebel in the Raj," who helped found the Indian freedom movement. After the First World War, the Amritsar massacre helped speed the rise of Gandhi and Nehru and the fateful events that led to the partition of India in 1947 - an episode whose repercussions are felt to this day. The series ends as India rises again to be the global giant she has been for most of her amazing history.

Arnold Schwarzenegger is betting on green. He wants to roll California's greenhouse gas emissions back to their 1990 levels, and he's promising Californians that their lifestyles - and their pocketbooks- won't feel the pinch. But is Schwarzenegger gambling with his state's economy? With help from eco-celebrities like Ed Begley, Jr. and Bill Nye "The Science Guy," NOVA examines California's aggressive pursuit of a sustainable energy future. From San Francisco's Luscious Garage, where mechanics create custom plug-in hybrids for customers like Google, to the Tehachapi Valley, where thousands of wind turbines are spinning out electricity, NOVA visits the places where green energy is already becoming a reality. Yet some critics fear that, as the nation struggles through an economic meltdown, the state's new policies are inviting dire consequences. Will California be a role model for the rest of the country or a cautionary tale?

Will the green energy dream come to fruition? This week NOW explores obstacles to the promise of renewables - energy generated from natural resources such as sunlight, wind, and rain. As America looks to dramatically increase its use of renewable energy, an inconvenient reality stands in the way: the need to upgrade the country's antiquated electricity grid. Part of that overhaul involves the construction of gigantic and expensive long-distance transmission lines to carry clean energy from remote sites to population centers. NOW travels to California, which has the most ambitious clean energy plan in the nation. But the state's efforts face stiff opposition from property owners and conservationists who prefer renewable energy from "local sources," such as photovoltaic rooftop solar panels. Complicating the matter are claims that the transmission lines are not actually carrying renewable energy at all, but represent a thinly-disguised strategy to stick to old energy practices. The green energy dream: Why it may not happen.

J. Robert Oppenheimer's life and legacy are inextricably linked to America's most famous top-secret initiative - the Manhattan Project. But after World War II, this brilliant and intense scientist, tasked with the development of the atomic bomb and widely considered one of the most important minds of the 20th century, fell from the innermost circles of American science. At the height of the Red Scare, the veil of suspicion fell over Oppenheimer. He was accused of having communist sympathies and was pressed to explain his relationships with known communists. This biography presents a complex and revealing portrait of one of America's most influential scientists. Interweaving interviews with family members, scholars and colleagues with dramatic re-creations featuring Academy Award-nominated actor David Strathairn ("Good Night, and Good Luck" and "The Bourne Ultimatum"), this film follows Oppenheimer's fascinating arc from the heady world of international physics to the top-secret Manhattan Project and finally to the dark days of the Red Scare and McCarthyism. Campbell Scott narrates.

The current president leaves. The new president arrives, a look tonight at the peaceful handover of power. Our inaugural preview tonight on "Washington Week." There will be pomp and circumstance, welcomes and farewells. Pres. George W. Bush said, "I join all Americans in offering best wishes to President-elect Obama, his wife Michelle, and their two beautiful girls." Then, the tough part begins: getting the cabinet in place. Attorney General Appointee Eric Holder said, "I'll work to restore the credibility of a department badly shaken by allegations of improper political interference." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "I have no illusions about the fact that no matter what we do, there will be those who will raise conflicts." Putting out confirmation fires. Pres. Elect Barack Obama said, "Is this an embarrassment for him? Yes. He said so himself." And preparing for tough times ahead. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We've got an uphill climb if we're going to bring this economic recovery package to something that looks sane to the American people." What can President Obama expect? Looking ahead for us, James Barnes of National Journal, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, Shailagh Murray of the Washington Post, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

Flying high on Tuesday, hitting the ground running Wednesday. President Obama gets to work tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Today, I say to you that the challenges we face are real, they are serious, and they are many. They will not be met easily or in a short span of time. But know this, America, they will be met." The record breaking inaugural crowd, the parties, the excitement, all give way now to the tough choices. Pres. Obama said, "Here we go." Closing Guantanamo. Pres. Obama said, "I can say without exception or equivocation that the United States will not torture." Passing an economic recovery act, getting U.S. troops out of Iraq, even reopening the Statue of Liberty's crown, all are on the new president's plate, his first week, even without three key members of his team in place - no commerce secretary, no attorney general, and no treasury secretary. Secretary of the Treasury Nominee Timothy Geithner said, "They were avoidable mistakes, but they were unintentional. I should have been more careful. I take full responsibility for them." Are there storm clouds ahead? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "I think at this point we believe that spending nearly a trillion dollars is really more than what we ought to be putting on the backs of our kids and their kids." We look at the pomp and the possibility tonight with Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

A week of extending olive branches and rubbing elbows for Barack Obama. But will it make a difference? I'm Michele Norris sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't expect 100 percent agreement from my Republican colleagues, but I do hope that we can all put politics aside and do the American people's business right now." Wishful thinking when it came to the president's economic stimulus plan. It was the first test of Barack Obama's powers of persuasion, yet he found no takers on the other side of the aisle. Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "This Democrat bill won't stimulate anything but more government and more debt." What does that mean moving forward amid a steady stream of bleak economic news? Meanwhile outreach to old adversaries. Pres. Obama said, "If countries like Iran are willing to unclench their fist, they will find an extended hand from us." Reaction is mixed as Obama signals peace is a priority. Covering these stories this week: Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, Greg Ip of the Economist, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

"The Knockabouts: Slip on a Banana Peel": Physical comedy and slapstick have always found rich soil in America. From the mastery of Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton to the computer-generated antics that helped transform Jim Carrey into a human cartoon, slapstick has evolved into a sophisticated art, stretching the boundaries of time and space. This episode explores the comic genius of teams like Laurel and Hardy, the Three Stooges, Martin and Lewis and the Marx Brothers, and the one and only Lucille Ball; "The Groundbreakers: When I'm Bad, I'm Better": In the ongoing war against hypocrisy, conservatism, political correctness, prejudice, prudery, censorship, sentimentality, liberalism, extremism and complacency, it was always the comedian who led the first wave of attack. Rather than using risqué jokes and four letter words simply to get a rise out of an audience, the most audacious comedians - from pioneers like Mae West and Moms Mabley to 60s and 70s bad boys like Lenny Bruce, Richard Pryor and George Carlin - invoked what the First Amendment to the American Constitution calls "freedom of speech" to bring the biggest and most dangerous laughs to the American public.

This is the first documentary about the abandoned immigrant hospital on Ellis Island. During the great wave of immigration, 22 medical buildings sprawled across two islands adjacent to Ellis Island, the largest port of entry to the United States. Massive and modern, the hospital was America's first line of defense against contagious, often virulent, disease. In the era before antibiotics, tens of thousands of immigrant patients were separated from family, detained in the hospital and healed from illness before becoming citizens. FORGOTTEN ELLIS ISLAND is a powerful reminder of the best - and worst - of America's dealings with its new citizens-to-be.

For the first time on television, NOVA exposes the hidden world of the high-tech, 21st century eavesdropping carried out by the National Security Agency or NSA. Today, the NSA is the world's largest intelligence agency, three times the size of the CIA and far more secret. Its mission is to eavesdrop on the world - from cell phones in Europe to pay phones in Afghanistan to e-mail messages from Pakistan to Baghdad. But since 9/11, it has also turned its giant ear inward, listening in without warrant on thousands of American citizens, many of whom are on the government's secret watch list, now more than half-a-million names long. Based on the latest bestseller by journalist James Bamford, INSIDE THE SPY FACTORY is a gripping investigation of the NSA from its tragic failures leading up to the 9/11 attacks to its secret listening rooms currently installed in the nation's telecom networks.

This program is a behind-the-scenes preview of the five-part Native American history series, WE SHALL REMAIN. The series shows how Native peoples valiantly resisted expulsion from their lands and fought the extinction of their culture -- from the Wampanoags of New England in the 1600s who used their alliance with the English to weaken rival tribes, to the bold new leaders of the 1970s who harnessed the momentum of the civil rights movement to forge a pan-Indian identity. WE SHALL REMAIN represents an unprecedented collaboration between Native and non-Native filmmakers and involves Native advisors and scholars at all levels of the project.

How do American hosts entertain a monarch who has visited nearly every country on earth and dined with 10 U.S. presidents over the course of her 55-year reign? "The State Visit" follows the elaborate preparations as four localities get ready for a visit from the queen. At the site of the United States' first permanent British settlement in Jamestown, Virginia, the chief archeologist brushes up on royal etiquette. In Williamsburg, Virginia, nervous hotel staff make sure they prepare Her Majesty's room to an exacting standard of perfection. The White House hosts the first and only white-tie dinner of the administration and plans for every contingency, including canine misbehavior. In the royal household, they've invited celebrity photographer Annie Liebovitz for a formal photo shoot with the queen, although Liebovitz's request to seat Her Majesty on a horse inside the state apartments proves a bit too much. In exclusive interviews, Liebovitz shares her desire to capture the essence of monarchy, First Lady Laura Bush personally leads a private tour of the White House and the queen's press secretary reveals the challenges of keeping up with her boss. Behind the scenes and at her side from beginning to end, "The State Visit" shows what it takes to plan and execute an official visit from the queen.

Is there a solution to the foreclosure mess that's destroying communities? Across the country, cities are in crisis because of the fallout from the mortgage mess - property taxes are way down, and abandoned homes are bringing down property values, inviting crime, and draining government coffers. Neighborhoods are being destroyed. Yet the federal bailout money is not going directly to desperate communities and homeowners, but to local and national banks. This week, NOW investigates the innovative way some cities are fighting back. The city of Memphis, Tennessee is suing major national lenders and banks for deceptive and discriminatory lending practices in an effort to recoup the cost of the foreclosure mess. Other cities suing lenders for their role in the mortgage mess include Baltimore, Cleveland, Buffalo, and Birmingham. With desperation climbing alongside debt, can the strategy help these blighted parts of America?

After a week like this, maybe bipartisanship isn't all that's cracked up to be. We'll talk about it tonight on Washington Week. Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The yeas are 246, the nays are 183." It wasn't pretty. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "This is the epitome - the epitome of what I came here to stop." But the Obama White House finally got a deal on its plan to jumpstart the economy. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's only the beginning of what I think all of you understand is going to be a long and difficult process of turning our economy around." But at what cost? Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The vast majority of Republicans in the House and Senate feel that this measure is not timely, temporary, or targeted." Plus another cabinet nominee, this one a Republican, gone. Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH) said, "It would be very difficult day in and day out to serve in this cabinet or any cabinet for that matter and be part of a team and not be able to be 100 percent with the team - 110 percent with the team." A less than stunning kickoff for yet another bank rescue plan. Sec. of the Treasury Timothy Geithner said, "I want to be candid. This strategy will cost money, it will involve risk, and it will take time." A grilling for the bank CEOs. Rep. Michael Capuano (D-MA) said, "None of us. America doesn't trust you anymore." A lot of presidential energy expended. Pres. Obama said, "We can't afford the posture and bicker and resort to the same failed ideas that got us into this mess in the first place." And looming not far in the background, the deepening crisis in Afghanistan. Covering the week: Gloria Borger of CNN, John Maggs of National Journal, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

One of the latest battles in the war over evolution took place in a tiny town of Dover in eastern Pennsylvania. In 2004, the local school board ordered science teachers to read to their high school biology students a statement that suggested there is an alternative to Darwin's theory of evolution. Called Intelligent Design, the idea is that that life is too complex to have evolved naturally and therefore had to have been designed by an intelligent agent. The science teachers refused to comply with the order; alarmed parents filed a lawsuit in federal court accusing the school board of violating the separation of church and state. Suddenly, the small town of Dover was torn apart by controversy, pitting neighbor against neighbor. NOVA captures the emotional conflict in interviews with the townspeople, scientists and lawyers who participated in the historic six-week trial, Kitzmiller, et. al. v. Dover School District, et. al., which was closely watched by the world's media. With re-creations based on court transcripts, NOVA presents the arguments by lawyers and expert witnesses in riveting detail and provides an eye-opening crash course on questions such as "What is evolution?" and "Does Intelligent Design qualify as science?" For years to come, the lessons from Dover will continue to have a profound impact on how science is viewed in our society and how it's taught in the classroom.

President Obama's stimulus money is nearly out the door and on its way to the states, but will it be spent in the way it is intended? One alarming example: Mass transit. Cities and states, strapped for money, are cutting back on mass transit even as it becomes more popular with Americans. Meanwhile, President Obama is calling for increased mass transit as a necessary step toward energy independence. Will the government's investment dramatically revitalize our national travel infrastructure, or will states spend the money according to 'business as usual'? This week NOW travels to North Carolina to see what the future holds for mass transit in these troubling financial times. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

One of the latest battles in the war over evolution took place in a tiny town of Dover in eastern Pennsylvania. In 2004, the local school board ordered science teachers to read to their high school biology students a statement that suggested there is an alternative to Darwin's theory of evolution. Called Intelligent Design, the idea is that that life is too complex to have evolved naturally and therefore had to have been designed by an intelligent agent. The science teachers refused to comply with the order; alarmed parents filed a lawsuit in federal court accusing the school board of violating the separation of church and state. Suddenly, the small town of Dover was torn apart by controversy, pitting neighbor against neighbor. NOVA captures the emotional conflict in interviews with the townspeople, scientists and lawyers who participated in the historic six-week trial, Kitzmiller, et. al. v. Dover School District, et. al., which was closely watched by the world's media. With re-creations based on court transcripts, NOVA presents the arguments by lawyers and expert witnesses in riveting detail and provides an eye-opening crash course on questions such as "What is evolution?" and "Does Intelligent Design qualify as science?" For years to come, the lessons from Dover will continue to have a profound impact on how science is viewed in our society and how it's taught in the classroom.

For the first time on television, NOVA exposes the hidden world of the high-tech, 21st century eavesdropping carried out by the National Security Agency or NSA. Today, the NSA is the world's largest intelligence agency, three times the size of the CIA and far more secret. Its mission is to eavesdrop on the world - from cell phones in Europe to pay phones in Afghanistan to e-mail messages from Pakistan to Baghdad. But since 9/11, it has also turned its giant ear inward, listening in without warrant on thousands of American citizens, many of whom are on the government's secret watch list, now more than half-a-million names long. Based on the latest bestseller by journalist James Bamford, INSIDE THE SPY FACTORY is a gripping investigation of the NSA from its tragic failures leading up to the 9/11 attacks to its secret listening rooms currently installed in the nation's telecom networks.

Is there a solution to the foreclosure mess that's destroying communities? Across the country, cities are in crisis because of the fallout from the mortgage mess - property taxes are way down, and abandoned homes are bringing down property values, inviting crime, and draining government coffers. Neighborhoods are being destroyed. Yet the federal bailout money is not going directly to desperate communities and homeowners, but to local and national banks. This week, NOW investigates the innovative way some cities are fighting back. The city of Memphis, Tennessee is suing major national lenders and banks for deceptive and discriminatory lending practices in an effort to recoup the cost of the foreclosure mess. Other cities suing lenders for their role in the mortgage mess include Baltimore, Cleveland, Buffalo, and Birmingham. With desperation climbing alongside debt, can the strategy help these blighted parts of America?

How do American hosts entertain a monarch who has visited nearly every country on earth and dined with 10 U.S. presidents over the course of her 55-year reign? "The State Visit" follows the elaborate preparations as four localities get ready for a visit from the queen. At the site of the United States' first permanent British settlement in Jamestown, Virginia, the chief archeologist brushes up on royal etiquette. In Williamsburg, Virginia, nervous hotel staff make sure they prepare Her Majesty's room to an exacting standard of perfection. The White House hosts the first and only white-tie dinner of the administration and plans for every contingency, including canine misbehavior. In the royal household, they've invited celebrity photographer Annie Liebovitz for a formal photo shoot with the queen, although Liebovitz's request to seat Her Majesty on a horse inside the state apartments proves a bit too much. In exclusive interviews, Liebovitz shares her desire to capture the essence of monarchy, First Lady Laura Bush personally leads a private tour of the White House and the queen's press secretary reveals the challenges of keeping up with her boss. Behind the scenes and at her side from beginning to end, "The State Visit" shows what it takes to plan and execute an official visit from the queen.

This program is a behind-the-scenes preview of the five-part Native American history series, WE SHALL REMAIN. The series shows how Native peoples valiantly resisted expulsion from their lands and fought the extinction of their culture -- from the Wampanoags of New England in the 1600s who used their alliance with the English to weaken rival tribes, to the bold new leaders of the 1970s who harnessed the momentum of the civil rights movement to forge a pan-Indian identity. WE SHALL REMAIN represents an unprecedented collaboration between Native and non-Native filmmakers and involves Native advisors and scholars at all levels of the project.

FRONTLINE and ITVS explore the scientific, ethical and political debate that surrounds Parkinson's disease - a chronic, degenerative neurological disorder that affects about one million Americans. Beginning with the story of his own Parkinson's diagnosis several years ago, correspondent Dave Iverson sets out on a personal journey to understand a disease that scientists believe could hold the key to unlocking the secrets of the rest of the major brain diseases that afflict millions each year. Along the way, Iverson talks to the scientists on the cutting edge of research and sheds new light on the controversy over embryonic stem-cell research. He also has intimate conversations with fellow travelers, like actor Michael J. Fox and writer Michael Kinsley, about the politics of Parkinson's research and explores the private worlds of those who gradually slip into still life.

Is there a solution to the foreclosure mess that's destroying communities? Across the country, cities are in crisis because of the fallout from the mortgage mess - property taxes are way down, and abandoned homes are bringing down property values, inviting crime, and draining government coffers. Neighborhoods are being destroyed. Yet the federal bailout money is not going directly to desperate communities and homeowners, but to local and national banks. This week, NOW investigates the innovative way some cities are fighting back. The city of Memphis, Tennessee is suing major national lenders and banks for deceptive and discriminatory lending practices in an effort to recoup the cost of the foreclosure mess. Other cities suing lenders for their role in the mortgage mess include Baltimore, Cleveland, Buffalo, and Birmingham. With desperation climbing alongside debt, can the strategy help these blighted parts of America?

President Obama's stimulus money is nearly out the door and on its way to the states, but will it be spent in the way it is intended? One alarming example: Mass transit. Cities and states, strapped for money, are cutting back on mass transit even as it becomes more popular with Americans. Meanwhile, President Obama is calling for increased mass transit as a necessary step toward energy independence. Will the government's investment dramatically revitalize our national travel infrastructure, or will states spend the money according to 'business as usual'? This week NOW travels to North Carolina to see what the future holds for mass transit in these troubling financial times. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

The new president's first rocky week. First lesson learned: why change is so hard, tonight on Washington Week. Pres. Barack Obama said, "If we drag our feet and fail to act, this crisis could turn into a catastrophe." The president's demands become outright pleas as he struggles to turn the economy around, but nothing this week came easy. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "We need to get a stimulus, but more importantly, we need to get it right." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "People are running scared in the Senate because this bill is stinking up the place." Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) said,

"The American people expect us to look forward. They expect us to work together. They want to find solutions." Has the new president stumbled right out of the gate? Pres. Obama said, "The fact of the matter is Tom Daschle pulled out today and I'm here on television saying I screwed up." Not all of the president's men and women have tax problems, but enough of them do. Can the Obama administration keep its policy priorities on track? Covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Charles Babington of the Associated Press, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

After a week like this, maybe bipartisanship isn't all that's cracked up to be. We'll talk about it tonight on Washington Week. Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The yeas are 246, the nays are 183." It wasn't pretty. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "This is the epitome - the epitome of what I came here to stop." But the Obama White House finally got a deal on its plan to jumpstart the economy. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's only the beginning of what I think all of you understand is going to be a long and difficult process of turning our economy around." But at what cost? Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The vast majority of Republicans in the House and Senate feel that this measure is not timely, temporary, or targeted." Plus another cabinet nominee, this one a Republican, gone. Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH) said, "It would be very difficult day in and day out to serve in this cabinet or any cabinet for that matter and be part of a team and not be able to be 100 percent with the team - 110 percent with the team." A less than stunning kickoff for yet another bank rescue plan. Sec. of the Treasury Timothy Geithner said, "I want to be candid. This strategy will cost money, it will involve risk, and it will take time." A grilling for the bank CEOs. Rep. Michael Capuano (D-MA) said, "None of us. America doesn't trust you anymore." A lot of presidential energy expended. Pres. Obama said, "We can't afford the posture and bicker and resort to the same failed ideas that got us into this mess in the first place." And looming not far in the background, the deepening crisis in Afghanistan. Covering the week: Gloria Borger of CNN, John Maggs of National Journal, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

One of the latest battles in the war over evolution took place in a tiny town of Dover in eastern Pennsylvania. In 2004, the local school board ordered science teachers to read to their high school biology students a statement that suggested there is an alternative to Darwin's theory of evolution. Called Intelligent Design, the idea is that that life is too complex to have evolved naturally and therefore had to have been designed by an intelligent agent. The science teachers refused to comply with the order; alarmed parents filed a lawsuit in federal court accusing the school board of violating the separation of church and state. Suddenly, the small town of Dover was torn apart by controversy, pitting neighbor against neighbor. NOVA captures the emotional conflict in interviews with the townspeople, scientists and lawyers who participated in the historic six-week trial, Kitzmiller, et. al. v. Dover School District, et. al., which was closely watched by the world's media. With re-creations based on court transcripts, NOVA presents the arguments by lawyers and expert witnesses in riveting detail and provides an eye-opening crash course on questions such as "What is evolution?" and "Does Intelligent Design qualify as science?" For years to come, the lessons from Dover will continue to have a profound impact on how science is viewed in our society and how it's taught in the classroom.

President Obama's stimulus money is nearly out the door and on its way to the states, but will it be spent in the way it is intended? One alarming example:

Mass transit. Cities and states, strapped for money, are cutting back on mass transit even as it becomes more popular with Americans. Meanwhile, President Obama is calling for increased mass transit as a necessary step toward energy independence. Will the government's investment dramatically revitalize our national travel infrastructure, or will states spend the money according to 'business as usual'? This week NOW travels to North Carolina to see what the future holds for mass transit in these troubling financial times. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

Some people are cat people, some are dog people. But regardless of which camp they fall into, most people are simply crazy about their pets. The connections people form with their cats and dogs are often the longest, strongest relationships in their lives. They are our soul mates, our best friends, sometimes even our surrogate children. What makes these creatures such key members of our families? Perhaps it's because our furry friends have long provided us with comfort, camaraderie, and unconditional love. Cats and dogs are our unending source of kisses, cuddles, slobber, claws, and laughs. Watch as NATURE shares the stories of pet owners and their beloved animals. From a very special dog named Jerry, to a cat that saved a man's life, "Why We Love Cats and Dogs" presents a portrait of some of the most powerful and remarkable connections we experience as humans - the unbreakable bonds with our pets.

FRONTLINE and ITVS explore the scientific, ethical and political debate that surrounds Parkinson's disease - a chronic, degenerative neurological disorder that affects about one million Americans. Beginning with the story of his own Parkinson's diagnosis several years ago, correspondent Dave Iverson sets out on a personal journey to understand a disease that scientists believe could hold the key to unlocking the secrets of the rest of the major brain diseases that afflict millions each year. Along the way, Iverson talks to the scientists on the cutting edge of research and sheds new light on the controversy over embryonic stem-cell research. He also has intimate conversations with fellow travelers, like actor Michael J. Fox and writer Michael Kinsley, about the politics of Parkinson's research and explores the private worlds of those who gradually slip into still life.

This is the first documentary about the abandoned immigrant hospital on Ellis Island. During the great wave of immigration, 22 medical buildings sprawled across two islands adjacent to Ellis Island, the largest port of entry to the United States. Massive and modern, the hospital was America's first line of defense against contagious, often virulent, disease. In the era before antibiotics, tens of thousands of immigrant patients were separated from family, detained in the hospital and healed from illness before becoming citizens. FORGOTTEN ELLIS ISLAND is a powerful reminder of the best - and worst - of America's dealings with its new citizens-to-be.

Is there a solution to the foreclosure mess that's destroying communities? Across the country, cities are in crisis because of the fallout from the mortgage mess - property taxes are way down, and abandoned homes are bringing down property values, inviting crime, and draining government coffers. Neighborhoods are being destroyed. Yet the federal bailout money is not going directly to desperate communities and homeowners, but to local and national banks. This week, NOW investigates the innovative way some cities are fighting back. The city of Memphis, Tennessee is suing major national lenders and banks for deceptive and discriminatory lending practices in an effort to recoup the cost of the foreclosure mess. Other cities suing lenders for their role in the mortgage mess include Baltimore, Cleveland, Buffalo, and Birmingham. With desperation climbing alongside debt, can the strategy help these blighted parts of America?

This program is a behind-the-scenes preview of the five-part Native American history series, WE SHALL REMAIN. The series shows how Native peoples valiantly resisted expulsion from their lands and fought the extinction of their culture -- from the Wampanoags of New England in the 1600s who used their alliance with the English to weaken rival tribes, to the bold new leaders of the 1970s who harnessed the momentum of the civil rights movement to forge a pan-Indian identity. WE SHALL REMAIN represents an unprecedented collaboration between Native and non-Native filmmakers and involves Native advisors and scholars at all levels of the project.

How do American hosts entertain a monarch who has visited nearly every country on earth and dined with 10 U.S. presidents over the course of her 55-year reign? "The State Visit" follows the elaborate preparations as four localities get ready for a visit from the queen. At the site of the United States' first permanent British settlement in Jamestown, Virginia, the chief archeologist brushes up on royal etiquette. In Williamsburg, Virginia, nervous hotel staff make sure they prepare Her Majesty's room to an exacting standard of perfection. The White House hosts the first and only white-tie dinner of the administration and plans for every contingency, including canine misbehavior. In the royal household, they've invited celebrity photographer Annie Liebovitz for a formal photo shoot with the queen, although Liebovitz's request to seat Her Majesty on a horse inside the state apartments proves a bit too much. In exclusive interviews, Liebovitz shares her desire to capture the essence of monarchy, First Lady Laura Bush personally leads a private tour of the White House and the queen's press secretary reveals the challenges of keeping up with her boss. Behind the scenes and at her side from beginning to end, "The State Visit" shows what it takes to plan and execute an official visit from the queen.

For the first time on television, NOVA exposes the hidden world of the high-tech, 21st century eavesdropping carried out by the National Security Agency or NSA. Today, the NSA is the world's largest intelligence agency, three times the size of the CIA and far more secret. Its mission is to eavesdrop on the world - from cell phones in Europe to pay phones in Afghanistan to e-mail messages from Pakistan to Baghdad. But since 9/11, it has also turned its giant ear inward, listening in without warrant on thousands of American citizens, many of whom are on the government's secret watch list, now more than half-a-million names long. Based on the latest bestseller by journalist James Bamford, INSIDE THE SPY FACTORY is a gripping investigation of the NSA from its tragic failures leading up to the 9/11 attacks to its secret listening rooms currently installed in the nation's telecom networks.

President Obama's stimulus money is nearly out the door and on its way to the states, but will it be spent in the way it is intended? One alarming example: Mass transit. Cities and states, strapped for money, are cutting back on mass transit even as it becomes more popular with Americans. Meanwhile, President

Obama is calling for increased mass transit as a necessary step toward energy independence. Will the government's investment dramatically revitalize our national travel infrastructure, or will states spend the money according to 'business as usual'? This week NOW travels to North Carolina to see what the future holds for mass transit in these troubling financial times. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

The new president's first rocky week. First lesson learned: why change is so hard, tonight on Washington Week. Pres. Barack Obama said, "If we drag our feet and fail to act, this crisis could turn into a catastrophe." The president's demands become outright pleas as he struggles to turn the economy around, but nothing this week came easy. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "We need to get a stimulus, but more importantly, we need to get it right." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "People are running scared in the Senate because this bill is stinking up the place." Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) said, "The American people expect us to look forward. They expect us to work together. They want to find solutions." Has the new president stumbled right out of the gate? Pres. Obama said, "The fact of the matter is Tom Daschle pulled out today and I'm here on television saying I screwed up." Not all of the president's men and women have tax problems, but enough of them do. Can the Obama administration keep its policy priorities on track? Covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Charles Babington of the Associated Press, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

After a week like this, maybe bipartisanship isn't all that's cracked up to be. We'll talk about it tonight on Washington Week. Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The yeas are 246, the nays are 183." It wasn't pretty. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "This is the epitome - the epitome of what I came here to stop." But the Obama White House finally got a deal on its plan to jumpstart the economy. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's only the beginning of what I think all of you understand is going to be a long and difficult process of turning our economy around." But at what cost? Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The vast majority of Republicans in the House and Senate feel that this measure is not timely, temporary, or targeted." Plus another cabinet nominee, this one a Republican, gone. Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH) said, "It would be very difficult day in and day out to serve in this cabinet or any cabinet for that matter and be part of a team and not be able to be 100 percent with the team - 110 percent with the team." A less than stunning kickoff for yet another bank rescue plan. Sec. of the Treasury Timothy Geithner said, "I want to be candid. This strategy will cost money, it will involve risk, and it will take time." A grilling for the bank CEOs. Rep. Michael Capuano (D-MA) said, "None of us. America doesn't trust you anymore." A lot of presidential energy expended. Pres. Obama said, "We can't afford the posture and bicker and resort to the same failed ideas that got us into this mess in the first place." And looming not far in the background, the deepening crisis in Afghanistan. Covering the week: Gloria Borger of CNN, John Maggs of National Journal, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

FRONTLINE and ITVS explore the scientific, ethical and political debate that surrounds Parkinson's disease - a chronic, degenerative neurological disorder that affects about one million Americans. Beginning with the story of his own Parkinson's diagnosis several years ago, correspondent Dave Iverson sets out on a personal journey to understand a disease that scientists believe could hold the key to unlocking the secrets of the rest of the major brain diseases that afflict millions each year. Along the way, Iverson talks to the scientists on the cutting edge of research and sheds new light on the controversy over embryonic stem-cell research. He also has intimate conversations with fellow travelers, like actor Michael J. Fox and writer Michael Kinsley, about the politics of Parkinson's research and explores the private worlds of those who gradually slip into still life.

One of the latest battles in the war over evolution took place in a tiny town of Dover in eastern Pennsylvania. In 2004, the local school board ordered science teachers to read to their high school biology students a statement that suggested there is an alternative to Darwin's theory of evolution. Called Intelligent Design, the idea is that that life is too complex to have evolved naturally and therefore had to have been designed by an intelligent agent. The science teachers refused to comply with the order; alarmed parents filed a lawsuit in federal court accusing the school board of violating the separation of church and state. Suddenly, the small town of Dover was torn apart by controversy, pitting neighbor against neighbor. NOVA captures the emotional conflict in interviews with the townspeople, scientists and lawyers who participated in the historic six-week trial, Kitzmiller, et. al. v. Dover School District, et. al., which was closely watched by the world's media. With re-creations based on court transcripts, NOVA presents the arguments by lawyers and expert witnesses in riveting detail and provides an eye-opening crash course on questions such as "What is evolution?" and "Does Intelligent Design qualify as science?" For years to come, the lessons from Dover will continue to have a profound impact on how science is viewed in our society and how it's taught in the classroom.

Today, the NSA is the world's largest intelligence agency, three times the size of the CIA and far more secret. Its mission is to eavesdrop on the world - from cell phones in Europe to pay phones in Afghanistan to e-mail messages from Pakistan to Baghdad. But since 9/11, it has also turned its giant ear inward, listening in without warrant on thousands of American citizens, many of whom are on the government's secret watch list, now more than half-a-million names long. Based on the latest bestseller by journalist James Bamford, INSIDE THE SPY FACTORY is a gripping investigation of the NSA from its tragic failures leading up to the 9/11 attacks to its secret listening rooms currently installed in the nation's telecom networks.

President Obama's stimulus money is nearly out the door and on its way to the states, but will it be spent in the way it is intended? One alarming example: Mass transit. Cities and states, strapped for money, are cutting back on mass transit even as it becomes more popular with Americans. Meanwhile, President Obama is calling for increased mass transit as a necessary step toward energy independence. Will the government's investment dramatically revitalize our national travel infrastructure, or will states spend the money according to 'business as usual'? This week NOW travels to North Carolina to see what the future holds for mass transit in these troubling financial times. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

Is there a solution to the foreclosure mess that's destroying communities? Across the country, cities are in crisis because of the fallout from the mortgage mess - property taxes are way down, and abandoned homes are bringing down property values, inviting crime, and draining government coffers. Neighborhoods are being destroyed. Yet the federal bailout money is not going directly to desperate communities and homeowners, but to local and national banks. This week, NOW investigates the innovative way some cities are fighting back. The city of Memphis, Tennessee is suing major national lenders and banks for deceptive and discriminatory lending practices in an effort to recoup the cost of the foreclosure mess. Other cities suing lenders for their role in the mortgage mess include Baltimore, Cleveland, Buffalo, and Birmingham. With desperation climbing alongside debt, can the strategy help these blighted parts of America?

For the first time on television, NOVA exposes the hidden world of the high-tech, 21st century eavesdropping carried out by the National Security Agency or NSA. Today, the NSA is the world's largest intelligence agency, three times the size of the CIA and far more secret. Its mission is to eavesdrop on the world - from cell phones in Europe to pay phones in Afghanistan to e-mail messages from Pakistan to Baghdad. But since 9/11, it has also turned its giant ear inward, listening in without warrant on thousands of American citizens, many of whom are on the government's secret watch list, now more than half-a-million names long. Based on the latest bestseller by journalist James Bamford, INSIDE THE SPY FACTORY is a gripping investigation of the NSA from its tragic failures leading up to the 9/11 attacks to its secret listening rooms currently installed in the nation's telecom networks.

After a week like this, maybe bipartisanship isn't all that's cracked up to be. We'll talk about it tonight on Washington Week. Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The yeas are 246, the nays are 183." It wasn't pretty. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "This is the epitome - the epitome of what I came here to stop." But the Obama White House finally got a deal on its plan to jumpstart the economy. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's only the beginning of what I think all of you understand is going to be a long and difficult process of turning our economy around." But at what cost? Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The vast majority of Republicans in the House and Senate feel that this measure is not timely, temporary, or targeted." Plus another cabinet nominee, this one a Republican, gone. Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH) said, "It would be very difficult day in and day out to serve in this cabinet or any cabinet for that matter and be part of a team and not be able to be 100 percent with the team - 110 percent with the team." A less than stunning kickoff for yet another bank rescue plan. Sec. of the Treasury Timothy Geithner said, "I want to be candid. This strategy will cost money, it will involve risk, and it will take time." A grilling for the bank CEOs. Rep. Michael Capuano (D-MA) said, "None of us. America doesn't trust you anymore." A lot of presidential energy expended. Pres. Obama said, "We can't afford the posture and bicker and resort to the same failed ideas that got us into this mess in the first place." And looming not far in the background, the deepening crisis in Afghanistan. Covering the week: Gloria Borger of CNN, John Maggs of National Journal, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

One of the latest battles in the war over evolution took place in a tiny town of Dover in eastern Pennsylvania. In 2004, the local school board ordered science teachers to read to their high school biology students a statement that suggested there is an alternative to Darwin's theory of evolution. Called Intelligent Design, the idea is that that life is too complex to have evolved naturally and therefore had to have been designed by an intelligent agent. The science teachers refused to comply with the order; alarmed parents filed a lawsuit in federal court accusing the school board of violating the separation of church and state. Suddenly, the small town of Dover was torn apart by controversy, pitting neighbor against neighbor. NOVA captures the emotional conflict in interviews with the townspeople, scientists and lawyers who participated in the historic six-week trial, Kitzmiller, et. al. v. Dover School District, et. al., which was closely watched by the world's media. With re-creations based on court transcripts, NOVA presents the arguments by lawyers and expert witnesses in riveting detail and provides an eye-opening crash course on questions such as "What is evolution?" and "Does Intelligent Design qualify as science?" For years to come, the lessons from Dover will continue to have a profound impact on how science is viewed in our society and how it's taught in the classroom.

It was hailed by the New York Times as "surgery of the soul," a groundbreaking medical procedure that promised hope to the most distressed mentally ill patients and their families. But what began as an operation of last resort was soon being performed at some fifty state asylums, often to devastating results. Little more than a decade after his rise to fame, Walter Freeman, the neurologist who championed the procedure, was decried as a moral monster, and lobotomy one of the most barbaric mistakes of modern medicine. American Experience presents "The Lobotomist," the gripping and tragic story of an ambitious doctor, the desperate families who sought his help, and the medical establishment that embraced him. From award-winning producers Barak Goodman and John Maggio (The Boy in the Bubble, The Fight), this one-hour film features interviews with Dr. Freeman's former patients and their families, his students, and medical historians, and offers an unprecedented look at one of the darkest chapters in psychiatric history.

In a life that inspired controversy, no one disputes the place that Jerome Robbins holds as the preeminent director/choreographer of American musical theater. He transformed Broadway with shows such as "West Side Story," "Gypsy" and "Fiddler on the Roof" and he forged a career in ballet, first at American Ballet Theatre, then at New York City Ballet. This son of an immigrant deli owner was known for his often ruthless perfectionism and was dogged by his decision in 1953 to name names in his House Committee on Un-American Activities testimony. He was, nevertheless, universally respected for his unparalleled artistry. The program features excerpts from Robbins' work, including never-before-seen rehearsal footage, and interviews with many of his colleagues, both from ballet and Broadway, such as Mikhail Baryshnikov, Suzanne Farrell, and Chita Rivera.

At the end of the American Revolution, thousands of African-American slaves risked everything to fight for the British in exchange for a promise of freedom. John Clarkson, a young Royal Navy lieutenant, was sent to North America by British abolitionists to fulfill that promise. According to plan, each slave would be resettled in Nova Scotia. However, when that frigid, rocky terrain proved inhospitable to those who had worked the cotton fields of the Deep South, Clarkson arranged for them to be transported across the Atlantic to Sierra Leone. Using journals, diaries and autobiographical accounts, writer-narrator Simon Schama (SIMON SCHAMA'S POWER OF ART) reconstructs this epic journey. Gripping dramatizations transport viewers from the slave plantations of Georgia to the bone-chilling cold of Nova Scotia to the trim parlors of Georgian England and finally to sweltering Sierra Leone, where Clarkson's dreams of a haven for former slaves would come to a tragic end.

"Signpost to Freedom: The 1953 Baton Rouge Bus Boycott" tells the story of the nation's first large-scale boycott challenging segregation. In 1953, led by a handful of determined young men and women, the African American citizens of Louisiana's capital city led a quiet revolt. A year before the U.S. Supreme Court struck down public school segregation and nearly three years before the famous bus boycott in Montgomery, black citizens refused to ride city buses. In just eight days, they brought the city's bus system to the brink of bankruptcy. Word of the successful action spread like wildfire, influencing others like Rosa Parks and Martin Luther King Jr. In years to come, lessons about the boycott's success and failures would provide momentum for the social revolution igniting throughout the South.

In a life that inspired controversy, no one disputes the place that Jerome Robbins holds as the preeminent director/choreographer of American musical theater. He transformed Broadway with shows such as "West Side Story," "Gypsy" and "Fiddler on the Roof" and he forged a career in ballet, first at American Ballet Theatre, then at New York City Ballet. This son of an immigrant deli owner was known for his often ruthless perfectionism and was dogged by his decision in 1953 to name names in his House Committee on Un-American Activities testimony. He was, nevertheless, universally respected for his unparalleled artistry. The program features excerpts from Robbins' work, including never-before-seen rehearsal footage, and interviews with many of his colleagues, both from ballet and Broadway, such as Mikhail Baryshnikov, Suzanne Farrell, and Chita Rivera.

Saving the banks, the auto industry, your homes, and your paychecks - the choices and the president's plan tonight on "Washington Week." From bad to worse. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I just want to make this clear. This plan will not save every home." But what can government do? Larry Summers, head of the White House's National Economic Council, said, "The key part of this program is an effort to stop what is a vicious cycle that is incredibly destructive." Everyone's lining up for a piece of the trillion-dollar pie: mortgagers and mortgagees, employers and the unemployed. Can President Obama turn the economy around? Pres. Obama said, "The American people are watching. They need this plan to work." If so, what ripple effect will be felt around the world? Director of National Intelligence Dennis Blair said, "Economic crises increase the risk of regime-threatening instability if they are prolonged for a one to two-year period." And a bunch of the world is unstable. Chief U.S. concerns - Afghanistan, Pakistan, and Iran. Covering the week: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

A shocking statistic - teenagers are in more danger from sexual predators at their part time jobs than through the Internet. According to one estimate, 200,000 teenagers are assaulted at the workplace each year. It's a vastly underreported phenomenon, but some brave young women are stepping up publicly to tell their stories. This week, NOW collaborates with the Schuster Institute for Investigative Journalism at Brandeis University to bring you an unprecedented broadcast investigation of teen sexual harassment in the workplace. In the program, abused teenagers share their own stories with Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa. We track their legal journeys to justice, and how the issue impacts hundreds of thousands of teenagers across the country - many of whom don't know how to report workplace abuse, or to even recognize when their bosses cross the line. This is the first report in a new NOW on PBS beat on women and men in the twenty-first century we call "Life Now."

In the tiny town of Edna, Texas, in 1951, a field hand named Pete Hernandez murdered his employer after exchanging heated words in a gritty cantina. From this unremarkable small-town murder emerged a landmark civil rights case that would forever change the lives and legal standing of tens of millions of Americans. "A Class Apart" tells the little-known story of a band of underdog Mexican-American lawyers who took their case, Hernandez v. Texas, all the way to the Supreme Court, where they successfully challenged Jim Crow-style discrimination against Mexican Americans. In the landmark legal case, prosecution lawyers forged a daring legal strategy, arguing that Mexican Americans were "a class apart" and did not neatly fit into a legal structure that recognized only blacks and whites. As legal skirmishes unfolded, the lawyers emerged as brilliant, dedicated, humorous and at times terribly flawed men. This film dramatically weaves the story of its central characters - activists and lawyers, returning veterans and ordinary citizens, murderer and victim - into the broader history of Latinos in America during a time of extraordinary change.

"Signpost to Freedom: The 1953 Baton Rouge Bus Boycott" tells the story of the nation's first large-scale boycott challenging segregation. In 1953, led by a handful of determined young men and women, the African American citizens of Louisiana's capital city led a quiet revolt. A year before the U.S. Supreme Court struck down public school segregation and nearly three years before the famous bus boycott in Montgomery, black citizens refused to ride city buses. In just eight days, they brought the city's bus system to the brink of bankruptcy. Word of the successful action spread like wildfire, influencing others like Rosa Parks and Martin Luther King Jr. In years to come, lessons about the boycott's success and failures would provide momentum for the social revolution igniting throughout the South.

Saving the banks, the auto industry, your homes, and your paychecks - the choices and the president's plan tonight on "Washington Week." From bad to worse. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I just want to make this clear. This plan will not save every home." But what can government do? Larry Summers, head of the White House's National Economic Council, said, "The key part of this program is an effort to stop what is a vicious cycle that is incredibly destructive." Everyone's lining up for a piece of the trillion-dollar pie: mortgagers and mortgagees, employers and the unemployed. Can President Obama turn the economy around? Pres. Obama said, "The American people are watching. They need this plan to work." If so, what ripple effect will be felt around the world? Director of National Intelligence Dennis Blair said, "Economic crises increase the risk of regime-threatening instability if they are prolonged for a one to two-year period." President Obama is biting an awful lot, but is it more than he can chew? We tackle that tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I want every American to know this: we will rebuild. We will recover. And the United States of America will emerge stronger than before." Obama also said, "Let me say this as plainly as I can: by August 31st, 2010, our combat mission in Iraq will end." Obama also said, "This budget is an honest accounting of where we are and where we intend to go." The president piled a lot more on his plate this week, but how to turn those promises into policy? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "The era of big government is back and Democrats are asking you to pay for it." By any measure, the president is asking for a lot. Now comes the hard part. We take it all apart with the reporters covering the first month of the new administration: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

A shocking statistic - teenagers are in more danger from sexual predators at their part time jobs than through the Internet. According to one estimate, 200,000 teenagers are assaulted at the workplace each year. It's a vastly underreported phenomenon, but some brave young women are stepping up publicly to tell their stories. This week, NOW collaborates with the Schuster Institute for Investigative Journalism at Brandeis University to bring you an unprecedented broadcast investigation of teen sexual harassment in the workplace. In the program, abused teenagers share their own stories with Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa. We track their legal journeys to justice, and how the issue impacts hundreds of thousands of teenagers across the country - many of whom don't know how to report workplace abuse, or to even recognize when their bosses cross the line. This is the first report in a new NOW on PBS beat on women and men in the twenty-first century we call "Life Now."

Long ago in the age of dinosaurs, a volcano in eastern China erupted and buried a host of strange creatures in ash, creating exquisite fossils that preserved a big surprise - many dinosaurs were covered in feathers. In "The Four-Winged Dinosaur," NOVA investigates the most bizarre of these feathered dinosaurs, which has rekindled a fierce, decades-long debate over the origin of bird flight. The central character in this drama is a strange little dinosaur with wings on its legs as well as its arms. The pigeon-sized Microraptor is the smallest adult dinosaur ever found, perhaps the first known tree-dweller. But could it really fly? NOVA assembles a team of top paleontologists, aeronautical engineers, and paleo-artists to reconstruct Microraptor and build a sophisticated model for a wind tunnel experiment. The results have surprising implications for long-accepted ideas about how winged flight began.

It was hailed by the New York Times as "surgery of the soul," a groundbreaking medical procedure that promised hope to the most distressed mentally ill patients and their families. But what began as an operation of last resort was soon being performed at some fifty state asylums, often to devastating results. Little more than a decade after his rise to fame, Walter Freeman, the neurologist who championed the procedure, was decried as a moral monster, and lobotomy one of the most barbaric mistakes of modern medicine. American Experience presents "The Lobotomist," the gripping and tragic story of an ambitious doctor, the desperate families who sought his help, and the medical establishment that embraced him. From award-winning producers Barak Goodman and John Maggio (The Boy in the Bubble, The Fight), this one-hour film features interviews with Dr. Freeman's former patients and their families, his students, and medical historians, and offers an unprecedented look at one of the darkest chapters in psychiatric history.

In a life that inspired controversy, no one disputes the place that Jerome Robbins holds as the preeminent director/choreographer of American musical theater. He transformed Broadway with shows such as "West Side Story," "Gypsy" and "Fiddler on the Roof" and he forged a career in ballet, first at American Ballet Theatre, then at New York City Ballet. This son of an immigrant deli owner was known for his often ruthless perfectionism and was dogged by his decision in 1953 to name names in his House Committee on Un-American Activities testimony. He was, nevertheless, universally respected for his unparalleled artistry. The program features excerpts from Robbins' work, including never-before-seen rehearsal footage, and interviews with many of his colleagues, both from ballet and Broadway, such as Mikhail Baryshnikov, Suzanne Farrell, and Chita Rivera.

In the tiny town of Edna, Texas, in 1951, a field hand named Pete Hernandez murdered his employer after exchanging heated words in a gritty cantina. From this unremarkable small-town murder emerged a landmark civil rights case that would forever change the lives and legal standing of tens of millions of Americans. "A Class Apart" tells the little-known story of a band of underdog Mexican-American lawyers who took their case, Hernandez v. Texas, all the way to the Supreme Court, where they successfully challenged Jim Crow-style discrimination against Mexican Americans. In the landmark legal case, prosecution lawyers forged a daring legal strategy, arguing that Mexican Americans were "a class apart" and did not neatly fit into a legal structure that recognized only blacks and whites. As legal skirmishes unfolded, the lawyers emerged as brilliant, dedicated, humorous and at times terribly flawed men. This film dramatically weaves the story of its central characters - activists and lawyers, returning veterans and ordinary citizens, murderer and victim - into the broader history of Latinos in America during a time of extraordinary change.

At the end of the American Revolution, thousands of African-American slaves risked everything to fight for the British in exchange for a promise of freedom. John Clarkson, a young Royal Navy lieutenant, was sent to North America by British abolitionists to fulfill that promise. According to plan, each slave would be resettled in Nova Scotia. However, when that frigid, rocky terrain proved inhospitable to those who had worked the cotton fields of the Deep South, Clarkson arranged for them to be transported across the Atlantic to Sierra Leone. Using journals, diaries and autobiographical accounts, writer-narrator Simon Schama (SIMON SCHAMA'S POWER OF ART) reconstructs this epic journey. Gripping dramatizations transport viewers from the slave plantations of Georgia to the bone-chilling cold of Nova Scotia to the trim parlors of Georgian England and finally to sweltering Sierra Leone, where Clarkson's dreams of a haven for former slaves would come to a tragic end.

"Signpost to Freedom: The 1953 Baton Rouge Bus Boycott" tells the story of the nation's first large-scale boycott challenging segregation. In 1953, led by a handful of determined young men and women, the African American citizens of Louisiana's capital city led a quiet revolt. A year before the U.S. Supreme Court struck down public school segregation and nearly three years before the famous bus boycott in Montgomery, black citizens refused to ride city buses. In just eight days, they brought the city's bus system to the brink of bankruptcy. Word of the successful action spread like wildfire, influencing others like Rosa Parks and Martin Luther King Jr. In years to come, lessons about the boycott's success and failures would provide momentum for the social revolution igniting throughout the South.

In a life that inspired controversy, no one disputes the place that Jerome Robbins holds as the preeminent director/choreographer of American musical theater. He transformed Broadway with shows such as "West Side Story," "Gypsy" and "Fiddler on the Roof" and he forged a career in ballet, first at American Ballet Theatre, then at New York City Ballet. This son of an immigrant deli owner was known for his often ruthless perfectionism and was dogged by his decision in 1953 to name names in his House Committee on Un-American Activities testimony. He was, nevertheless, universally respected for his unparalleled artistry. The program features excerpts from Robbins' work, including never-before-seen rehearsal footage, and interviews with many of his colleagues, both from ballet and Broadway, such as Mikhail Baryshnikov, Suzanne Farrell, and Chita Rivera.

As the War in Iraq continues, the first measures of its psychological toll are coming in. A medical study estimates that more than one in seven returning veterans are expected to suffer from major depression, anxiety, or post traumatic stress disorder (PTSD). For those who have survived the fighting, the battle is not over. For some, the return home can be as painful as war itself. FRONTLINE tells the stories of soldiers who have come home haunted by their experiences and asks whether the government is doing enough to help.

"Signpost to Freedom: The 1953 Baton Rouge Bus Boycott" tells the story of the nation's first large-scale boycott challenging segregation. In 1953, led by a handful of determined young men and women, the African American citizens of Louisiana's capital city led a quiet revolt. A year before the U.S. Supreme Court struck down public school segregation and nearly three years before the famous bus boycott in Montgomery, black citizens refused to ride city buses. In just eight days, they brought the city's bus system to the brink of bankruptcy. Word of the successful action spread like wildfire, influencing others like Rosa Parks and Martin Luther King Jr. In years to come, lessons about the boycott's success and failures would provide momentum for the social revolution igniting throughout the South.

Saving the banks, the auto industry, your homes, and your paychecks - the choices and the president's plan tonight on "Washington Week." From bad to worse. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I just want to make this clear. This plan will not save every home." But what can government do? Larry Summers, head of the White House's National Economic Council, said, "The key part of this program is an effort to stop what is a vicious cycle that is incredibly destructive." Everyone's lining up for a piece of the trillion-dollar pie: mortgagers and mortgagees, employers and the unemployed. Can President Obama turn the economy around? Pres. Obama said, "The American people are watching. They need this plan to work." If so, what ripple effect will be felt around the world? Director of National Intelligence Dennis Blair said, "Economic crises increase the risk of regime-threatening instability if they are prolonged for a one to two-year period." And a bunch of the world is unstable. Chief U.S. concerns - Afghanistan, Pakistan, and Iran. Covering the week: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

President Obama is biting an awful lot, but is it more than he can chew? We tackle that tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I want every American to know this: we will rebuild. We will recover. And the United States of America will emerge stronger than before." Obama also said, "Let me say this as plainly as I can: by August 31st, 2010, our combat mission in Iraq will end." Obama also said, "This budget is an honest accounting of where we are and where we intend to go." The president piled a lot more on his plate this week, but how to turn those promises into policy? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "The era of big government is back and Democrats are asking you to pay for it." By any measure, the president is asking for a lot. Now comes the hard part. We take it all apart with the reporters covering the first month of the new administration: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

Long ago in the age of dinosaurs, a volcano in eastern China erupted and buried a host of strange creatures in ash, creating exquisite fossils that preserved a big surprise - many dinosaurs were covered in feathers. In "The Four-Winged Dinosaur," NOVA investigates the most bizarre of these feathered dinosaurs, which has rekindled a fierce, decades-long debate over the origin of bird flight. The central character in this drama is a strange little dinosaur with wings on its legs as well as its arms. The pigeon-sized Microraptor is the smallest adult dinosaur ever found, perhaps the first known tree-dweller. But could it really fly? NOVA assembles a team of top paleontologists, aeronautical engineers, and paleo-artists to reconstruct Microraptor and build a sophisticated model for a wind tunnel experiment. The results have surprising implications for long-accepted ideas about how winged flight began.

"Signpost to Freedom: The 1953 Baton Rouge Bus Boycott" tells the story of the nation's first large-scale boycott challenging segregation. In 1953, led by a handful of determined young men and women, the African American citizens of Louisiana's capital city led a quiet revolt. A year before the U.S. Supreme Court struck down public school segregation and nearly three years before the famous bus boycott in Montgomery, black citizens refused to ride city buses. In just eight days, they brought the city's bus system to the brink of bankruptcy. Word of the successful action spread like wildfire, influencing others like Rosa Parks and Martin Luther King Jr. In years to come, lessons about the boycott's success and failures would provide momentum for the social revolution igniting throughout the South.

Saving the banks, the auto industry, your homes, and your paychecks - the choices and the president's plan tonight on "Washington Week." From bad to worse. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I just want to make this clear. This plan will not save every home." But what can government do? Larry Summers, head of the White House's National Economic Council, said, "The key part of this program is an effort to stop what is a vicious cycle that is incredibly destructive." Everyone's lining up for a piece of the trillion-dollar pie: mortgagors and mortgagees, employers and the unemployed. Can President Obama turn the economy around? Pres. Obama said, "The American people are watching. They need this plan to work." If so, what ripple effect will be felt around the world? Director of National Intelligence Dennis Blair said, "Economic crises increase the risk of regime-threatening instability if they are prolonged for a one to two-year period." And a bunch of the world is unstable. Chief U.S. concerns - Afghanistan, Pakistan, and Iran. At the end of the American Revolution, thousands of African-American slaves risked everything to fight for the British in exchange for a promise of freedom. John Clarkson, a young Royal Navy lieutenant, was sent to North America by British abolitionists to fulfill that promise. According to plan, each slave would be resettled in Nova Scotia. However, when that frigid, rocky terrain proved inhospitable to those who had worked the cotton fields of the Deep South, Clarkson arranged for them to be transported across the Atlantic to Sierra Leone. Using journals, diaries and autobiographical accounts, writer-narrator Simon Schama (SIMON SCHAMA'S POWER OF ART) reconstructs this epic journey. Gripping dramatizations transport viewers from the slave plantations of Georgia to the bone-chilling cold of Nova Scotia to the trim parlors of Georgian England and finally to sweltering Sierra Leone, where Clarkson's dreams of a haven for former slaves would come to a tragic end.

President Obama is biting an awful lot, but is it more than he can chew? We tackle that tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I want every American to know this: we will rebuild. We will recover. And the United States of America will emerge stronger than before." Obama also said, "Let me say this as plainly as I can: by August 31st, 2010, our combat mission in Iraq will end." Obama also said, "This budget is an honest accounting of where we are and where we intend to go." The president piled a lot more on his plate this week, but how to turn those promises into policy? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "The era of big government is back and Democrats are asking you to pay for it." By any measure, the president is asking for a lot. Now comes the hard part. We take it all apart with the reporters covering the first month of the new administration: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

How could a struggle over land lead to the brutal murder of an American nun? This week, David Brancaccio interviews award-winning filmmaker Daniel Junge on his latest film "They Killed Sister Dorothy." The documentary focuses on Sister Dorothy Stang, a Catholic nun from Dayton, Ohio, who in 2005 was killed on a muddy road in the Brazilian Amazon she worked tirelessly to save. But it's also the story of peasant farmers hoping to preserve their way of life in the face of powerful industry interests. Who will dare stand up in the battle between the haves and the have nots, and will our world's ecosystem pay the biggest price? "Peasant people...don't have a chance to share in the riches that the planet can offer because some people are taking off so much of the pleasures of this world, and there's only so much to go around," Sister Dorothy said before her death.

How could a struggle over land lead to the brutal murder of an American nun? This week, David Brancaccio interviews award-winning filmmaker Daniel Junge on his latest film "They Killed Sister Dorothy." The documentary focuses on Sister Dorothy Stang, a Catholic nun from Dayton, Ohio, who in 2005 was killed on a muddy road in the Brazilian Amazon she worked tirelessly to save. But it's also the story of peasant farmers hoping to preserve their way of life in the face of powerful industry interests. Who will dare stand up in the battle between the haves and the have nots, and will our world's ecosystem pay the biggest price? "Peasant people...don't have a chance to share in the riches that the planet can offer because some people are taking off so much of the pleasures of this world, and there's only so much to go around," Sister Dorothy said before her death.

Blue chips are down, the jobless rate is up - and we haven't even gotten to health care yet - plus the political follies tonight on "Washington Week." Is there any good news? Pres. Barack Obama said, "We dug a very deep hole for ourselves." The nation's biggest manufacturers, banks, and retailers are struggling. And 651,000 Americans lost their jobs just last month. So what's the solution? Fed. Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "Over time, a number of factors should promote the return of solid gains in economic activity in the context of low and stable inflation." Really? And will those factors allow the president to pick health care too? Pres. Obama said, "Health care reform is no longer just a moral imperative. It's a fiscal imperative." Why staying healthy costs so much and why just having insurance may not be the answer, plus at Republican national headquarters, who's the boss - Michael Steele? Michael Steele said, "I'm the de facto leader of the Republican Party." Rush Limbaugh? Rush Limbaugh said, "President Obama, your agenda is not new. It's not changed and it's not hope." And why is this man rooting for Limbaugh. Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "He is the voice and the intellectual force and energy behind the Republican Party." Covering the week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and James Barnes of National Journal.

How big are the nation's problems and how elusive are the solutions tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "We're going to be out of this recession or you'll have somebody else speaking to you in 2013." Easier said than done - fixing the banks, expanding health care, calming Wall Street, stimulating the economy. How to get it all done, especially when the problem may be bigger than it even looks? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "The economy continues to move in the wrong direction." And can government spending be tamed? Pres. Obama said, "I am signing an imperfect omnibus bill because it's necessary for the ongoing functions of government and we have a lot more work to do." Sen. Jeff Flake (R-AZ) said, "This gives voice to St. Augustine's lament - give me sobriety, but not yet." As the markets reel and Americans worry, what's a president to do? Covering the week John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Michael Viqueira of NBC News.

How could a struggle over land lead to the brutal murder of an American nun? This week, David Brancaccio interviews award-winning filmmaker Daniel Junge on his latest film "They Killed Sister Dorothy." The documentary focuses on Sister Dorothy Stang, a Catholic nun from Dayton, Ohio, who in 2005 was killed on a muddy road in the Brazilian Amazon she worked tirelessly to save. But it's also the story of peasant farmers hoping to preserve their way of life in the face of powerful industry interests. Who will dare stand up in the battle between the haves and the have nots, and will our world's ecosystem pay the biggest price? "Peasant people...don't have a chance to share in the riches that the planet can offer because some people are taking off so much of the pleasures of this world, and there's only so much to go around," Sister Dorothy said before her death.

Blue chips are down, the jobless rate is up - and we haven't even gotten to health care yet - plus the political follies tonight on "Washington Week." Is there any good news? Pres. Barack Obama said, "We dug a very deep hole for ourselves." The nation's biggest manufacturers, banks, and retailers are struggling. And 651,000 Americans lost their jobs just last month. So what's the solution? Fed. Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "Over time, a number of factors should promote the return of solid gains in economic activity in the context of low and stable inflation." Really? And will those factors allow the president to pick health care too? Pres. Obama said, "Health care reform is no longer just a moral imperative. It's a fiscal imperative." Why staying healthy costs so much and why just having insurance may not be the answer, plus at Republican national headquarters, who's the boss - Michael Steele? Michael Steele said, "I'm the de facto leader of the Republican Party." Rush Limbaugh? Rush Limbaugh said, "President Obama, your agenda is not new. It's not changed and it's not hope." And why is this man rooting for Limbaugh. Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "He is the voice and the intellectual force and energy behind the Republican Party." How big are the nation's problems and how elusive are the solutions tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "We're going to be out of this recession or you'll have somebody else speaking to you in 2013." Easier said than done - fixing the banks, expanding health care, calming Wall Street, stimulating the economy. How to get it all done, especially when the problem may be bigger than it even looks? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "The economy continues to move in the wrong direction." And can government spending be tamed? Pres. Obama said, "I am signing an imperfect omnibus bill because it's necessary for the ongoing functions of government and we have a lot more work to do." Sen. Jeff Flake (R-AZ) said, "This gives voice to St. Augustine's lament - give me sobriety, but not yet." As the markets reel and Americans worry, what's a president to do? Covering the week John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Michael Viqueira of NBC News.

Blue chips are down, the jobless rate is up - and we haven't even gotten to health care yet - plus the political follies tonight on "Washington Week." Is there any good news? Pres. Barack Obama said, "We dug a very deep hole for ourselves." The nation's biggest manufacturers, banks, and retailers are struggling. And 651,000 Americans lost their jobs just last month. So what's the solution? Fed. Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "Over time, a number of factors should promote the return of solid gains in economic activity in the context of low and stable inflation." Really? And will those factors allow the president to pick health care too? Pres. Obama said, "Health care reform is no longer just a moral imperative. It's a fiscal imperative." Why staying healthy costs so much and why just having insurance may not be the answer, plus at Republican national headquarters, who's the boss - Michael Steele? Michael Steele said, "I'm the de facto leader of the Republican Party." Rush Limbaugh? Rush Limbaugh said, "President Obama, your agenda is not new. It's not changed and it's not hope." And why is this man rooting for Limbaugh. Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "He is the voice and the intellectual force and energy behind the Republican Party." Covering the week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and James Barnes of National Journal.

How big are the nation's problems and how elusive are the solutions tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "We're going to be out of this recession or you'll have somebody else speaking to you in 2013." Easier said than done - fixing the banks, expanding health care, calming Wall Street, stimulating the economy. How to get it all done, especially when the problem may be bigger than it even looks? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "The economy continues to move in the wrong direction." And can government spending be tamed? Pres. Obama said, "I am signing an imperfect omnibus bill because it's necessary for the ongoing functions of government and we have a lot more work to do." Sen. Jeff Flake (R-AZ) said, "This gives voice to St. Augustine's lament - give me sobriety, but not yet." As the markets reel and Americans worry, what's a president to do? Covering the week John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Michael Viqueira of NBC News.

The world's economic superpowers are preparing to meet - will they devise a fix for the financial mess? On March 13, financial ministers and central bankers of the world's economic superpowers will meet in London to lay the groundwork for next month's crucial meeting of their country's leaders, known as the G20. Will their work revolutionize the global economy and lift us out of this economic hole, or will politics get in the way? David Brancaccio interviews Kenneth Rogoff, Harvard economics professor and former chief economist of the International Monetary Fund, about how high we should raise our hopes and what's at stake for America and the world.

Blue chips are down, the jobless rate is up - and we haven't even gotten to health care yet - plus the political follies tonight on "Washington Week." Is there any good news? Pres. Barack Obama said, "We dug a very deep hole for ourselves." The nation's biggest manufacturers, banks, and retailers are struggling. And 651,000 Americans lost their jobs just last month. So what's the solution? Fed. Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "Over time, a number of factors should promote the return of solid gains in economic activity in the context of low and stable inflation." Really? And will those factors allow the president to pick health care too? Pres. Obama said, "Health care reform is no longer just a moral imperative. It's a fiscal imperative." Why staying healthy costs so much and why just having insurance may not be the answer, plus at Republican national headquarters, who's the boss - Michael Steele? Michael Steele said, "I'm the de facto leader of the Republican Party." Rush Limbaugh? Rush Limbaugh said, "President Obama, your agenda is not new. It's not changed and it's not hope." And why is this man rooting for Limbaugh. Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "He is the voice and the intellectual force and energy behind the Republican Party." Covering the week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and James Barnes of National Journal.

How big are the nation's problems and how elusive are the solutions tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "We're going to be out of this recession or you'll have somebody else speaking to you in 2013." Easier said than done - fixing the banks, expanding health care, calming Wall Street, stimulating the economy. How to get it all done, especially when the problem may be bigger than it even looks? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "The economy continues to move in the wrong direction." And can government spending be tamed? Pres. Obama said, "I am signing an imperfect omnibus bill because it's necessary for the ongoing functions of government and we have a lot more work to do." Sen. Jeff Flake (R-AZ) said, "This gives voice to St. Augustine's lament - give me sobriety, but not yet." As the markets reel and Americans worry, what's a president to do? Covering the week John Dickerson of Slate Magazine, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Michael Viqueira of NBC News.

How could a struggle over land lead to the brutal murder of an American nun? This week, David Brancaccio interviews award-winning filmmaker Daniel Junge on his latest film "They Killed Sister Dorothy." The documentary focuses on Sister Dorothy Stang, a Catholic nun from Dayton, Ohio, who in 2005 was killed on a muddy road in the Brazilian Amazon she worked tirelessly to save. But it's also the story of peasant farmers hoping to preserve their way of life in the face of powerful industry interests. Who will dare stand up in the battle between the haves and the have nots, and will our world's ecosystem pay the biggest price? "Peasant people...don't have a chance to share in the riches that the planet can offer because some people are taking off so much of the pleasures of this world, and there's only so much to go around," Sister Dorothy said before her death.

What if all the outrage over those AIG bonuses is just the tip of the iceberg? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The country is angry. Individual Americans are angry. I am angry." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We don't want 90 percent of it back. We want all of the money back." Rep. Jeb Hensarling (R-TX) said, "What AIG does with their money is their business. What they do with taxpayer money is our business." Pres. Barack Obama said, "People are right to be angry. I'm angry." But is everybody upset about the right things - bonuses, blame, and blowups. But what's the bigger challenge - $165 million in bonuses or trillions of dollars in bailouts and projected deficits. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "We have got to demonstrate to the American public that we can husband their money and their investments in a way that in fact makes sense to them." But in this climate, how? Covering the week, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Pierre Thomas of ABC News.

Losing your job is a blow not just to your income, but also to your health insurance. Many can't afford high COBRA premiums, much less private insurance. And the sputtering economy is making a bad situation tragic. NOW travels to Nevada, where a huge budget deficit, spiking unemployment, and cuts in Medicaid and other public services are forcing people to gamble with their own lives. Recently, the only public hospital in Las Vegas had to shut its doors to cancer patients and pregnant women. Should the government be helping out? NOW shares the human stories behind the distressing numbers, and investigates possible solutions and responses with insight from Dr. Howard Dean, former Vermont governor and chairman of the Democratic National Committee. With the economic disaster blowing holes in society's health care safety net, who's left to catch our fall?

When Elizabeth Arden and Helena Rubinstein started their businesses 100 years ago, makeup was worn mostly by prostitutes and performers, and businesses were run mostly by men. In a legendary 50-year rivalry, these two women changed that and transformed us. This program is based on the book "War Paint: Madame Helena Rubinstein & Miss Elizabeth Arden - Their Lives, Their Times, Their Rivalry by Lindy Woodhead." Jane Alexander narrates.

What if all the outrage over those AIG bonuses is just the tip of the iceberg? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The country is angry. Individual Americans are angry. I am angry." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We don't want 90 percent of it back. We want all of the money back." Rep. Jeb Hensarling (R-TX) said, "What AIG does with their money is their business. What they do with taxpayer money is our business." Pres. Barack Obama said, "People are right to be angry. I'm angry." But is everybody upset about the right things - bonuses, blame, and blowups. But what's the bigger challenge - $165 million in bonuses or trillions of dollars in bailouts and projected deficits. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "We have got to demonstrate to the American public that we can husband their money and their investments in a way that in fact makes sense to them." But in this climate, how? Covering the week, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Pierre Thomas of ABC News.

Losing your job is a blow not just to your income, but also to your health insurance. Many can't afford high COBRA premiums, much less private insurance. And the sputtering economy is making a bad situation tragic. NOW travels to Nevada, where a huge budget deficit, spiking unemployment, and cuts in Medicaid and other public services are forcing people to gamble with their own lives. Recently, the only public hospital in Las Vegas had to shut its doors to cancer patients and pregnant women. Should the government be helping out? NOW shares the human stories behind the distressing numbers, and investigates possible solutions and responses with insight from Dr. Howard Dean, former Vermont governor and chairman of the Democratic National Committee. With the economic disaster blowing holes in society's health care safety net, who's left to catch our fall?

What if all the outrage over those AIG bonuses is just the tip of the iceberg? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The country is angry. Individual Americans are angry. I am angry." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We don't want 90 percent of it back. We want all of the money back." Rep. Jeb Hensarling (R-TX) said, "What AIG does with their money is their business. What they do with taxpayer money is our business." Pres. Barack Obama said, "People are right to be angry. I'm angry." But is everybody upset about the right things - bonuses, blame, and blowups. But what's the bigger challenge - $165 million in bonuses or trillions of dollars in bailouts and projected deficits. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "We have got to demonstrate to the American public that we can husband their money and their investments in a way that in fact makes sense to them." But in this climate, how? Covering the week, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Pierre Thomas of ABC News.

On November 17, 1978, Congressman Leo Ryan traveled to an isolated rainforest in Guyana to investigate the concerns of his San Francisco-area constituents. Their alarming stories focused on a jungle compound known as Jonestown, a group called the Peoples Temple and its leader, Jim Jones. According to news filtering back to America, U.S. citizens were being held against their will in prison camp conditions. There were allegations of physical and sexual abuse and even rumors of a planned mass suicide. Congressman Ryan, an impassioned human rights advocate, decided to get the facts for himself. Within 48 hours, Ryan, Jones and more than 900 Jonestown settlers were dead - casualties of the largest mass murder-suicide in history. In the next few days, grisly details of cyanide-laced fruit punch and disturbing images of children poisoned by their parents emerged from the jungle. AMERICAN EXPERIENCE goes beyond the salacious headlines to provide a revealing portrait of Jones, his followers and the times that produced the calamity in the Guyanese jungle, told by the people who know the story firsthand: Jonestown survivors, Temple defectors, relatives of the dead and journalists.

This program is a behind-the-scenes preview of the five-part Native American history series, WE SHALL REMAIN. The series shows how Native peoples valiantly resisted expulsion from their lands and fought the extinction of their culture -- from the Wampanoags of New England in the 1600s who used their alliance with the English to weaken rival tribes, to the bold new leaders of the 1970s who harnessed the momentum of the civil rights movement to forge a pan-Indian identity. WE SHALL REMAIN represents an unprecedented collaboration between Native and non-Native filmmakers and involves Native advisors and scholars at all levels of the project.

As the worsening economy leads to massive job losses - potentially increasing the ranks of the tens of millions of Americans without health insurance - FRONTLINE travels the country examining the nation's broken healthcare system and exploring the need for a fundamental overhaul. The scale of the problem now facing the Obama administration, FRONTLINE finds, is staggering, as layoffs, major illness and other unexpected life changes leave more and more Americans uninsured, underinsured or uninsurable. FRONTLINE also goes inside insurance companies to question executives on their policies, programs and priorities and examines the problems in one state's attempts at healthcare reform.

Budgets, banking, and new battles in Afghanistan - President Obama rolls the dice. We explain the hows and the whys tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The safety of people around the world is at stake." An abrupt reminder today that the nation is still at war as the president commits thousands more troops to the war in Afghanistan and links it firmly to uncertainty in neighboring Pakistan. Pres. Obama said, "For the American people this border region has become the most dangerous place in the world." On the domestic side, the battlefield remains the economy. Whether it's over the president's budget blueprint - Rep. Paul Ryan (R-WI) said, "I'm asking you. Join us to stop this fiscal train wreck." - or the financial system. Chairman of the Federal Reserve Ben Bernanke said, "We simply weren't adequately prepared for a crisis of this magnitude." From "60 Minutes," journalist Steve Kroft asked "So have you gotten into a routine?" Pres. Obama said, "I have." To a primetime news conference, to the web, to Univision - Pres. Obama said, "Buenos noches." - the president undertakes a full frontal media assault to defend his priorities. Covering the week: James Kitfield of National Journal, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine.

One of the most controversial figures in the illegal immigration debate is Joe Arpaio, the longtime Sheriff of Arizona's Maricopa County, whose aggressive hard line on local crime has received national attention. But has Sheriff Arpaio, who's made the most of federally-granted authority to enforce immigration laws, crossed the line when it comes to serving and protecting his community? Some critics have accused him of racial profiling. This week, our colleagues at "Exposé" and local reporters from the East Valley Tribune reveal what Sheriff Arpaio was-and wasn't-doing in the name of law enforcement. In a special bonus interview, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with Joe Arpaio for an intense discussion about the issues and criticism swirling around him. Watch more of that interview with Sheriff Arpaio. Also, see how two New Jersey mayors deal with undocumented immigrants in their communities using sharply different - and politically surprising - approaches in NOW: "Immigration on Main Street."

On November 17, 1978, Congressman Leo Ryan traveled to an isolated rainforest in Guyana to investigate the concerns of his San Francisco-area constituents. Their alarming stories focused on a jungle compound known as Jonestown, a group called the Peoples Temple and its leader, Jim Jones. According to news filtering back to America, U.S. citizens were being held against their will in prison camp conditions. There were allegations of physical and sexual abuse and even rumors of a planned mass suicide. Congressman Ryan, an impassioned human rights advocate, decided to get the facts for himself. Within 48 hours, Ryan, Jones and more than 900 Jonestown settlers were dead - casualties of the largest mass murder-suicide in history. In the next few days, grisly details of cyanide-laced fruit punch and disturbing images of children poisoned by their parents emerged from the jungle. AMERICAN EXPERIENCE goes beyond the salacious headlines to provide a revealing portrait of Jones, his followers and the times that produced the calamity in the Guyanese jungle, told by the people who know the story firsthand: Jonestown survivors, Temple defectors, relatives of the dead and journalists.

This program is a behind-the-scenes preview of the five-part Native American history series, WE SHALL REMAIN. The series shows how Native peoples valiantly resisted expulsion from their lands and fought the extinction of their culture -- from the Wampanoags of New England in the 1600s who used their alliance with the English to weaken rival tribes, to the bold new leaders of the 1970s who harnessed the momentum of the civil rights movement to forge a pan-Indian identity. WE SHALL REMAIN represents an unprecedented collaboration between Native and non-Native filmmakers and involves Native advisors and scholars at all levels of the project.

Budgets, banking, and new battles in Afghanistan - President Obama rolls the dice. We explain the hows and the whys tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The safety of people around the world is at stake." An abrupt reminder today that the nation is still at war as the president commits thousands more troops to the war in Afghanistan and links it firmly to uncertainty in neighboring Pakistan. Pres. Obama said, "For the American people this border region has become the most dangerous place in the world." On the domestic side, the battlefield remains the economy. Whether it's over the president's budget blueprint - Rep. Paul Ryan (R-WI) said, "I'm asking you. Join us to stop this fiscal train wreck." - or the financial system. Chairman of the Federal Reserve Ben Bernanke said, "We simply weren't adequately prepared for a crisis of this magnitude." From "60 Minutes," journalist Steve Kroft asked "So have you gotten into a routine?" Pres. Obama said, "I have." To a primetime news conference, to the web, to Univision - Pres. Obama said, "Buenos noches." - the president undertakes a full frontal media assault to defend his priorities. Covering the week: James Kitfield of National Journal, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine.

Kilauea, on Hawaii's Big Island, is the world's most active volcano. Its latest eruption began in 1983 and it hasn't stopped since. Since that time, it has created 544 acres of new land and consumed 200 homes. But as we watch nature's own fireworks display and witness the devastation wrought by flowing lava, we've also been able to observe a process that's central to life on these islands. The most spectacular moment of creation is when lava pours into the ocean creating new land; it is here that filmmaker Paul Atkins finds himself getting a shot few have ever filmed - the cataclysmic meeting of 2,000-degree lava and 75-degree ocean water - a sight to behold.

In May 2008, a scientific team made worldwide headlines by announcing evidence of a previously unsuspected impact from space that had devastated prehistoric North America at the end of the last Ice Age. According to this controversial new claim, the extinction of more than 34 types of large prehistoric animals (or "megafauna") was caused not by climate change or the arrival of the first human hunters, but by the massive breakup of a comet over the Great Lakes region. NOVA explores this provocative new theory about what killed off America's mammoths and may have come close to extinguishing early human populations as well.

One of the most controversial figures in the illegal immigration debate is Joe Arpaio, the longtime Sheriff of Arizona's Maricopa County, whose aggressive hard line on local crime has received national attention. But has Sheriff Arpaio, who's made the most of federally-granted authority to enforce immigration laws, crossed the line when it comes to serving and protecting his community? Some critics have accused him of racial profiling. This week, our colleagues at "Exposé" and local reporters from the East Valley Tribune reveal what Sheriff Arpaio was-and wasn't-doing in the name of law enforcement. In a special bonus interview, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with Joe Arpaio for an intense discussion about the issues and criticism swirling around him. Watch more of that interview with Sheriff Arpaio. Also, see how two New Jersey mayors deal with undocumented immigrants in their communities using sharply different - and politically surprising - approaches in NOW: "Immigration on Main Street."

Budgets, banking, and new battles in Afghanistan - President Obama rolls the dice. We explain the hows and the whys tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The safety of people around the world is at stake." An abrupt reminder today that the nation is still at war as the president commits thousands more troops to the war in Afghanistan and links it firmly to uncertainty in neighboring Pakistan. Pres. Obama said, "For the American people this border region has become the most dangerous place in the world." On the domestic side, the battlefront remains the economy. Whether it's over the president's budget blueprint - Rep. Paul Ryan (R-WI) said, "I'm asking you. Join us to stop this fiscal train wreck." - or the financial system. Chairman of the Federal Reserve Ben Bernanke said, "We simply weren't adequately prepared for a crisis of this magnitude." From "60 Minutes," journalist Steve Kroft asked "So have you gotten into a routine?" Pres. Obama said, "I have." To a primetime news conference, to the web, to Univision - Pres. Obama said, "Buenos noches." - the president undertakes a full frontal media assault to defend his priorities. Covering the week: James Kitfield of National Journal, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine.

This program is a behind-the-scenes preview of the five-part Native American history series, WE SHALL REMAIN. The series shows how Native peoples valiantly resisted expulsion from their lands and fought the extinction of their culture -- from the Wampanoags of New England in the 1600s who used their alliance with the English to weaken rival tribes, to the bold new leaders of the 1970s who harnessed the momentum of the civil rights movement to forge a pan-Indian identity. WE SHALL REMAIN represents an unprecedented collaboration between Native and non-Native filmmakers and involves Native advisors and scholars at all levels of the project.

One of the most controversial figures in the illegal immigration debate is Joe Arpaio, the longtime Sheriff of Arizona's Maricopa County, whose aggressive hard line on local crime has received national attention. But has Sheriff Arpaio, who's made the most of federally-granted authority to enforce immigration laws, crossed the line when it comes to serving and protecting his community? Some critics have accused him of racial profiling. This week, our colleagues at "Exposé" and local reporters from the East Valley Tribune reveal what Sheriff Arpaio was-and wasn't-doing in the name of law enforcement. In a special bonus interview, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with Joe Arpaio for an intense discussion about the issues and criticism swirling around him. Watch more of that interview with Sheriff Arpaio. Also, see how two New Jersey mayors deal with undocumented immigrants in their communities using sharply different - and politically surprising - approaches in NOW: "Immigration on Main Street."

Budgets, banking, and new battles in Afghanistan - President Obama rolls the dice. We explain the hows and the whys tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The safety of people around the world is at stake." An abrupt reminder today that the nation is still at war as the president commits thousands more troops to the war in Afghanistan and links it firmly to uncertainty in neighboring Pakistan. Pres. Obama said, "For the American people this border region has become the most dangerous place in the world." On the domestic side, the battlefield remains the economy. Whether it's over the president's budget blueprint - Rep. Paul Ryan (R-WI) said, "I'm asking you. Join us to stop this fiscal train wreck." - or the financial system. Chairman of the Federal Reserve Ben Bernanke said, "We simply weren't adequately prepared for a crisis of this magnitude." From "60 Minutes," journalist Steve Kroft asked "So have you gotten into a routine?" Pres. Obama said, "I have." To a primetime news conference, to the web, to Univision - Pres. Obama said, "Buenos noches." - the president undertakes a full frontal media assault to defend his priorities. Covering the week: James Kitfield of National Journal, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine.

On November 17, 1978, Congressman Leo Ryan traveled to an isolated rainforest in Guyana to investigate the concerns of his San Francisco-area constituents. Their alarming stories focused on a jungle compound known as Jonestown, a group called the Peoples Temple and its leader, Jim Jones. According to news filtering back to America, U.S. citizens were being held against their will in prison camp conditions. There were allegations of physical and sexual abuse and even rumors of a planned mass suicide. Congressman Ryan, an impassioned human rights advocate, decided to get the facts for himself. Within 48 hours, Ryan, Jones and more than 900 Jonestown settlers were dead - casualties of the largest mass murder-suicide in history. In the next few days, grisly details of cyanide-laced fruit punch and disturbing images of children poisoned by their parents emerged from the jungle. AMERICAN EXPERIENCE goes beyond the salacious headlines to provide a revealing portrait of Jones, his followers and the times that produced the calamity in the Guyanese jungle, told by the people who know the story firsthand: Jonestown survivors, Temple defectors, relatives of the dead and journalists.

In May 2008, a scientific team made worldwide headlines by announcing evidence of a previously unsuspected impact from space that had devastated prehistoric North America at the end of the last Ice Age. According to this controversial new claim, the extinction of more than 34 types of large prehistoric animals (or "megafauna") was caused not by climate change or the arrival of the first human hunters, but by the massive breakup of a comet over the Great Lakes region. NOVA explores this provocative new theory about what killed off America's mammoths and may have come close to extinguishing early human populations as well.

An abrupt reminder today that the nation is still at war as the president commits thousands more troops to the war in Afghanistan and links it firmly to uncertainty in neighboring Pakistan. Pres. Obama said, "For the American people this border region has become the most dangerous place in the world." On the domestic side, the battlefield remains the economy. Whether it's over the president's budget blueprint - Rep. Paul Ryan (R-WI) said, "I'm asking you. Join us to stop this fiscal train wreck." - or the financial system. Chairman of the Federal Reserve Ben Bernanke said, "We simply weren't adequately prepared for a crisis of this magnitude." From "60 Minutes," journalist Steve Kroft asked "So have you gotten into a routine?" Pres. Obama said, "I have." To a primetime news conference, to the web, to Univision - Pres. Obama said, "Buenos noches." - the president undertakes a full frontal media assault to defend his priorities. Covering the week: James Kitfield of National Journal, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine.

FRONTLINE investigative correspondent Lowell Bergman examines the shadowy world of international bribery. The story reveals how multi-national companies create slush funds, set up front companies, and make secret payments, all to get billions in business. But these practices are facing a new international crackdown, led by prosecutors at the U.S. Department of Justice and allies abroad. At the center of this is a controversial, ongoing investigation into the British-based multi-national BAE Systems and allegations about billion dollar bribes.

Americans are addicted to coal - it powers half of all our electricity, and is both plentiful and cheap. In fact, some call America the "Saudi Arabia of Coal." But are we paying too high an environmental price for all this cheap energy? With carbon emissions caps high on the Obama Administration's agenda, coal is in the crosshairs of the energy debate. This week, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels to Wyoming to take a hard look at the coal industry there and its case that it can produce "clean coal" - coal that can be burned without releasing carbon into the atmosphere. President Obama has been outspoken in his support for "clean coal" technology, but some say the whole concept is more of a public relations campaign than an energy solution. As part of the report, Hinojosa talks with Wyoming Governor Dave Freudenthal and Jeff Goodell, the author of "Big Coal," who says that carbon dioxide emissions generated from coal contribute to global warming. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed? Thousands of U.S. troops are getting discharged out of the Army. Many suffer from post traumatic stress disorders and brain injuries, and haven't been getting the care they need. The Army's been claiming these discharged soldiers had pre-existing mental illnesses. But health advocates say these are wrongful discharges, a way for the army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment to which they're entitled. NOW covered this issue last summer, and this week we revisit the Army's controversial position and follow up with affected soldiers we met. As a result of the media attention from our report and others, the Department of Defense revised its criteria for diagnosing pre-existing conditions and, now, fewer soldiers are receiving the diagnosis, making more of them eligible for care. This is an update to the NOW investigation "Fighting the Army." Also this week, we update how the distant Pacific nation of Kiribati is dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth due to global warming. Kiribati President Anote Tong is now considering purchasing land abroad to save his people. He says his pleas for international support have largely fallen on deaf ears. Experts predict millions of people will become climate change refugees in the years to come. This is an update to the show "Paradise Lost."

Over the past 21 years, NOVA has followed a group of seven doctors from their first day at Harvard Medical School in 1987. All young, bright and accomplished, none of them could have predicted what it would take, personally and professionally, to become a member of the medical tribe. NOVA's cameras have been there through the difficult years of classes and clinical training, internship and residency, marriage and divorce -- documenting the trials and tribulations as these individuals struggled to become doctors and to balance time at work and at home. Candid in-depth interviews have given viewers a real sense of what each person has to deal with day in and day out since he or she made the decision to practice medicine. In this special two-part program, NOVA returns one last time to get an update on the kind of doctors -- and people -- they have become. Part 1 of 2.

Americans are addicted to coal - it powers half of all our electricity, and is both plentiful and cheap. In fact, some call America the "Saudi Arabia of Coal." But are we paying too high an environmental price for all this cheap energy? With carbon emissions caps high on the Obama Administration's agenda, coal is in the crosshairs of the energy debate. This week, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels to Wyoming to take a hard look at the coal industry there and its case that it can produce "clean coal" - coal that can be burned without releasing carbon into the atmosphere. President Obama has been outspoken in his support for "clean coal" technology, but some say the whole concept is more of a public relations campaign than an energy solution. As part of the report, Hinojosa talks with Wyoming Governor Dave Freudenthal and Jeff Goodell, the author of "Big Coal," who says that carbon dioxide emissions generated from coal contribute to global warming. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

Kilauea, on Hawaii's Big Island, is the world's most active volcano. Its latest eruption began in 1983 and it hasn't stopped since. Since that time, it has created 544 acres of new land and consumed 200 homes. But as we watch nature's own fireworks display and witness the devastation wrought by flowing lava, we've also been able to observe a process that's central to life on these islands. The most spectacular moment of creation is when lava pours into the ocean creating new land; it is here that filmmaker Paul Atkins finds himself getting a shot few have ever filmed -- the cataclysmic meeting of 2,000-degree lava and 75-degree ocean water -- a sight to behold.

Thousands of U.S. troops are getting discharged out of the Army. Many suffer from post traumatic stress disorders and brain injuries, and haven't been getting the care they need. The Army's been claiming these discharged soldiers had pre-existing mental illnesses. But health advocates say these are wrongful discharges, a way for the army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment to which they're entitled. NOW covered this issue last summer, and this week we revisit the Army's controversial position and follow up with affected soldiers we met. As a result of the media attention from our report and others, the Department of Defense revised its criteria for diagnosing pre-existing conditions and, now, fewer soldiers are receiving the diagnosis, making more of them eligible for care. This is an update to the NOW investigation "Fighting the Army." Also this week, we update how the distant Pacific nation of Kiribati is dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth due to global warming. Kiribati President Anote Tong is now considering purchasing land abroad to save his people. He says his pleas for international support have largely fallen on deaf ears. Experts predict millions of people will become climate change refugees in the years to come. This is an update to the show "Paradise Lost."

FRONTLINE investigative correspondent Lowell Bergman examines the shadowy world of international bribery. The story reveals how multi-national companies create slush funds, set up front companies, and make secret payments, all to get billions in business. But these practices are facing a new international crackdown, led by prosecutors at the U.S. Department of Justice and allies abroad. At the center of this is a controversial, ongoing investigation into the British-based multi-national BAE Systems and allegations about billion dollar bribes.

Thousands of U.S. troops are getting discharged out of the Army. Many suffer from post traumatic stress disorders and brain injuries, and haven't been getting the care they need. The Army's been claiming these discharged soldiers had pre-existing mental illnesses. But health advocates say these are wrongful discharges, a way for the army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment to which they're entitled. NOW covered this issue last summer, and this week we revisit the Army's controversial position and follow up with affected soldiers we met. As a result of the media attention from our report and others, the Department of Defense revised its criteria for diagnosing pre-existing conditions and, now, fewer soldiers are receiving the diagnosis, making more of them eligible for care. This is an update to the NOW investigation "Fighting the Army." Also this week, we update how the distant Pacific nation of Kiribati is dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth due to global warming. Kiribati President Anote Tong is now considering purchasing land abroad to save his people. He says his pleas for international support have largely fallen on deaf ears. Experts predict millions of people will become climate change refugees in the years to come. This is an update to the show "Paradise Lost."

Americans are addicted to coal - it powers half of all our electricity, and is both plentiful and cheap. In fact, some call America the "Saudi Arabia of Coal." But are we paying too high an environmental price for all this cheap energy? With carbon emissions caps high on the Obama Administration's agenda, coal is in the crosshairs of the energy debate. This week, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels to Wyoming to take a hard look at the coal industry there and its case that it can produce "clean coal" - coal that can be burned without releasing carbon into the atmosphere. President Obama has been outspoken in his support for "clean coal" technology, but some say the whole concept is more of a public relations campaign than an energy solution. As part of the report, Hinojosa talks with Wyoming Governor Dave Freudenthal and Jeff Goodell, the author of "Big Coal," who says that carbon dioxide emissions generated from coal contribute to global warming. Our investigation is part of a PBS-wide series on the country's infrastructure called "Blueprint America."

From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed? Covering the week: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

From autos to world summitry to legal flip-flops - what worked and what didn't, tonight on "Washington Week." British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "The old Washington consensus is over. Today we have reached a new consensus." President Barack Obama said, "The economic crisis has proven the fact of our interdependence in the most visible way yet." Did president Obama emerge from this week's international meetings weaker or stronger? The protests in the streets couldn't overshadow the collegiality in the room for the president or his wife, as new olive branches were extended to old enemies. But what difference will it make in the long term? Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "I did think that the Iranian intervention this morning was promising." At home, the government steps in to save the troubled auto industry. And it steps out of a high-profile prosecution, dropping its case against a convicted U.S. senator. Brendan Sullivan said, "His name is clear. He is innocent of the charges as if they'd never been brought." What changed?

Covering the week: John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

Thousands of U.S. troops are getting discharged out of the Army. Many suffer from post traumatic stress disorders and brain injuries, and haven't been getting the care they need. The Army's been claiming these discharged soldiers had pre-existing mental illnesses. But health advocates say these are wrongful discharges, a way for the army to get rid of "problem" soldiers quickly, without giving them the treatment to which they're entitled. NOW covered this issue last summer, and this week we revisit the Army's controversial position and follow up with affected soldiers we met. As a result of the media attention from our report and others, the Department of Defense revised its criteria for diagnosing pre-existing conditions and, now, fewer soldiers are receiving the diagnosis, making more of them eligible for care. This is an update to the NOW investigation "Fighting the Army." Also this week, we update how the distant Pacific nation of Kiribati is dealing with the reality that both their land and culture could disappear from the Earth due to global warming. Kiribati President Anote Tong is now considering purchasing land abroad to save his people. He says his pleas for international support have largely fallen on deaf ears. Experts predict millions of people will become climate change refugees in the years to come. This is an update to the show "Paradise Lost."

This special, featuring Queen Latifah and John Mayer, tells stories of service members who return home with injuries - both visible and invisible - and explores their families' struggles to find a "new normal." The program focuses on the challenges faced by the injured soldiers and their families; salutes their extraordinary courage; offers the general public ways to support service members in the community; and provides a brief but powerful glimpse into the lives of these remarkable families. With help from Elmo, Rosita and their SESAME STREET friends, COMING HOME gives voice to the children as they play a central role in the family's adjustment process and encourages them to be what they are: kids.

And the hits just keep on coming from nuclear threats to pirate threats. Where to begin? Where will it end? We take a look tonight on "Washington Week." President Obama is tackling his to-do list. The challenges are many - redefining the U.S. role on the world stage. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The stereotypes of the United States are out there. I'm here to tell you that that's not the country that I know and it's not the country that I love." Coping with nuclear uncertainty. Sec. of State Hillary Clinton said, "We don't know what to believe about the Iranian program." Figuring out when it helps and when it hurts to keep campaign promises on foreign policy. And learning how to use a strong second in command to push back." Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "The last administration left us in a weaker posture than we've been at any time since World War II, less regarded in the world." As the challenges take shape, so do the responses. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Christi Parsons of the Chicago Tribune, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

Seventy-five percent of the world's fresh water is stored in glaciers, but scientists predict climate change will cause some of the world's largest glaciers to completely melt by 2030. What effect will this have on our daily lives? With global warming falling low on a national list of American concerns, it's time to take a deeper look at what could be a global calamity in the making. This week, in a special one-hour NOW on PBS, David Brancaccio and environmentalist Conrad Anker -- one of the world's leading high altitude climbers -- trek to the Gangotri Glacier in the Himalayan Mountains, the source of the Ganges River, to witness the great melt and its dire consequences first-hand. The two also visit Montana's Glacier National Park to see the striking effects of global warming closer to home and learn how melting glaciers across the globe can have a direct impact on food prices in the U.S. Along the way, Brancaccio and Anker talk to both scientists and swamis, bathe in the River Ganges, view a water shortage calamity in India, and come as close as any human can to seeing the tangible costs of climate change. "We can't take climate change and put it on the back burner," warns Anker. "If we don't address climate change, we won't be around as humans."

This year, hundreds of thousands of prisoners with serious mental illnesses will be released into communities across America, the largest exodus in the nation's history. Typically, mentally ill offenders leave prison with a bus ticket, $75 and two weeks worth of medication. Within eighteen months, nearly two-thirds are re-arrested. In this follow up to the groundbreaking film "The New Asylums," FRONTLINE examines what happens to the mentally ill when they leave prison and why they return at such alarming rates. The intimate stories of the released-along with interviews with parole officers, social workers, and psychiatrists provide a rare look at the lives of the mentally ill as they struggle to stay out of prison and reintegrate into society.

In the spring of 1805, Tenskwatawa (actor Billy Merasty, Cree First Nation), a Shawnee, fell into a trance so deep that those around him believed he had died. When he finally stirred, the young prophet claimed to have met the Master of Life. He told those who crowded around that the Indians were in dire straits because they had adopted white culture and rejected traditional spiritual ways. For several years, Tenskwatawa's spiritual revival movement drew thousands of adherents from tribes across the Midwest. His elder brother, Tecumseh (actor Michael Greyeyes, Plains Cree), would harness the energies of that renewal to create an unprecedented military and political confederacy of often antagonistic tribes, all committed to stopping white westward expansion. The brothers came closer than anyone since to creating an Indian nation that would exist alongside and separate from the United States. The dream of an independent Indian state may have died at the Battle of the Thames, when Tecumseh was killed fighting alongside his British allies, but the great Shawnee warrior would live on as a potent symbol of Native pride and pan-Indian identity.

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

Seventy-five percent of the world's fresh water is stored in glaciers, but scientists predict climate change will cause some of the world's largest glaciers to completely melt by 2030. What effect will this have on our daily lives? With global warming falling low on a national list of American concerns, it's time to take a deeper look at what could be a global calamity in the making. This week, in a special one-hour NOW on PBS, David Brancaccio and environmentalist Conrad Anker -- one of the world's leading high altitude climbers -- trek to the Gangotri Glacier in the Himalayan Mountains, the source of the Ganges River, to witness the great melt and its dire consequences first-hand. The two also visit Montana's Glacier National Park to see the striking effects of global warming closer to home and learn how melting glaciers across the globe can have a direct impact on food prices in the U.S. Along the way, Brancaccio and Anker talk to both scientists and swamis, bathe in the River Ganges, view a water shortage calamity in India, and come as close as any human can to seeing the tangible costs of climate change. "We can't take climate change and put it on the back burner," warns Anker. "If we don't address climate change, we won't be around as humans."

This year, hundreds of thousands of prisoners with serious mental illnesses will be released into communities across America, the largest exodus in the nation's history. Typically, mentally ill offenders leave prison with a bus ticket, $75 and two weeks worth of medication. Within eighteen months, nearly two-thirds are re-arrested. In this follow up to the groundbreaking film "The New Asylums," FRONTLINE examines what happens to the mentally ill when they leave prison and why they return at such alarming rates. The intimate stories of the released-along with interviews with parole officers, social workers, and psychiatrists provide a rare look at the lives of the mentally ill as they struggle to stay out of prison and reintegrate into society.

A terrible statistic: one in six women will be a victim of rape or attempted rape in her lifetime. But an even more shocking reality: A backlog in processing rape kits--crucial evidence in arresting violent predators -- is delaying and sometimes denying justice for tens of thousands of American women. NOW travels to Los Angeles County to investigate why it has the largest known rape kit backlog in the country -- over 12,000 kits are sitting untested in police storage facilities. An internal audit found that more than 50 of these cases have exceeded the 10-year statute of limitations on rape. "The evidence that we're talking about represents human lives," Los Angeles Controller Laura Chick tells NOW. "Those are lives stacked up on the shelves waiting for justice." NOW talks with courageous rape survivors and law enforcement experts for insight and answers in this disturbing but important report. Are these women being victimized twice?

Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? Covering the week: Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? Covering the week: Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

The most complex marine species on the planet, our counterparts in the sea, is the orca, the ruler of the ocean. Orcas, also called killer whales, are the most widely distributed marine mammal in the world -- their realm extends from the Arctic to the Antarctic. They number fewer than 100,000 worldwide, and learning more about them is a global endeavor for Jean-Michel Cousteau and his team of explorers, who travel to both the Northern and Southern hemispheres as they seek out killer whales in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. Cousteau and the team discover that people and orcas share surprising similarities, even similar needs, and they relate their findings to the captivity and release of Keiko, from "Free Willy" fame, who captured the world's imagination and whose survival depended on pioneering efforts to reintroduce Keiko into the wild. The team also learns how some of the threats to killer whales now intersect with human lives. Intriguing detours in the expedition arise, leading to critical examinations of our environment, of the food on our dinner tables, even of our own health.

Each year, a small shorebird that winters on the southern tip of South America must make a 10,000-mile journey to its nesting grounds in the Arctic -- one of the longest migrations on earth. The pocket-sized long distance traveler times its migration precisely to coincide with the annual spawning of one of earth's most ancient creatures. Horseshoe crab eggs in the Delaware Bay fuel the little bird's epic journey to the Arctic...but recently, bird numbers have started to crash. The story of the red knot and the horseshoe crab is a living example of how every species is interconnected -- each one important, no matter how big or small.

Seventy-five percent of the world's fresh water is stored in glaciers, but scientists predict climate change will cause some of the world's largest glaciers to completely melt by 2030. What effect will this have on our daily lives? With global warming falling low on a national list of American concerns, it's time to take a deeper look at what could be a global calamity in the making. This week, in a special one-hour NOW on PBS, David Brancaccio and environmentalist Conrad Anker -- one of the world's leading high altitude climbers -- trek to the Gangotri Glacier in the Himalayan Mountains, the source of the Ganges River, to witness the great melt and its dire consequences first-hand. The two also visit Montana's Glacier National Park to see the striking effects of global warming closer to home and learn how melting glaciers across the globe can have a direct impact on food prices in the U.S. Along the way, Brancaccio and Anker talk to both scientists and swamis, bathe in the River Ganges, view a water shortage calamity in India, and come as close as any human can to seeing the tangible costs of climate change. "We can't take climate change and put it on the back burner," warns Anker. "If we don't address climate change, we won't be around as humans."

This year, hundreds of thousands of prisoners with serious mental illnesses will be released into communities across America, the largest exodus in the nation's history. Typically, mentally ill offenders leave prison with a bus ticket, $75 and two weeks worth of medication. Within eighteen months, nearly two-thirds are re-arrested. In this follow up to the groundbreaking film "The New Asylums," FRONTLINE examines what happens to the mentally ill when they leave prison and why they return at such alarming rates. The intimate stories of the released-along with interviews with parole officers, social workers, and psychiatrists provide a rare look at the lives of the mentally ill as they struggle to stay out of prison and reintegrate into society.

In the spring of 1805, Tenskwatawa (actor Billy Merasty, Cree First Nation), a Shawnee, fell into a trance so deep that those around him believed he had died. When he finally stirred, the young prophet claimed to have met the Master of Life. He told those who crowded around that the Indians were in dire straits because they had adopted white culture and rejected traditional spiritual ways. For several years, Tenskwatawa's spiritual revival movement drew thousands of adherents from tribes across the Midwest. His elder brother, Tecumseh (actor Michael Greyeyes, Plains Cree), would harness the energies of that renewal to create an unprecedented military and political confederacy of often antagonistic tribes, all committed to stopping white westward expansion. The brothers came closer than anyone since to creating an Indian nation that would exist alongside and separate from the United States. The dream of an independent Indian state may have died at the Battle of the Thames, when Tecumseh was killed fighting alongside his British allies, but the great Shawnee warrior would live on as a potent symbol of Native pride and pan-Indian identity.

Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? Covering the week: Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay - are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

How do we interrogate terrorist suspects? How do we police our border, our banks - tonight on "Washington Week?" Simulated drowning, threats, shackles, new details emerge on how the CIA interrogated terror suspects. Were the tactics only technically legal and did they work? The U.S. speaks to its southern neighbors, emphasizing that border security works both ways. Pres. Barack Obama said, "More than 90 percent of the guns recovered in Mexico come from the United States. We have responsibilities as well." And loosening the embargo on Cuba. Pres. Obama said, "A relationship that effectively has been frozen for 50 years is not going to thaw overnight." Plus this week on the economy - banks are actually making money. What's going on? Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? Covering the week: Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

Seventy-five percent of the world's fresh water is stored in glaciers, but scientists predict climate change will cause some of the world's largest glaciers to completely melt by 2030. What effect will this have on our daily lives? With global warming falling low on a national list of American concerns, it's time to take a deeper look at what could be a global calamity in the making. This week, in a special one-hour NOW on PBS, David Brancaccio and environmentalist Conrad Anker -- one of the world's leading high altitude climbers -- trek to the Gangotri Glacier in the Himalayan Mountains, the source of the Ganges River, to witness the great melt and its dire consequences first-hand. The two also visit Montana's Glacier National Park to see the striking effects of global warming closer to home and learn how melting glaciers across the globe can have a direct impact on food prices in the U.S. Along the way, Brancaccio and Anker talk to both scientists and swamis, bathe in the River Ganges, view a water shortage calamity in India, and come as close as any human can to seeing the tangible costs of climate change. "We can't take climate change and put it on the back burner," warns Anker. "If we don't address climate change, we won't be around as humans."

The loneliest animals are the most endangered species on the planet. Collected and protected by dedicated scientists, these animals represent the end of the line for their species. In many cases, intensive captive breeding programs have been launched with the aim of sustaining these animals and the hope of returning them to the wild. Viewers are taken into high-security, high-tech labs where scientists attempt to breed new generations and into the field to discover what forces have led to the demise of entire species. Featured animals include Yangtze turtles under 24-hour surveillance; a baby Sumatran rhino; a special collection of lemurs; the Spix's macaw, a bird declared extinct in the wild in 2000; and "Lonesome George," a giant tortoise from the Galapagos, who is the last of his kind.

NOVA presents exclusive coverage of new excavations undertaken in the summer of 2007 at the site of Ling Bua on the island of Flores, Indonesia. These are the first investigations of the cave site since the sensational discovery of tiny and bizarre human fossil bones at the site in 2004. NOVA investigates the furious scientific debate currently raging over what "Hobbit" bones represent. Are they fossils of a previously unknown primitive branch of the human family? Or are they remains of a dwarf race of modern humans suffering from a strange pathological condition?

More than two decades after the Clean Water Act was supposed to make America's waters clean enough for swimming and fishing again, two iconic waterways - the great coastal estuaries of Puget Sound and the Chesapeake Bay

- are in perilous condition. With polluted runoff still flowing in from industry, agriculture and massive suburban development, scientists fear contamination to the food chain and drinking water for millions of people. A growing list of endangered species also is threatened in both estuaries. As a new President, Congress and states set agendas and spending priorities, FRONTLINE correspondent Hedrick Smith examines the rising hazards to human health and the eco-system and why it's so hard to keep our waters clean.

In the spring of 1805, Tenskwatawa (actor Billy Merasty, Cree First Nation), a Shawnee, fell into a trance so deep that those around him believed he had died. When he finally stirred, the young prophet claimed to have met the Master of Life. He told those who crowded around that the Indians were in dire straits because they had adopted white culture and rejected traditional spiritual ways. For several years, Tenskwatawa's spiritual revival movement drew thousands of adherents from tribes across the Midwest. His elder brother, Tecumseh (actor Michael Greyeyes, Plains Cree), would harness the energies of that renewal to create an unprecedented military and political confederacy of often antagonistic tribes, all committed to stopping white westward expansion. The brothers came closer than anyone since to creating an Indian nation that would exist alongside and separate from the United States. The dream of an independent Indian state may have died at the Battle of the Thames, when Tecumseh was killed fighting alongside his British allies, but the great Shawnee warrior would live on as a potent symbol of Native pride and pan-Indian identity.

How do we interrogate terrorist suspects? How do we police our border, our banks - tonight on "Washington Week?" Simulated drowning, threats, shackles, new details emerge on how the CIA interrogated terror suspects. Were the tactics only technically legal and did they work? The U.S. speaks to its southern neighbors, emphasizing that border security works both ways. Pres. Barack Obama said, "More than 90 percent of the guns recovered in Mexico come from the United States. We have responsibilities as well." And loosening the embargo on Cuba. Pres. Obama said, "A relationship that effectively has been frozen for 50 years is not going to thaw overnight." Plus this week on the economy - banks are actually making money. What's going on? Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Every hot button you can imagine - torture, wiretapping, the credit crunch, and race, all being debated at once tonight on "Washington Week." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "I will not permit the criminalization of policy differences. However, it is my responsibility as the attorney general to enforce the law." Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) said, "It is not a time to use our energy and our time in looking back, and in a sense of anger and retribution." As Congress and the intelligence agencies struggle with new disclosures about the limits of interrogation, a moral, legal, and political debate erupts. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "To tell lawyers that they're going to be prosecuted criminally for the best advice, even if it was bad advice, that they gave the president of the United States to my mind sets a terrible precedent for the future." The controversy builds. At the Supreme Court, a pivotal moment in the race debate. When is it okay to take race into account? When is it discriminatory? And as the economy reels, how and why are the rules changing on credit? Who pays and who gets crunched? Covering the week: Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

A terrible statistic: one in six women will be a victim of rape or attempted rape in her lifetime. But an even more shocking reality: A backlog in processing rape kits--crucial evidence in arresting violent predators -- is delaying and sometimes denying justice for tens of thousands of American women. NOW travels to Los Angeles County to investigate why it has the largest known rape kit backlog in the country -- over 12,000 kits are sitting untested in police storage facilities. An internal audit found that more than 50 of these cases have exceeded the 10-year statute of limitations on rape. "The evidence that we're talking about represents human lives," Los Angeles Controller Laura Chick tells NOW. "Those are lives stacked up on the shelves waiting for justice." NOW talks with courageous rape survivors and law enforcement experts for insight and answers in this disturbing but important report. Are these women being victimized twice?

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

In February of 1909, the indomitable Chiricahua Apache warrior and war shaman Geronimo lay on his deathbed. He summoned his nephew to his side, whispering, "I should never have surrendered. I should have fought until I was the last man alive." It was an admission of regret from a man whose insistent pursuit of military resistance in the face of overwhelming odds confounded not only his Mexican and American enemies, but many of his fellow Apaches as well. Born around 1820, Geronimo grew into a leading warrior and healer. But after his tribe was relocated to an Arizona reservation in 1872, he became a focus of the fury of terrified white settlers and of the growing tensions that divided Apaches struggling to survive under almost unendurable pressures. To angry whites, Geronimo became the archfiend, perpetrator of unspeakable savage cruelties. To his supporters, he remained the embodiment of proud resistance, the upholder of the old Chiricahua ways. To other Apaches, especially those who had come to see the white man's path as the only viable road, Geronimo was a stubborn troublemaker, unbalanced by his unquenchable thirst for vengeance, whose actions needlessly brought the enemy's wrath down on his own people. At a time when surrender to the reservation and acceptance of the white man's civilization seemed to be the Indians' only realistic options, Geronimo and his tiny band of Chiricahuas fought on. The final holdouts, they became the last Native-American fighting force to capitulate formally to the government of the United States.

All seven astronauts aboard perished and the implications for the future of the space shuttle program were enormous. What caused the Columbia tragedy? An engineering flaw? A failure within NASA? A lack of financing? Could this catastrophe have been avoided? Through interviews with astronauts and their families, as well as with members of the Columbia Accident Investigation Board, "Space Shuttle Disaster" gives viewers a new look at the Columbia tragedy -- and at NASA itself. From the creation of NASA through decades of technical and financial compromises, the program gets to the heart of what went wrong -- and how to make sure it never happens again.

In the summer of 1942, two ace fighter pilots -- one American and one Japanese -- faced off during a dramatic dogfight in the skies over Guadalcanal. Eventually the Japanese pilot shot down the American, who crash landed behind enemy lines but managed to escape before being captured. Using both pilots' comprehensive (but sometimes contradictory) memoirs, and following a forensic expedition to the recently-found American plane, "Dogfight Over Guadalcanal" examines and recreates every anxious second of the WWII showdown over the Pacific, revealing just how evenly matched the two men were and how they both survived, despite serious injuries.

In the mid-1960s, Bernard Madoff tapped money from Jewish businessmen at exclusive country clubs with the promise of steady guaranteed returns on their investments. He then set his sights on Europe and Latin America, brokering deals with powerful hedge fund managers and feeder funds from Buenos Aires to Geneva. Billions of dollars were channeled to Madoff's investment firm, and his feeders became fabulously wealthy. The competition wondered how the man could produce such steady returns in good times and bad. An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW. "Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."

An estimated half-million women are trafficked annually for the purpose of sexual slavery. The women are kidnapped -- or lured by traffickers who prey on their dreams of employment abroad -- then they are "exported" to Europe, the Middle East, the United States and elsewhere, where they are sold to pimps, drugged, terrorized, locked in brothels and raped repeatedly. In Eastern Europe, since the fall of communism, sex trafficking has become the fastest growing form of organized crime, with Moldova and Ukraine widely seen as the centers of the global trade in women and girls. FRONTLINE presents a unique hidden camera look at this world of sexual slavery, talking with traffickers and their victims, and exposing the government indifference that allows the abuses to continue virtually unchecked. "Sex Slaves" also follows the remarkable journey of one man determined to find his trafficked wife by posing as a trafficker himself to buy back her freedom.

In the mid-1960s, Bernard Madoff tapped money from Jewish businessmen at exclusive country clubs with the promise of steady guaranteed returns on their investments. He then set his sights on Europe and Latin America, brokering deals with powerful hedge fund managers and feeder funds from Buenos Aires to Geneva. Billions of dollars were channeled to Madoff's investment firm, and his feeders became fabulously wealthy. The competition wondered how the man could produce such steady returns in good times and bad. There were allegations that Madoff was "front-running" or operating a Ponzi scheme, which the SEC investigated several times over the last two decades. But Madoff remained untouched until December 11, 2008, when he admitted it was all "one big lie." FRONTLINE producers Martin Smith and Marcela Gaviria unravel the story behind the world's first truly global Ponzi scheme -- a deception that lasted longer, reached wider, and cut deeper than any other business scandal in history.

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW. "Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

A solitary loggerhead turtle in the middle of a vast ocean may not sound like an adventure film, but stick with her. Along her 9000-mile voyage to nest, our loggerhead tour guide in VOYAGE OF THE LONELY TURTLE encounters hammerhead sharks, deep ocean tempests, and man-made death traps in the form of fishing nets and hooks. Her body of well-suited armor and specialized adaptations for deep-ocean dwelling will help the sea turtle evade many of the ocean's menaces. But this is just one set of challenges to overcome. Here is another: she must find her way across the Pacific, from Mexico to a small stretch of beach in Japan, a precise location that she has been to just once before, as a two-inch hatchling, decades ago.

Each year, a small shorebird that winters on the southern tip of South America must make a 10,000-mile journey to its nesting grounds in the Arctic -- one of the longest migrations on earth. The pocket-sized long distance traveler times its migration precisely to coincide with the annual spawning of one of earth's most ancient creatures. Horseshoe crab eggs in the Delaware Bay fuel the little bird's epic journey to the Arctic...but recently, bird numbers have started to crash. The story of the red knot and the horseshoe crab is a living example of how every species is interconnected -- each one important, no matter how big or small.

How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW. "Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."

Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. This week, NOW's David Brancaccio sits down with one of the most prominent figures in world health to discuss the future of the swine flu pandemic. Dr. Larry Brilliant is an epidemiologist, former Chief Philanthropist at Google.org, and was a central figure in the World Health Organization's successful smallpox eradication program. Brilliant sheds light on high-tech tools that are making it easier for scientists to detect global outbreaks, the critical importance of early detection and early response, and how the current pandemic has yet to show its real hand. "Anyone who tells you that they know that this is a mild pandemic, and the WHO has overreacted, they don't know. Anyone who tells you that the WHO and CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention) have underestimated it, they don't know," Brilliant tells NOW. "We're all going to find out at the same time...we're all in it together." The show also features vital insight from Dr. Nathan Wolfe, a Stanford University epidemiologist who specializes in hunting viruses to their source.

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate

Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

In February of 1909, the indomitable Chiricahua Apache warrior and war shaman Geronimo lay on his deathbed. He summoned his nephew to his side, whispering, "I should never have surrendered. I should have fought until I was the last man alive." It was an admission of regret from a man whose insistent pursuit of military resistance in the face of overwhelming odds confounded not only his Mexican and American enemies, but many of his fellow Apaches as well. Born around 1820, Geronimo grew into a leading warrior and healer. But after his tribe was relocated to an Arizona reservation in 1872, he became a focus of the fury of terrified white settlers and of the growing tensions that divided Apaches struggling to survive under almost unendurable pressures. To angry whites, Geronimo became the archfiend, perpetrator of unspeakable savage cruelties. To his supporters, he remained the embodiment of proud resistance, the upholder of the old Chiricahua ways. To other Apaches, especially those who had come to see the white man's path as the only viable road, Geronimo was a stubborn troublemaker, unbalanced by his unquenchable thirst for vengeance, whose actions needlessly brought the enemy's wrath down on his own people. At a time when surrender to the reservation and acceptance of the white man's civilization seemed to be the Indians' only realistic options, Geronimo and his tiny band of Chiricahuas fought on. The final holdouts, they became the last Native-American fighting force to capitulate formally to the government of the United States.

In February of 1909, the indomitable Chiricahua Apache warrior and war shaman Geronimo lay on his deathbed. He summoned his nephew to his side, whispering, "I should never have surrendered. I should have fought until I was the last man alive." It was an admission of regret from a man whose insistent pursuit of military resistance in the face of overwhelming odds confounded not only his Mexican and American enemies, but many of his fellow Apaches as well. Born around 1820, Geronimo grew into a leading warrior and healer. But after his tribe was relocated to an Arizona reservation in 1872, he became a focus of the fury of terrified white settlers and of the growing tensions that divided Apaches struggling to survive under almost unendurable pressures. To angry whites, Geronimo became the archfiend, perpetrator of unspeakable savage cruelties. To his supporters, he remained the embodiment of proud resistance, the upholder of the old Chiricahua ways. To other Apaches, especially those who had come to see the white man's path as the only viable road, Geronimo was a stubborn troublemaker, unbalanced by his unquenchable thirst for vengeance, whose actions needlessly brought the enemy's wrath down on his own people. At a time when surrender to the reservation and acceptance of the white man's civilization seemed to be the Indians' only realistic options, Geronimo and his tiny band of Chiricahuas fought on. The final holdouts, they became the last Native-American fighting force to capitulate formally to the government of the United States.

In the mid-1960s, Bernard Madoff tapped money from Jewish businessmen at exclusive country clubs with the promise of steady guaranteed returns on their investments. He then set his sights on Europe and Latin America, brokering deals with powerful hedge fund managers and feeder funds from Buenos Aires to Geneva. Billions of dollars were channeled to Madoff's investment firm, and his feeders became fabulously wealthy. The competition wondered how the man could produce such steady returns in good times and bad. There were allegations that Madoff was "front-running" or operating a Ponzi scheme, which the SEC investigated several times over the last two decades. But Madoff remained untouched until December 11, 2008, when he admitted it was all "one big lie." FRONTLINE producers Martin Smith and Marcela Gaviria unravel the story behind the world's first truly global Ponzi scheme -- a deception that lasted longer, reached wider, and cut deeper than any other business scandal in history.

On February 1, 2003, the space shuttle Columbia disintegrated over Texas just 16 minutes before it was due to land. All seven astronauts aboard perished and the implications for the future of the space shuttle program were enormous. What caused the Columbia tragedy? An engineering flaw? A failure within NASA? A lack of financing? Could this catastrophe have been avoided? Through interviews with astronauts and their families, as well as with members of the Columbia Accident Investigation Board, "Space Shuttle Disaster" gives viewers a new look at the Columbia tragedy -- and at NASA itself. From the creation of NASA through decades of technical and financial compromises, the program gets to the heart of what went wrong -- and how to make sure it never happens again.

How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW. "Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

As usual, a lot of things happened this week, but there was even more that didn't happen. We'll shine a light on it all tonight on "Washington Week." Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said, "The financial markets are still fragile. We don't want to take anything for granted, but we have, I think, come a long way since last fall." This is what they mean by mixed bag. Many banks passed the government's new stress test, but some will need to raise more capital. The nation's jobless rate is heading up. Pres. Barack Obama said, "It's still a sobering toll." But new unemployment claims are down. On the foreign policy front, President Obama tries to please two essential but unhappy allies. Behind the scenes on the domestic side, White House lawyers assemble a Supreme Court shortlist and formulate a strategy to get that pick confirmed. Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "I think we are in danger, particularly from the Left, of politicizing the courts." Abortion, immigration, gay marriage, a lot of balls in the air, we're watching them with the reporters covering the stories: Eamon Javers of Politico, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

This week, NOW's David Brancaccio sits down with one of the most prominent figures in world health to discuss the future of the swine flu pandemic. Dr. Larry Brilliant is an epidemiologist, former Chief Philanthropist at Google.org, and was a central figure in the World Health Organization's successful smallpox eradication program. Brilliant sheds light on high-tech tools that are making it easier for scientists to detect global outbreaks, the critical importance of early detection and early response, and how the current pandemic has yet to show its real hand. "Anyone who tells you that they know that this is a mild pandemic, and the WHO has overreacted, they don't know. Anyone who tells you that the WHO and CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention) have underestimated it, they don't know," Brilliant tells NOW. "We're all going to find out at the same time...we're all in it together." The show also features vital insight from Dr. Nathan Wolfe, a Stanford University epidemiologist who specializes in hunting viruses to their source.

An estimated half-million women are trafficked annually for the purpose of sexual slavery. The women are kidnapped -- or lured by traffickers who prey on their dreams of employment abroad -- then they are "exported" to Europe, the Middle East, the United States and elsewhere, where they are sold to pimps, drugged, terrorized, locked in brothels and raped repeatedly. In Eastern Europe, since the fall of communism, sex trafficking has become the fastest growing form of organized crime, with Moldova and Ukraine widely seen as the centers of the global trade in women and girls. FRONTLINE presents a unique hidden camera look at this world of sexual slavery, talking with traffickers and their victims, and exposing the government indifference that allows the abuses to continue virtually unchecked. "Sex Slaves" also follows the remarkable journey of one man determined to find his trafficked wife by posing as a trafficker himself to buy back her freedom.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

An international health scare, a big bankruptcy, a huge party switch, and, on the 102nd day, a Supreme Court retirement. Could it get any crazier? Probably. We'll see tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "I don't want to run auto companies. I don't want to run banks. I've got two wars I've got to run already. I've got more than enough to do." And one more thing landed on the president's plate today, the imminent retirement of Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Pres. Obama said, "I am incredibly grateful for his dedicated service. I told him as much when we spoke." Let the court wars begin. It's been a brutal week. Senior Republican Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA) defected. He said, "I am not prepared to have my 29-year record in the United States Senate decided by the Pennsylvania Republican primary electorate." And America and the world cringed at the prospect of a flu pandemic. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "I wouldn't go anywhere in confined places now." U.S. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said, "It is safe to fly and there is no reason to cancel flights." The first 100 days morphs into the second 100. Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Spencer Hsu of the Washington Post.

In February of 1909, the indomitable Chiricahua Apache warrior and war shaman Geronimo lay on his deathbed. He summoned his nephew to his side, whispering, "I should never have surrendered. I should have fought until I was the last man alive." It was an admission of regret from a man whose insistent pursuit of military resistance in the face of overwhelming odds confounded not only his Mexican and American enemies, but many of his fellow Apaches as well. Born around 1820, Geronimo grew into a leading warrior and healer. But after his tribe was relocated to an Arizona reservation in 1872, he became a focus of the fury of terrified white settlers and of the growing tensions that divided Apaches struggling to survive under almost unendurable pressures. To angry whites, Geronimo became the archfiend, perpetrator of unspeakable savage cruelties. To his supporters, he remained the embodiment of proud resistance, the upholder of the old Chiricahua ways. To other Apaches, especially those who had come to see the white man's path as the only viable road, Geronimo was a stubborn troublemaker, unbalanced by his unquenchable thirst for vengeance, whose actions needlessly brought the enemy's wrath down on his own people. At a time when surrender to the reservation and acceptance of the white man's civilization seemed to be the Indians' only realistic options, Geronimo and his tiny band of Chiricahuas fought on. The final holdouts, they became the last Native-American fighting force to capitulate formally to the government of the United States.

A record 115,000 U.N. peacekeepers are now deployed in 20 countries, and their mission is more vital than ever. But critics and insiders alike are openly worried that the current peacekeeping model is overstretched -- and at risk of failure. This week, NOW travels to the Democratic Republic of the Congo to witness today's largest and most expensive peacekeeping operation. There, 17,000 U.N. troops are tasked with protecting millions of people over a rugged and dangerous territory the size of the Eastern United States. But the effort is struggling -- last November, local rebels massacred civilians less than a mile from one of the U.N. bases. How can U.N. peacekeeping be improved so that it fulfills its promise of protection to the world? This show is a co-production with the Bureau for International Reporting (BIR), a non-profit video news production company.

The week's twists and turns on health care, Social Security, torture tactics, and Dick Cheney, we talk about it all tonight on "Washington Week," a week of full-throated, old-fashioned Washington debate about torture -- when it was used and who knew about it. Rep Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "The CIA briefed me only once on enhanced interrogation techniques in September, 2002. We also now know that techniques, including waterboarding, had already been employed, and that those briefing me in September, 2002, gave me inaccurate and incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We just ought to know, what did she know, when did she know it, and what did she do about it." About transparency, accountability, and a secret stash of photos. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The most direct consequence of releasing them I believe would be to further inflame anti-American opinion and to put out troops in greater danger." ACLU Attorney Amrit Singh said, "This decision makes a mockery of President Obama's promise of transparency and accountability." About an increasingly vocal former vice president - Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "If I don't speak out, then where do we find ourselves, Bob? Then the critics have free run, and there isn't anybody there on the other side to tell the truth." Attorney General Eric Holder said, "He's a person who cares a great deal about this country, but I think he's dead wrong." And about the administration's number one domestic priority - health care reform. Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius said, "It really isn't an option to fail because the recovery of the economy depends on transforming the health care system." Rep. Ginny Brown-Waite (R-FL) said, "The Democrats' one-size-fits-all program just is not being accepted by the American public." The Obama Administration discovers promises are hard to keep. We discuss why with John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

An estimated half-million women are trafficked annually for the purpose of sexual slavery. The women are kidnapped -- or lured by traffickers who prey on their dreams of employment abroad -- then they are "exported" to Europe, the Middle East, the United States and elsewhere, where they are sold to pimps, drugged, terrorized, locked in brothels and raped repeatedly. In Eastern Europe, since the fall of communism, sex trafficking has become the fastest growing form of organized crime, with Moldova and Ukraine widely seen as the centers of the global trade in women and girls. FRONTLINE presents a unique hidden camera look at this world of sexual slavery, talking with traffickers and their victims, and exposing the government indifference that allows the abuses to continue virtually unchecked. "Sex Slaves" also follows the remarkable journey of one man determined to find his trafficked wife by posing as a trafficker himself to buy back her freedom.

How is Secretary of Education Arne Duncan going to spend $100 billion in stimulus money -- almost twice the education budget -- to fix our nation's schools? During his seven years running Chicago's public schools, Duncan went head to head with the teacher's union and skeptical parents by closing down low-performing schools, getting rid of all the teachers, principals, even the janitors, and reopening them with new staffs as "turnaround schools." It's a drastic step, but the results have been promising. This week, NOW travels to Chicago to investigate the collateral damage of a top-to-bottom school makeover, and to get a glimpse of what the future of education might look like for the rest of the country. "We have to be willing to experience a little bit of pain and discomfort, but our children desperately need it and deserve it," Secretary Duncan tells NOW. "Just as we have to do it, unions have to change, principals have to change, teachers have to change, parents have to step up...business as usual is not going to get us there."

AIR GROUP 16: WE CAME TO REMEMBER tells the story of the last reunion of Air Group 16 -- the pilots, radiomen and gunners who served on the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Lexington in the Pacific in World War II. The film follows the veterans and their families as they make the journey by train, plane and car to Washington D.C. for their final reunion at the dedication of the National World War II Memorial in May 2004. Through stunning archival footage, period music and dramatic first-person accounts, the film follows Air Group 16 as they tell their stories, remember their fallen comrades and accept official honors from the country they served.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor -- Edward M. Kennedy -- surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

Mark Oliver Everett, better known as E, is the lead singer of U.S. cult band the EELS. What most of his fans don't know is that Mark's father, Hugh Everett III, was one of America's top quantum physicists. In 1957, Hugh Everett came up with a revolutionary theory that predicted the existence of parallel universes. The idea quickly seeped into popular culture, but only recently has it been accepted by mainstream physicists. The film follows the wry and charismatic Mark, who had been estranged from his father, as he travels across America to learn about the father he never knew. It is only by entering the paradoxical world of quantum mechanics that Mark can hope to understand why he was such a stranger to his own father.

The NATIONAL MEMORIAL DAY CONCERT honors the service and sacrifice of men and women in uniform, their families at home and all those who have given their lives for our country. Co-hosted for the fourth year by Emmy Award-winner Gary Sinise ("CSI: New York") and Tony Award-winner Joe Mantegna ("Criminal Minds"), the 2009 event commemorates 20 years on air as the nation's memorial service. Broadcast live from the West Lawn of the U.S. Capitol, the concert features uplifting musical performances, documentary footage and dramatic readings that honor all Americans who have served. Joining Sinise and Mantegna is a line-up of dignitaries, actors and musical artists, including distinguished American leader Colin L. Powell; renowned film, television and stage actress Katie Holmes; Emmy award-winning actor Laurence Fishburne; double Academy Award-winning actress Dianne Wiest; singer Katharine McPhee ("American Idol"); country music superstar Trace Adkins; Tony Award-winning Broadway star Brian Stokes Mitchell; celebrated Broadway star Colm Wilkinson (Les Misérables, The Phantom of the Opera); acclaimed opera star Denyce Graves; classical music superstar Lang Lang; and Grammy-nominated violin virtuoso Robert McDuffie in performance with the National Symphony Orchestra under the direction of maestro Erich Kunzel, recipient of the National Medal of Arts.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and John Maggs of National Journal.

Host and veteran correspondent Miles O'Brien goes to three very different American cities -- Denver, New York and Portland, and their surrounding suburbs -- to look at each as a microcosm of the challenges and possibilities the country faces as citizens, local and federal officials, and planners struggle to manage a growing America with innovative transportation and sustainable land use policies. With roads clogged and congested, gas prices uncertain, smog and pollution creating health problems like asthma, cities that once built infrastructure to serve only automobiles and trucks are now looking to innovative new forms of transportation systems -- like trolleys, light rail, pedestrian walkways and bike paths.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and John Maggs of National Journal.

The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

What will jobs of the future look like? Many studying that question are seeing green -- green jobs. And with President Obama promising to create 5 million "green-collar" jobs over the next 10 years, some are predicting that new career paths in energy efficiency and clean power will transform the American economy. This week, NOW on PBS talks with environmental activist Van Jones, founder of "Green for All," an environmental group dedicated to bringing green jobs to the disadvantaged. In March, Jones was appointed as special advisor for Green Jobs, Enterprise and Innovation at the White House Council on Environmental Quality. Now that he has the President's ear, will Jones be creating a new career frontier for America?

What will jobs of the future look like? Many studying that question are seeing green -- green jobs. And with President Obama promising to create 5 million "green-collar" jobs over the next 10 years, some are predicting that new career paths in energy efficiency and clean power will transform the American economy. This week, NOW on PBS talks with environmental activist Van Jones, founder of "Green for All," an environmental group dedicated to bringing green jobs to the disadvantaged. Host and veteran correspondent Miles O'Brien goes to three very different American cities -- Denver, New York and Portland, and their surrounding suburbs -- to look at each as a microcosm of the challenges and possibilities the country faces as citizens, local and federal officials, and planners struggle to manage a growing America with innovative transportation and sustainable land use policies. With roads clogged and congested, gas prices uncertain, smog and pollution creating health problems like asthma, cities that once built infrastructure to serve only automobiles and trucks are now looking to innovative new forms of transportation systems -- like trolleys, light rail, pedestrian walkways and bike paths.

Cutting across the Zambezi River, bridging the countries of Zambia and Zimbabwe, Victoria Falls is the largest waterfall in the world. This awesome force of nature divides two natural worlds -- the tranquil meandering river above the cascade and the raging abyss of the gorge below. The upper river is idyllic, running shallow through sandstone hills and meandering around islands and reed-beds where elephants, lions, hippos, crocodiles, buffalo, zebra, antelope and otters thrive. In a single vertical drop, the river plummets twice the height of Niagara Falls into the wild waters and heavy spray of the narrow gorge, where 35 different raptor species rear their young, feasting on a glut of fish. Between the two worlds, the treacherous cliffs and rocky outcrops are covered in thick, mossy rainforest, fed by the constant mists, and home to baboons, monkeys, mongoose and parrots. It is a place of epic proportions, with an epic story to tell.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor -- Edward M. Kennedy -- surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

Mark Oliver Everett, better known as E, is the lead singer of U.S. cult band the EELS. What most of his fans don't know is that Mark's father, Hugh Everett III, was one of America's top quantum physicists. In 1957, Hugh Everett came up with a revolutionary theory that predicted the existence of parallel universes. The idea quickly seeped into popular culture, but only recently has it been accepted by mainstream physicists. The film follows the wry and charismatic Mark, who had been estranged from his father, as he travels across America to learn about the father he never knew. It is only by entering the paradoxical world of quantum mechanics that Mark can hope to understand why he was such a stranger to his own father.

The NATIONAL MEMORIAL DAY CONCERT honors the service and sacrifice of men and women in uniform, their families at home and all those who have given their lives for our country. Co-hosted for the fourth year by Emmy Award-winner Gary Sinise ("CSI: New York") and Tony Award-winner Joe Mantegna ("Criminal Minds"), the 2009 event commemorates 20 years on air as the nation's memorial service. Broadcast live from the West Lawn of the U.S. Capitol, the concert features uplifting musical performances, documentary footage and dramatic readings that honor all Americans who have served. Joining Sinise and Mantegna is a line-up of dignitaries, actors and musical artists, including distinguished American leader Colin L. Powell; renowned film, television and stage actress Katie Holmes; Emmy award-winning actor Laurence Fishburne; double Academy Award-winning actress Dianne Wiest; singer Katharine McPhee ("American Idol"); country music superstar Trace Adkins; Tony Award-winning Broadway star Brian Stokes Mitchell; celebrated Broadway star Colm Wilkinson (Les Misérables, The Phantom of the Opera); acclaimed opera star Denyce Graves; classical music superstar Lang Lang; and Grammy-nominated violin virtuoso Robert McDuffie in performance with the National Symphony Orchestra under the direction of maestro Erich Kunzel, recipient of the National Medal of Arts.

What will jobs of the future look like? Many studying that question are seeing green -- green jobs. And with President Obama promising to create 5 million "green-collar" jobs over the next 10 years, some are predicting that new career paths in energy efficiency and clean power will transform the American economy. This week, NOW on PBS talks with environmental activist Van Jones, founder of "Green for All," an environmental group dedicated to bringing green jobs to the disadvantaged. In March, Jones was appointed as special advisor for Green Jobs, Enterprise and Innovation at the White House Council on Environmental Quality. Now that he has the President's ear, will Jones be creating a new career frontier for America?

The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor -- Edward M. Kennedy -- surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

Host and veteran correspondent Miles O'Brien goes to three very different American cities -- Denver, New York and Portland, and their surrounding suburbs -- to look at each as a microcosm of the challenges and possibilities the country faces as citizens, local and federal officials, and planners struggle to manage a growing America with innovative transportation and sustainable land use policies. With roads clogged and congested, gas prices uncertain, smog and pollution creating health problems like asthma, cities that once built infrastructure to serve only automobiles and trucks are now looking to innovative new forms of transportation systems -- like trolleys, light rail, pedestrian walkways and bike paths.

As a nervous world watches a new branch of the Taliban gain ground -- and the United States steps up its pressure on the Pakistani government to confront the militants' mounting threat -- FRONTLINE/WORLD reports from the front lines of what has become, perhaps, the most volatile conflict in the world. First, a timely rebroadcast of Sharmeen Obaid-Chinoy's dangerous journey through a country under siege -- from Pakistan's lawless tribal areas, where the Army is battling the Taliban; to the Swat Valley, where the Taliban are fighting to keep control; to the major cities, which the Taliban now have in their sights. Also in this hour, correspondent David Montero investigates the mysterious death of a journalist -- and a personal friend -- killed while reporting from ground zero of the Army's campaign against the Taliban in the Swat Valley. And, finally, a new dispatch from Sharmeen Obaid-Chinoy on the coming battle for hearts and minds in Pakistan's largest city.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres.

Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and John Maggs of National Journal.

The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

The story behind this week's Supreme Court nomination and growing nuclear tension around the world, tonight on "Washington Week." Judge Sonia Sotomayor said, "I am an ordinary person who has been blessed with extraordinary opportunities and experiences. Today is one of those experiences." The moment Sonia Sotomayor was announced as President Obama's Supreme Court pick, the battles began. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Some of her comments are very troubling and some of them do smack of a judge who wants to make law from the bench." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "I think this nomination process is going to be more a test of the Republican Party than of Judge Sotomayor." But what would it take for a Democratically controlled Senate to turn down a Democratic president's nominee, and a Latina with 17 years on the bench to boot. This summer will tell the tale. A tougher challenge awaits the president in North Korea, where the communist regime has restarted its nuclear program and is challenging the rest of the world to do something about it. Ambassador Susan Rice said, "If they want to continue to test and provoke the international community, they're going to find that they will pay a price." But what price and at what cost? We take you inside those debates tonight with Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

Mark Oliver Everett, better known as E, is the lead singer of U.S. cult band the EELS. What most of his fans don't know is that Mark's father, Hugh Everett III, was one of America's top quantum physicists. In 1957, Hugh Everett came up with a revolutionary theory that predicted the existence of parallel universes. The idea quickly seeped into popular culture, but only recently has it been accepted by mainstream physicists. The film follows the wry and charismatic Mark, who had been estranged from his father, as he travels across America to learn about the father he never knew. It is only by entering the paradoxical world of quantum mechanics that Mark can hope to understand why he was such a stranger to his own father.

As a nervous world watches a new branch of the Taliban gain ground -- and the United States steps up its pressure on the Pakistani government to confront the militants' mounting threat -- FRONTLINE/WORLD reports from the front lines of what has become, perhaps, the most volatile conflict in the world. First, a timely rebroadcast of Sharmeen Obaid-Chinoy's dangerous journey through a country under siege -- from Pakistan's lawless tribal areas, where the Army is battling the Taliban; to the Swat Valley, where the Taliban are fighting to keep control; to the major cities, which the Taliban now have in their sights. Also in this hour, correspondent David Montero investigates the mysterious death of a journalist -- and a personal friend -- killed while reporting from ground zero of the Army's campaign against the Taliban in the Swat Valley. And, finally, a new dispatch from Sharmeen Obaid-Chinoy on the coming battle for hearts and minds in Pakistan's largest city.

This week NOW on PBS partners with best-selling author and journalist Robert Lacey to investigate the surprising success of Saudi Arabia's approach to dealing with terrorists and extremists -- without torture or water-boarding. Given extraordinary access to the Saudi Arabian Interior Ministry and its practices, Lacey visits terrorist rehabilitation camps that use "soft policing" tactics to be nice to the bad guys. In the program we see the Saudis providing a private jumbo jet to bring inmates home from Guantanamo Bay, giving them a hero's welcome, then sending them to a converted holiday resort for re-education. Then, the men are set free. Is this rehab program working, and can we trust the Saudis to protect themselves -- and us -- against Islamic extremism in the future? Watch this NOW on PBS report for a perspective on terrorism you've never seen before.

A war of words about war and security, plus the Republican dilemma and why you don't have to cut up your credit cards yet, tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "The American people are not absolutist and they don't elect us to impose a rigid ideology on our problems." Vice Pres. Dick Cheney said, "In the fight against terrorism there is no middle ground. And half-measures keep you half-exposed." The former vice president takes on the current president in an unusual face off over Guantanamo, over torture. Pres. Obama said, "Those who argued for these tactics were on the wrong side of the debate and the wrong side of history. That's why we must leave these methods where they belong -- in the past." Vice Pres. Cheney said, "To completely rule out enhanced interrogation methods in the future is unwise in the extreme. It is recklessness cloaked in righteousness and would make the American people less safe." Are the president's critics finding their collective voice? Chairman of the RNC Michael Steele said, "The honeymoon is over. The honeymoon is over. We're going to challenge those policies that we believe are wrong." But who's listening? Plus Congress moves to tighten the screws on the credit card industry. Covering the week: David Sanger of the New York Times, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, and John Maggs of National Journal.

The murder of Dr. George Tiller has reignited the abortion debate, and raised the question: should violence against medical doctors who perform abortions be viewed and prosecuted as domestic terrorism? This week NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with two of the remaining handful of doctors who publicly acknowledge performing late abortions, including Leroy Carhart, a fellow doctor in Tiller's Wichita, Kansas clinic. Carhart discusses his vow to carry on Tiller's mission and what it's like for him and his family to live as "targets". The show also investigates claims that law enforcement dropped the ball when it came to stopping Tiller's alleged murderer, Scott Roeder. Hinojosa travels to Colorado as well to talk with Dr. Warren Hern, another late abortion provider who says he's been living "under siege" for decades. Dr. Hern works behind four layers of bulletproof windows and is now under round-the-clock federal protection. NOW goes into the eye of the abortion rights storm to see how Tiller's killing and its ramifications are impacting doctors, free speech, and a civilized society.

At America's oldest Mardi Gras -- celebrated each year in Mobile, Alabama -- events remain segregated between white and black residents. "The Order of Myths" looks beneath the surface of pageantry and reveals a complex story about race relations and the ever-present racial divide that persists in America. By Margaret Brown. A short, "Bi-Racial Hair," a satirical look at the racial tension young African Americans of mixed ethnic backgrounds experience, follows. Illustrating the struggles of mixed-color youth with identity and social position, 13-year old poet Zora's resolution about proposing a "new race" sheds light on the complexity and depth of the racist wounds the nation still faces. The young poet performs live in front of 1,500 of her peers and adult allies at the Urban Word NYC Teen Poetry Slam.

On June 5, 1989, one day after Chinese troops expelled thousands of demonstrators from Tiananmen Square in Beijing; a solitary, unarmed protester stood his ground before a column of tanks advancing down the Avenue of Eternal Peace. Captured by Western photographers watching nearby, this extraordinary confrontation became an icon of the fight for freedom around the world. Veteran filmmaker Antony Thomas investigates the mystery of the tank man -- his identity, his fate, and his significance for the Chinese leadership. The search for the tank man reveals China's startling social compact -- its embrace of capitalism while dissent is squashed -- designed to stifle the nationwide unrest of 1989. This policy has allowed educated elites and entrepreneurs to profit handsomely, while the majority of Chinese still face brutal working conditions and low wages, and all Chinese must endure strict political and social controls. Some of these controls regulate speech on the Internet -- and have generated criticism over the involvement of major U.S. corporations such as Yahoo!, Cisco, Microsoft, and Google.

Americans have a longstanding love affair with food -- the modern supermarket has, on average, 47,000 products. But do we really know what goes into making the products we so eagerly consume? This week, David Brancaccio talks with filmmaker Robert Kenner, the director of "Food, Inc.," which takes a hard look at the secretive and surprising journey food takes on the way from processing plants to our dinner tables. The two discuss why contemporary food processing secrets are so closely guarded, their impact on our health, and another surprising fact: how consumers are actually empowered to make a difference. Find out why you'll never look at dinner the same way.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Americans have a longstanding love affair with food -- the modern supermarket has, on average, 47,000 products. But do we really know what goes into making the products we so eagerly consume? This week, David Brancaccio talks with filmmaker Robert Kenner, the director of "Food, Inc.," which takes a hard look at the secretive and surprising journey food takes on the way from processing plants to our dinner tables. The two discuss why contemporary food processing secrets are so closely guarded, their impact on our health, and another surprising fact: how consumers are actually empowered to make a difference. Find out why you'll never look at dinner the same way.

The murder of Dr. George Tiller has reignited the abortion debate, and raised the question: should violence against medical doctors who perform abortions be viewed and prosecuted as domestic terrorism? This week NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with two of the remaining handful of doctors who publicly acknowledge performing late abortions, including Leroy Carhart, a fellow doctor in Tiller's Wichita, Kansas clinic. Carhart discusses his vow to carry on Tiller's mission and what it's like for him and his family to live as "targets". The show also investigates claims that law enforcement dropped the ball when it came to stopping Tiller's alleged murderer, Scott Roeder. Hinojosa travels to Colorado as well to talk with Dr. Warren Hern, another late abortion provider who says he's been living "under siege" for decades. Dr. Hern works behind four layers of bulletproof windows and is now under round-the-clock federal protection. NOW goes into the eye of the abortion rights storm to see how Tiller's killing and its ramifications are impacting doctors, free speech, and a civilized society.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Covering the week: Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Greg Ip of The Economist, and Gebe Martinez of Politico.

Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb. Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Americans have a longstanding love affair with food -- the modern supermarket has, on average, 47,000 products. But do we really know what goes into making the products we so eagerly consume? This week, David Brancaccio talks with filmmaker Robert Kenner, the director of "Food, Inc.," which takes a hard look at the secretive and surprising journey food takes on the way from processing plants to our dinner tables. The two discuss why contemporary food processing secrets are so closely guarded, their impact on our health, and another surprising fact: how consumers are actually empowered to make a difference. Find out why you'll never look at dinner the same way.

The murder of Dr. George Tiller has reignited the abortion debate, and raised the question: should violence against medical doctors who perform abortions be viewed and prosecuted as domestic terrorism? This week NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with two of the remaining handful of doctors who publicly acknowledge performing late abortions, including Leroy Carhart, a fellow doctor in Tiller's Wichita, Kansas clinic. Carhart discusses his vow to carry on Tiller's mission and what it's like for him and his family to live as "targets". The show also investigates claims that law enforcement dropped the ball when it came to stopping Tiller's alleged murderer, Scott Roeder. Hinojosa travels to Colorado as well to talk with Dr. Warren Hern, another late abortion provider who says he's been living "under siege" for decades. Dr. Hern works behind four layers of bulletproof windows and is now under round-the-clock federal protection. NOW goes into the eye of the abortion rights storm to see how Tiller's killing and its ramifications are impacting doctors, free speech, and a civilized society.

Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb.

Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

At America's oldest Mardi Gras -- celebrated each year in Mobile, Alabama -- events remain segregated between white and black residents. "The Order of Myths" looks beneath the surface of pageantry and reveals a complex story about race relations and the ever-present racial divide that persists in America. By Margaret Brown. A short, "Bi-Racial Hair," a satirical look at the racial tension young African Americans of mixed ethnic backgrounds experience, follows. Illustrating the struggles of mixed-color youth with identity and social position, 13-year old poet Zora's resolution about proposing a "new race" sheds light on the complexity and depth of the racist wounds the nation still faces. The young poet performs live in front of 1,500 of her peers and adult allies at the Urban Word NYC Teen Poetry Slam.

The president dominates the stage in the Middle East, but what did he say and what did U.S. allies and enemies hear? We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Islam is not part of the problem in combating violent extremism. It is an important part of promoting peace." Barack Hussein Obama in the Middle East, speaking to the world's most complicated problems, from violence to nuclear expansion, to Arab-Israeli tension, to human and women's rights. Pres. Obama said, "The enduring faith of over a billion people is so much bigger than the narrow hatred of a few." Was this president in a unique position to be heard and was anyone listening? At home, government steps in in a big way to save an iconic but troubled industrial giant. GM CEO Fritz Henderson said, "The GM that in fact let too many of you down is history." But with fewer name plates, dealers and workers, what will the new GM be? And on Capitol Hill, Judge Sonia Sotomayor makes the rounds as her supporters and detractors formulate confirmation strategy. Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) said, "I think some of the attacks made against her have been among the most vicious I've ever seen." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I would like the president, quite frankly, to tell me, if I use his standard, why should I vote for Judge Sotomayor when you didn't vote for Alito and Roberts?" Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb. Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

On June 5, 1989, one day after Chinese troops expelled thousands of demonstrators from Tiananmen Square in Beijing; a solitary, unarmed protester stood his ground before a column of tanks advancing down the Avenue of Eternal Peace. Captured by Western photographers watching nearby, this extraordinary confrontation became an icon of the fight for freedom around the world. Veteran filmmaker Antony Thomas investigates the mystery of the tank man -- his identity, his fate, and his significance for the Chinese leadership. The search for the tank man reveals China's startling social compact -- its embrace of capitalism while dissent is squashed -- designed to stifle the nationwide unrest of 1989. This policy has allowed educated elites and entrepreneurs to profit handsomely, while the majority of Chinese still face brutal working conditions and low wages, and all Chinese must endure strict political and social controls. Some of these controls regulate speech on the Internet -- and have generated criticism over the involvement of major U.S. corporations such as Yahoo!, Cisco, Microsoft, and Google.

Could this be it, really, finally--health care reform on Washington's front burner. We'll get to the bottom of it tonight on "Washington Week." Pres. Barack Obama said, "Reform should be guided by a simple principle. We will fix what's broken and we will build on what works." Maybe easier said than done. Everybody knows there's a problem with health care. Few can agree on a fix. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "This is going to be a journey that's going to go on for some weeks." The questions are more plentiful than the answers, chief among them: who pays. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "If you like going to the DMV and you think they do a great job, then you'll love the government run health care system that they're proposing." On the economic front, banks try to get out from under the government's thumb. Ken Lewis, CEO, Bank of America stated, "Even six months later is easy to forget just how close to the brink our system came." But did the rescue plan fix the underlying problems, while in politics are Republicans preparing to stage a state House comeback. Governors racing in New Jersey and Virginia may tell the tale. Covering the week Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Bara Vaida of National Journal, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and John Harris of Politico.

The murder of Dr. George Tiller has reignited the abortion debate, and raised the question: should violence against medical doctors who perform abortions be viewed and prosecuted as domestic terrorism? This week NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa sits down with two of the remaining handful of doctors who publicly acknowledge performing late abortions, including Leroy Carhart, a fellow doctor in Tiller's Wichita, Kansas clinic. Carhart discusses his vow to carry on Tiller's mission and what it's like for him and his family to live as "targets". The show also investigates claims that law enforcement dropped the ball when it came to stopping Tiller's alleged murderer, Scott Roeder. Hinojosa travels to Colorado as well to talk with Dr. Warren Hern, another late abortion provider who says he's been living "under siege" for decades. Dr. Hern works behind four layers of bulletproof windows and is now under round-the-clock federal protection. NOW goes into the eye of the abortion rights storm to see how Tiller's killing and its ramifications are impacting doctors, free speech, and a civilized society.

The story of Fort Niagara is the story of a struggle for a continent. For over 150 years, four nations struggled to control this strategic point at the mouth of the Niagara River, and thus control the critical water artery it protected. But the fort is not only unique for its history, it is unique for its longevity. Visitors to the site today can still explore one of North America's largest collections of original 18th century military architecture--tangible reminders of the fort's important past. Experience for yourself this exciting story of one of America's most unique historic places. Rare archival footage, expert commentaries and spectacular videography of the fort itself come together in brilliant high definition to create a program that is a must for anyone interested in the story of North America.

PsychoPhone--A couple in Cincinnati acquired a peculiar phonograph at an antiques auction. The machine, labeled "PsychoPhone," included four grooved wax cylinders. The contributors think Thomas Edison invented the PsychoPhone to record messages from the afterlife. As early as the 1870s, Edison and other scientific minds explored psychic phenomena, believing every living being was made of atoms that could "remember" past lives. Did Edison make a machine to unlock the secrets of the dead? HISTORY DETECTIVES host Gwendolyn Wright travels to the Thomas A. Edison Menlo Park museum in New Jersey to find out. War Dog Letter--A World War II collector from Kansas City, Kansas, has a cryptic letter from a soldier to another military man. The soldier explains that military investigators have questioned him about a man named Prestre--specifically about his character and qualifications as a dog trainer. The contributor wants to know why the military was investigating Prestre and what the dogs were being trained to do. The search takes HISTORY DETECTIVES host Tukufu Zuberi to remote Cat Island near Gulfport, Mississippi, and Fort Lee in Virginia. The military put great effort into a new "War Dogs" program during WWII. What went wrong on Cat Island? Pancho Villa Watch Fob--Just before he died, a man gave his neighbors a most unusual gift: a watch fob commemorating Francisco "Pancho" Villa's murderous raid on the border town of Columbus, New Mexico. The man says he was a boy when the raid occurred in 1916, and he and his parents survived by hiding under a train car. The new owners want to know more about this watch fob. Who made it? Did their friend indeed witness this infamous raid? HISTORY DETECTIVES' new guest host, Eduardo Pagan, leads on an expedition that reveals an especially wild chapter of the American West.

While America, a country of immigrants, has always championed the idea of inclusiveness, the outsider has been a source of constant amusement. Perhaps best epitomized today by characters in such blockbuster Judd Apatow comedies as "The 40 Year-Old Virgin," "Knocked Up" and "Superbad," this episode also looks back at the bespectacled wannabe (Harold Lloyd) and the vain coward (Bob Hope) as the outsiders of their day. Along with pioneering women in comedy like Phyllis Diller and truly zany characters who seem to have arrived from another planet (Jonathan Winters, Andy Kaufman, and Robin Williams), the great social upheaval of the 60s and 70s introduced counter-culture favorites Cheech & Chong, as well as superstar nerds like Woody Allen and "jerks" like Steve Martin--who ultimately became so popular that the idea of the outsider had to be re-cast.

The bets were huge and risky--billions of dollars on the housing market. The upside was undeniable--superbanks reaped billions of dollars, dominated the landscape, and gobbled up competitors. Then the bottom dropped out--the massive losses on Wall Street nearly broke the banks. In the worst crisis in decades, brand name banks are on the brink of failure. Now as the federal government contemplates what could become a massive nationalization of the industry, FRONTLINE goes behind closed doors to tell the inside story of how things went so wrong so fast and to document efforts to stabilize the industry. Veteran FRONTLINE producer Michael Kirk (Inside the Meltdown) untangles the complicated financial and political web threatening one particular superbank--Bank of America.

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times, David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

At a research site in Fongoli, Senegal, a female chimpanzee breaks off a branch, chews the end to make it sharp, then uses this rudimentary spear to skewer a tasty bushbaby hiding inside a hollow tree. The footage represents an astonishing breakthrough for primate researchers: It's the first time anyone has documented a chimpanzee wielding a carefully prepared, preplanned weapon. But it's only the latest in a slew of extraordinary new findings about ape behavior. The more researchers learn about the great apes -- chimpanzees, bonobos, gorillas, and orangutans -- the more evidence they find of creative intelligence. What, then, is the essential difference between us and them? "Ape Genius," a NOVA-National Geographic special, explores that provocative question and examines research that is illuminating the ape mind.

How massive student loan debts are sinking American dreams and causing a national economic headache. This week, NOW follows the story of a single mother in Baltimore trying to dig herself out of more than $70,000 student loan debt. While issues of personal responsibility are debated, there's no question the high price of higher education is creating an ocean of student loan debt for people who can least afford it. How are the 70 million Americans with student debt frustrating America's economic recovery?

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times,

David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

The bets were huge and risky--billions of dollars on the housing market. The upside was undeniable--superbanks reaped billions of dollars, dominated the landscape, and gobbled up competitors. Then the bottom dropped out--the massive losses on Wall Street nearly broke the banks. In the worst crisis in decades, brand name banks are on the brink of failure. Now as the federal government contemplates what could become a massive nationalization of the industry, FRONTLINE goes behind closed doors to tell the inside story of how things went so wrong so fast and to document efforts to stabilize the industry. Veteran FRONTLINE producer Michael Kirk (Inside the Meltdown) untangles the complicated financial and political web threatening one particular superbank--Bank of America.

Upheaval in Iran and walking the domestic high wire at home, tonight on Washington Week. The uprising that captured the world's attention--Iran at the brink as the U.S. watches with caution and concern. What next? At home, walking the domestic tight rope on regulating the financial system. Sec. Timothy Geithner said, "Some people think we're being unfair, doing way too much, overdoing it." And some people are going to say we're not doing enough. On the cost of health care reform. Sec. Kathleen Sebelius said, "What we're doing right now is rationing quality, not cost. Higher cost does not translate to higher quality." Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I suggest we not move forward until we have some provision as to how we're going to pay for it." And on keeping campaign promises on political fundraising, closing Guantanamo, and expanding gay rights. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I am proud to announce my support for the Domestic Partners Benefits and Obligations Act." The rubber hits the road for the Obama administration. We explain why with the reporters covering the week: Barbara Slavin of the Washington Times,

David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Karen Tumulty, of Time Magazine, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

As the June 2009 digital television conversion makes tens of millions of analog TVs obsolete, and Americans continue to trash old computers and cell phones at alarming rates, FRONTLINE/WORLD presents a global investigation into the dirty secret of the digital age -- the dumping of hundreds of millions of pounds of electronic waste around the world each year. Tracking "e-waste" to the slums of Ghana and the far-off provinces in China, producer/correspondent Peter Klein and his team of graduate journalism students fan out around the world to document the growing impact of this toxic trash on those who desperately scavenge it for precious metals. They also explore the potential threats to privacy, as criminal gangs attempt to harvest data from America's old computers and cell phones and exploit it. Also in this hour, a popular competition to inspire a new generation of entrepreneurs in the Middle East, and a pioneering effort to make an affordable wheelchair for the developing world.

The president searches for the right tone on Iran, the Supreme Court weighs in on voting rights and student rights, and the gubernatorial mystery in South Carolina, tonight on "Washington Week." With Iran still in chaos, walking the U.S. policy tightrope. President Barack Obama said, "No iron fist is strong enough to shut off the world from bearing witness to peaceful protests of justice." But how does the president scold Iran's leadership while keeping the door open to nuclear negotiation? From climate change to health care - how the president is getting his message across. At the Supreme Court, two critical decisions on voting rights and on students rights. While a three-ring circus erupts in South Carolina. Gov. Mark Sanford said, "And so the bottom line is this: I've been unfaithful to my wife." State Rep. Todd Rutherford said, "I'm stunned. This is not what I expected." The dramatic fall of a rising star. Covering the week, David Sanger of the "New York Times," John Dickerson of "Slate" Magazine and CBS News, Pete Williams of NBC News, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

While America, a country of immigrants, has always championed the idea of inclusiveness, the outsider has been a source of constant amusement. Perhaps best epitomized today by characters in such blockbuster Judd Apatow comedies as "The 40 Year-Old Virgin," "Knocked Up" and "Superbad," this episode also looks back at the bespectacled wannabe (Harold Lloyd) and the vain coward (Bob Hope) as the outsiders of their day. Along with pioneering women in comedy like Phyllis Diller and truly zany characters who seem to have arrived from another planet (Jonathan Winters, Andy Kaufman, and Robin Williams), the great social upheaval of the 60s and 70s introduced counter-culture favorites Cheech & Chong, as well as superstar nerds like Woody Allen and "jerks" like Steve Martin--who ultimately became so popular that the idea of the outsider had to be re-cast.

Lake Wobegon -- where the women are strong, the men are good looking and all the children are above average -- has become America's collective hometown, visited weekly for the past 40 years on a fictional radio program that creates authentic nostalgia. With his Prairie Home Companion, Garrison Keillor became our national philosopher, filling the shoes of Will Rogers and Mark Twain, through his running commentary about the human condition and the social politic. With biting wit, a quirky perspective and an uncanny ability to hone in on the pulse of America, Keillor's themes and characters are somehow familiar to us all, resonating a shared experience. For more than a year, our camera has followed this great raconteur -- and his motley crew of actors, musicians and technical staff -- as he criss-crosses the country, broadcasting, recording and revealing himself.

St. Valentine's Day Massacre - HISTORY DETECTIVES stares down the barrel of a shotgun for clues that one of Al Capone's men fired it in a Chicago gang massacre that shocked the nation. The gun came to the contributor's family after it was handed down through two generations of prominent Chicago families. It's a Western Field single-barreled repeating action 12-gauge shotgun. The barrel and the stock were once shortened just the way the Capone gang liked its guns: easy to conceal and with greater destructive force. HISTORY DETECTIVES host Elyse Luray tests the gun's firepower, consults with ballistics experts and combs through physical evidence to see if she can place this gun at the scene of the crime. Booth Letter - A contributor gave HISTORY DETECTIVES a letter indicating that, 30 years before John Wilkes Booth assassinated Abraham Lincoln, Booth's father threatened to kill another sitting president, Andrew Jackson. Signed "Junius Brutus Booth," the letter to Jackson reads, "You damn'd old scoundrel ... I will cut your throat whilst you are sleeping." The writer insists that Jackson pardon two men who were sentenced to death. Why did the fate of these two men incite such fury? HISTORY DETECTIVES host Tukufu Zuberi travels to Nashville to consult historians at The Hermitage, the ancestral home of President Andrew Jackson, and to Washington, DC, to talk with a Booth biographer. Was the letter a hoax? Or did assassination run in the Booth blood? Cemetery Alarm - A Midland, Michigan, man who collects war munitions snapped up an item at an estate auction that looked like a Civil War-era weapon. On closer inspection, after consulting with other collectors, he decided he had a grave alarm: an explosive device meant to guard against grave robbers. Is this truly a grave alarm? HISTORY DETECTIVES host Wes Cowan's investigation winds through tales of body snatching and cadaver dissecting, unusual crimes and the most unlikely suspects.

In the ongoing war against hypocrisy, conservatism, political correctness, prejudice, prudery, censorship, sentimentality, liberalism, extremism and complacency, it was always the comedian who led the first wave of attack. Rather than using risqué jokes and four letter words simply to get a rise out of an audience, the most audacious comedians - from pioneers like Mae West and Moms Mabley to 60s and 70s bad boys like Lenny Bruce, Richard Pryor and George Carlin - invoked what the First Amendment to the American Constitution calls "freedom of speech" to bring the biggest and most dangerous laughs to the American public.

Physical comedy and slapstick have always found rich soil in America. From the mastery of Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton to the computer-generated antics that helped transform Jim Carrey into a human cartoon, slapstick has evolved into a sophisticated art, stretching the boundaries of time and space. This episode explores the comic genius of teams like Laurel and Hardy, the Three Stooges, Martin and Lewis and the Marx Brothers, and the one and only Lucille Ball.

In the ongoing war against hypocrisy, conservatism, political correctness, prejudice, prudery, censorship, sentimentality, liberalism, extremism and complacency, it was always the comedian who led the first wave of attack. Rather than using risqué jokes and four letter words simply to get a rise out of an audience, the most audacious comedians - from pioneers like Mae West and Moms Mabley to 60s and 70s bad boys like Lenny Bruce, Richard Pryor and George Carlin - invoked what the First Amendment to the American Constitution calls "freedom of speech" to bring the biggest and most dangerous laughs to the American public.

Lake Wobegon -- where the women are strong, the men are good looking and all the children are above average -- has become America's collective hometown, visited weekly for the past 40 years on a fictional radio program that creates authentic nostalgia. With his Prairie Home Companion, Garrison Keillor became our national philosopher, filling the shoes of Will Rogers and Mark Twain, through his running commentary about the human condition and the social politic. With biting wit, a quirky perspective and an uncanny ability to hone in on the pulse of America, Keillor's themes and characters are somehow familiar to us all, resonating a shared experience. For more than a year, our camera has followed this great raconteur -- and his motley crew of actors, musicians and technical staff -- as he criss-crosses the country, broadcasting, recording and revealing himself.

Lake Wobegon -- where the women are strong, the men are good looking and all the children are above average -- has become America's collective hometown, visited weekly for the past 40 years on a fictional radio program that creates authentic nostalgia. With his Prairie Home Companion, Garrison Keillor became our national philosopher, filling the shoes of Will Rogers and Mark Twain, through his running commentary about the human condition and the social politic. With biting wit, a quirky perspective and an uncanny ability to hone in on the pulse of America, Keillor's themes and characters are somehow familiar to us all, resonating a shared experience. For more than a year, our camera has followed this great raconteur -- and his motley crew of actors, musicians and technical staff -- as he criss-crosses the country, broadcasting, recording and revealing himself.

In the ongoing war against hypocrisy, conservatism, political correctness, prejudice, prudery, censorship, sentimentality, liberalism, extremism and complacency, it was always the comedian who led the first wave of attack. Rather than using risqué jokes and four letter words simply to get a rise out of an audience, the most audacious comedians - from pioneers like Mae West and Moms Mabley to 60s and 70s bad boys like Lenny Bruce, Richard Pryor and George Carlin - invoked what the First Amendment to the American Constitution calls "freedom of speech" to bring the biggest and most dangerous laughs to the American public.

To the Congress, the new senator from Minnesota and the Supreme Court term ends, tonight on "Washington Week." Gen. Ray Odierno said, "I think from a military and security standpoint it's time for us to move out of the cities." The deadline arrived and U.S. troops left town, but 130,000 service members remain. And the violence continues. Where do we stand in Iraq? At home, President Obama tackles other ups and downs, a win last week on climate change and uncertain path ahead on health care. In Minnesota, an election decided eight months after the voting ended. SEN. AL FRANKEN (D-MN) said, "Well, it was close, but we won." While winners and losers are still sorting out this year's Supreme Court term. Covering the week: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Dan Balz of the "Washington Post," Naftali Bendavid of the "Wall Street" Journal, and Joan Biskupic of "USA Today".

Reality check, the president in Russia and in Rome, while domestic pressures build at home. Plus, Palin 2012 -- why it might yet happen, tonight on "Washington Week." Meeting popes and presidents -- it's all part of the job for any U.S. leader. Pres. Barack Obama says, "And we've not agreed on every point, but we've shown that it's possible to move forward and make real and unprecedented progress together." Still, from climate change abroad to economic and health care fixes at home, President Obama saw more hurdles than hoorays this week. Vice Pres. Joe Biden says, "The truth is there was a misreading of just how bad an economy we inherited." Pres. Obama says, "Rather than say misread, we had incomplete information." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) says, "Now, this is the greatest fabrication I've seen since I've been in Congress." Are health care and economic stimulus off track, and what can the president do to get them back on? Plus, the week's political mystery. Gov. Sarah Palin says, "I'm not going to close any door that may be open for me out there." Is Sarah Palin's career over or just beginning? Covering the week: Doyle McManus of the "Los Angeles Times," Ceci Connolly of the "Washington Post," Deborah Solomon of the "Wall Street" Journal, and James Barnes of "National Journal."

In the ongoing war against hypocrisy, conservatism, political correctness, prejudice, prudery, censorship, sentimentality, liberalism, extremism and complacency, it was always the comedian who led the first wave of attack. Rather than using risqué jokes and four letter words simply to get a rise out of an audience, the most audacious comedians - from pioneers like Mae West and Moms Mabley to 60s and 70s bad boys like Lenny Bruce, Richard Pryor and George Carlin - invoked what the First Amendment to the American Constitution calls "freedom of speech" to bring the biggest and most dangerous laughs to the American public.

Tokyo Rose Recording--A HISTORY DETECTIVES viewer has a recording he thinks holds evidence used in the World War II treason trial of Iva Toguri, aka Tokyo Rose. Toguri was an American citizen who hosted a Japanese propaganda radio show broadcast to U.S. troops serving in the Pacific. These broadcasts were at the center of what was then the costliest trial in U.S. history. The viewer has never been able to play his oversized record, but family lore says it reveals the role his uncle played in this infamous show trial. HISTORY DETECTIVES host Gwendolyn Wright consults with experts from Long Island to Los Angeles. Her answer flips assumptions of guilt and innocence, and gives viewers a fresh angle on what actually happened in and around that trial. Crazy Horse Photo--Twenty-five years ago, someone gave a leather purse to a Lakota businessman. Inside the purse he found a photograph and a note, dated 1904, written in the Lakota language. An elderly man from the Lakota community translated the note. In brief, it says, "This is a photograph of Crazy Horse." Does the contributor have the Holy Grail of the Wild West: a photo of the Lakota warrior who defeated General Custer? Historians are suspicious of most photos purported to be of Crazy Horse. The Lakota leader avoided cameras, believing they would rob his soul. To verify the photo, HISTORY DETECTIVE host Elyse Luray tracks down a Crazy Horse descendant and visits the Crazy Horse Memorial. Finally, she puts the photo in context with other works by the same photographer at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, DC. WWII DIARY (encore presentation)--A man in Lexington, North Carolina, has a poignant diary written by a World War II pilot. He inherited the diary 20 years ago from his father, who said it once belonged to a close friend whom he fought alongside in WWII, until the war took his friend's life in 1944. Keeping the last thoughts of this fallen soldier is now too great a burden for the contributor. Can HISTORY DETECTIVES return it to a living relative? The stakes are raised as the diary pages reveal the story of a young American pilot stationed in England, racing against time and all odds to return home before the birth of his first child. Host Wes Cowan heads to Florida on a quest to reunite the diary with the pilot's surviving family.

Fighting Child Prostitution: Child prostitution is on the rise not just in other countries around the world, but right here in America. The Department of Justice says, on any given day, tens of thousands of children across America are involved in prostitution. But what's being done to stop it? This week NOW on PBS visits Atlanta, Georgia to see how one American city is handling the tragic phenomenon of child prostitution. It is one of 27 American cities where the problem seems to be spinning out of control.

Sotomayor at the Senate, health care reform lurches forward, mixed news on the economy, and keeping secrets from Congress, tonight on Washington Week. Sonia Sotomayor said, "Many senators have asked me about my judicial philosophy. Simple: fidelity to the law." Sonia Sotomayor speaks and so do senators, firefighters, supporters and detractors. After four days of Judiciary Committee hearings, were any minds changed? Sen. Dianne Feinstein (D-CA) said, "I find her remarkable. She gets a 10 for judicial temperament." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "Unless you have a complete meltdown, you're going to get confirmed. But what lines were drawn in the sand by the time the hearings were over? Elsewhere on Capitol Hill, health care legislation began emerging from the House and the Senate complete with deep partisan fault lines. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "Even though this wasn't a bipartisan vote, it's a bipartisan effort. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Democrats have completely shut us out of the process." And the nation's economic dilemma grows even more complicated. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I'm absolutely confident that we will weather this economic storm." But as big firms post new profits, some economists wonder if there really is a life at tunnel's end. Plus, a controversial plan to assassinate al Qaeda terrorists runs afoul of Congress. The professor, the policeman, and the president: did Barack Obama step on his own healthcare message, tonight on Washington Week. The first black president steps into his first racial controversy. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The Cambridge Police acted stupidly in arresting somebody when there was already proof that they were in their own home." And then, attempts to step away. Pres. Obama later stated, "There was an overreaction in pulling Professor Gates out of his home to the station. I also continue to believe, based on what I heard, that Professor Gates probably overreacted as well." The uproar threatened to overwhelm the administration's health-care push. A week of interviews, Rose Garden announcements, news conference and rallies. Pres. Obama said, "This nation cannot afford a future where our government spends more on Medicare and Medicaid than we spend on anything else. This is the price of doing nothing about health care." But some remain unmoved. Rep. Eric Cantor (R-VA) said, "This administration, this president has no one else to blame. They have no straw man, they have no press conferences left." On the Hill, Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke pushes the reset button. Ben Bernanke [Federal Reserve Chairman] said, "We have a much better situation today than we would have if we had seen a collapse of the global financial system last October." Is anybody listening? Six months in, is the president truly hitting a rough patch, or are the White House and the Congress in a standoff? We take a look, tonight on Washington Week. As the president's popularity begins to slide, the test narrows down to the future of health care. Pres. Barack Obama said, "Nobody is talking about some government takeover of health care. I'm tired of hearing that." Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "The only problem we have with having a bipartisan bill is the Republican leadership in the Senate." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "Some in Congress seem to be in such a rush--such a rush to pass any reform rather than the right reform." Sen. Chuck Grassley (R-IA) said, "The trouble is you folks are looking for news and there ain't no news." But there has been news and it's all about complicated choices, whether it's about reviving the economy. Pres. Obama said, "We now have problems. We're going to have to tighten our belt. But we can't do it in the middle of the stimulus. We can't do it in the middle--just as the economy is coming out of recession. Sen. Jim Demint (R-SC) said, "He's taken a bad economy and made it worse." Or tackling racial reconciliation by photo-op, whatever happened to the summer doldrums?. The hurricane season of 2004 is categorized as one of the most active on record. It begins with an uneventful June and July then suddenly turns violent in August. Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami are confronted with satellite images showing a steady stream of tropical storms spinning across the Atlantic from Africa. Combining their experience with the latest technology, they focus on making the most accurate predictions. As Hurricane Specialist Jack Bevens says, "If you get it wrong you can get a lot of people killed." No one wants to risk a wrong forecast. Anatomy of a Hurricane goes behind the scenes at the National Hurricane Center to see forecasters on a mission to save lives and property. It is a look at the stressful work of a dedicated staff as they track Charley, Frances, Ivan and Jeanne - all major hurricanes with unexpected challenges. It is also a look at the complicated dynamics of the atmosphere - why these hurricanes form and where they go.

From the beginning, honeybees have played a key role in human survival. Most fruit trees and vegetable species are entirely dependent on bees to produce, and there's no artificial replacement for natural pollination. But the bees are disappearing. Massive die-offs, first reported in November 2006, are now the subject of international emergency research as scientists race to discover the cause of this ecological disaster. Could it be a disease? Is it caused by pesticides, genetically modified foods or radiation from cell phone towers? Whatever is happening, we must solve the mystery and correct the problem soon or face unimaginable consequences.

Sotomayor at the Senate, health care reform lurches forward, mixed news on the economy, and keeping secrets from Congress, tonight on Washington Week.

Sonia Sotomayor said, "Many senators have asked me about my judicial philosophy. Simple: fidelity to the law." Sonia Sotomayor speaks and so do senators, firefighters, supporters and detractors. After four days of Judiciary Committee hearings, were any minds changed? Sen. Dianne Feinstein (D-CA) said, "I find her remarkable. She gets a 10 for judicial temperament." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "Unless you have a complete meltdown, you're going to get confirmed. But what lines were drawn in the sand by the time the hearings were over? Elsewhere on Capitol Hill, health care legislation began emerging from the House and the Senate complete with deep partisan fault lines. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "Even though this wasn't a bipartisan vote, it's a bipartisan effort. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Democrats have completely shut us out of the process." And the nation's economic dilemma grows even more complicated. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I'm absolutely confident that we will weather this economic storm." But as big firms post new profits, some economists wonder if there really is a life at tunnel's end. Plus, a controversial plan to assassinate al Qaeda terrorists runs afoul of Congress. Covering the week: Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, and Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times.

The professor, the policeman, and the president: did Barack Obama step on his own healthcare message, tonight on Washington Week. The first black president steps into his first racial controversy. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The Cambridge Police acted stupidly in arresting somebody when there was already proof that they were in their own home." And then, attempts to step away. Pres. Obama later stated, "There was an overreaction in pulling Professor Gates out of his home to the station. I also continue to believe, based on what I heard, that Professor Gates probably overreacted as well." The uproar threatened to overwhelm the administration's health-care push. A week of interviews, Rose Garden announcements, news conference and rallies. Pres. Obama said, "This nation cannot afford a future where our government spends more on Medicare and Medicaid than we spend on anything else. This is the price of doing nothing about health care." But some remain unmoved. Rep. Eric Cantor (R-VA) said, "This administration, this president has no one else to blame. They have no straw man, they have no press conferences left." On the Hill, Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke pushes the reset button. Ben Bernanke [Federal Reserve Chairman] said, "We have a much better situation today than we would have if we had seen a collapse of the global financial system last October." Is anybody listening? Covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Michael Fletcher of the Washington Post, Marylyn Werber Serafini of National Journal, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

Six months in, is the president truly hitting a rough patch, or are the White House and the Congress in a standoff? We take a look, tonight on Washington Week. As the president's popularity begins to slide, the test narrows down to the future of health care. Pres. Barack Obama said, "Nobody is talking about some government takeover of health care. I'm tired of hearing that." Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "The only problem we have with having a bipartisan bill is the Republican leadership in the Senate." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "Some in Congress seem to be in such a rush--such a rush to pass any reform rather than the right reform." Sen. Chuck Grassley (R-IA) said, "The trouble is you folks are looking for news and there ain't no news." But there has been news and it's all about complicated choices, whether it's about reviving the economy. Pres. Obama said, "We now have problems. We're going to have to tighten our belt. But we can't do it in the middle of the stimulus. We can't do it in the middle--just as the economy is coming out of recession. Sen. Jim Demint (R-SC) said, "He's taken a bad economy and made it worse." Or tackling racial reconciliation by photo-op, whatever happened to the summer doldrums?. Covering the week: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, and Alexis Simendinger of National Journal.

Sotomayor at the Senate, health care reform lurches forward, mixed news on the economy, and keeping secrets from Congress, tonight on Washington Week. Sonia Sotomayor said, "Many senators have asked me about my judicial philosophy. Simple: fidelity to the law." Sonia Sotomayor speaks and so do senators, firefighters, supporters and detractors. After four days of Judiciary Committee hearings, were any minds changed? Sen. Dianne Feinstein (D-CA) said, "I find her remarkable. She gets a 10 for judicial temperament." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "Unless you have a complete meltdown, you're going to get confirmed. But what lines were drawn in the sand by the time the hearings were over? Elsewhere on Capitol Hill, health care legislation began emerging from the House and the Senate complete with deep partisan fault lines. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "Even though this wasn't a bipartisan vote, it's a bipartisan effort. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Democrats have completely shut us out of the process." And the nation's economic dilemma grows even more complicated. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I'm absolutely confident that we will weather this economic storm." But as big firms post new profits, some economists wonder if there really is a life at tunnel's end. Plus, a controversial plan to assassinate al Qaeda terrorists runs afoul of Congress. Covering the week: Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, and Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times.

The professor, the policeman, and the president: did Barack Obama step on his own healthcare message, tonight on Washington Week. The first black president steps into his first racial controversy. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The Cambridge Police acted stupidly in arresting somebody when there was already proof that they were in their own home." And then, attempts to step away. Pres. Obama later stated, "There was an overreaction in pulling Professor Gates out of his home to the station. I also continue to believe, based on what I heard, that Professor Gates probably overreacted as well." The uproar threatened to overwhelm the administration's health-care push. A week of interviews, Rose Garden announcements, news conference and rallies. Pres. Obama said, "This nation cannot afford a future where our government spends more on Medicare and Medicaid than we spend on anything else. This is the price of doing nothing about health care." But some remain unmoved. Rep. Eric Cantor (R-VA) said, "This administration, this president has no one else to blame. They have no straw man, they have no press conferences left." On the Hill, Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke pushes the reset button. Ben Bernanke [Federal Reserve Chairman] said, "We have a much better situation today than we would have if we had seen a collapse of the global financial system last October." Is anybody listening? Covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Michael Fletcher of the Washington Post, Marylyn Werber Serafini of National Journal, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

Six months in, is the president truly hitting a rough patch, or are the White House and the Congress in a standoff? We take a look, tonight on Washington Week. As the president's popularity begins to slide, the test narrows down to the future of health care. Pres. Barack Obama said, "Nobody is talking about some government takeover of health care. I'm tired of hearing that." Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "The only problem we have with having a bipartisan bill is the Republican leadership in the Senate." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "Some in Congress seem to be in such a rush--such a rush to pass any reform rather than the right reform." Sen. Chuck Grassley (R-IA) said, "The trouble is you folks are looking for news and there ain't no news." But there has been news and it's all about complicated choices, whether it's about reviving the economy. Pres. Obama said, "We now have problems. We're going to have to tighten our belt. But we can't do it in the middle of the stimulus. We can't do it in the middle--just as the economy is coming out of recession.

Sen. Jim Demint (R-SC) said, "He's taken a bad economy and made it worse." Or tackling racial reconciliation by photo-op, whatever happened to the summer doldrums?. Covering the week: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, and Alexis Simendinger of National Journal.

Sotomayor at the Senate, health care reform lurches forward, mixed news on the economy, and keeping secrets from Congress, tonight on Washington Week. Sonia Sotomayor said, "Many senators have asked me about my judicial philosophy. Simple: fidelity to the law." Sonia Sotomayor speaks and so do senators, firefighters, supporters and detractors. After four days of Judiciary Committee hearings, were any minds changed? Sen. Dianne Feinstein (D-CA) said, "I find her remarkable. She gets a 10 for judicial temperament." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "Unless you have a complete meltdown, you're going to get confirmed. But what lines were drawn in the sand by the time the hearings were over? Elsewhere on Capitol Hill, health care legislation began emerging from the House and the Senate complete with deep partisan fault lines. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "Even though this wasn't a bipartisan vote, it's a bipartisan effort. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Democrats have completely shut us out of the process." And the nation's economic dilemma grows even more complicated. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I'm absolutely confident that we will weather this economic storm." But as big firms post new profits, some economists wonder if there really is a life at tunnel's end. Plus, a controversial plan to assassinate al Qaeda terrorists runs afoul of Congress. The professor, the policeman, and the president: did Barack Obama step on his own healthcare message, tonight on Washington Week. The first black president steps into his first racial controversy. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The Cambridge Police acted stupidly in arresting somebody when there was already proof that they were in their own home." And then, attempts to step away. Pres. Obama later stated, "There was an overreaction in pulling Professor Gates out of his home to the station. I also continue to believe, based on what I heard, that Professor Gates probably overreacted as well." The uproar threatened to overwhelm the administration's health-care push. A week of interviews, Rose Garden announcements, news conference and rallies. Pres. Obama said, "This nation cannot afford a future where our government spends more on Medicare and Medicaid than we spend on anything else. This is the price of doing nothing about health care." But some remain unmoved. Rep. Eric Cantor (R-VA) said, "This administration, this president has no one else to blame. They have no straw man, they have no press conferences left." On the Hill, Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke pushes the reset button. Ben Bernanke [Federal Reserve Chairman] said, "We have a much better situation today than we would have if we had seen a collapse of the global financial system last October." Is anybody listening? Covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Michael Fletcher of the Washington Post, Marylyn Werber Serafini of National Journal, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

Six months in, is the president truly hitting a rough patch, or are the White House and the Congress in a standoff? We take a look, tonight on Washington Week. As the president's popularity begins to slide, the test narrows down to the future of health care. Pres. Barack Obama said, "Nobody is talking about some government takeover of health care. I'm tired of hearing that." Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "The only problem we have with having a bipartisan bill is the Republican leadership in the Senate." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "Some in Congress seem to be in such a rush--such a rush to pass any reform rather than the right reform." Sen. Chuck Grassley (R-IA) said, "The trouble is you folks are looking for news and there ain't no news." But there has been news and it's all about complicated choices, whether it's about reviving the economy. Pres. Obama said, "We now have problems. We're going to have to tighten our belt. But we can't do it in the middle of the stimulus. We can't do it in the middle--just as the economy is coming out of recession. Sen. Jim Demint (R-SC) said, "He's taken a bad economy and made it worse." Or tackling racial reconciliation by photo-op, whatever happened to the summer doldrums?. Covering the week: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, and Alexis Simendinger of National Journal.

The hurricane season of 2004 is categorized as one of the most active on record. It begins with an uneventful June and July then suddenly turns violent in August. Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami are confronted with satellite images showing a steady stream of tropical storms spinning across the Atlantic from Africa. Combining their experience with the latest technology, they focus on making the most accurate predictions. As Hurricane Specialist Jack Bevens says, "If you get it wrong you can get a lot of people killed." No one wants to risk a wrong forecast. Anatomy of a Hurricane goes behind the scenes at the National Hurricane Center to see forecasters on a mission to save lives and property. It is a look at the stressful work of a dedicated staff as they track Charley, Frances, Ivan and Jeanne - all major hurricanes with unexpected challenges. It is also a look at the complicated dynamics of the atmosphere - why these hurricanes form and where they go.

Sotomayor at the Senate, health care reform lurches forward, mixed news on the economy, and keeping secrets from Congress, tonight on Washington Week. Sonia Sotomayor said, "Many senators have asked me about my judicial philosophy. Simple: fidelity to the law." Sonia Sotomayor speaks and so do senators, firefighters, supporters and detractors. After four days of Judiciary Committee hearings, were any minds changed? Sen. Dianne Feinstein (D-CA) said, "I find her remarkable. She gets a 10 for judicial temperament." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "Unless you have a complete meltdown, you're going to get confirmed. But what lines were drawn in the sand by the time the hearings were over? Elsewhere on Capitol Hill, health care legislation began emerging from the House and the Senate complete with deep partisan fault lines. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "Even though this wasn't a bipartisan vote, it's a bipartisan effort. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "Democrats have completely shut us out of the process." And the nation's economic dilemma grows even more complicated. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I'm absolutely confident that we will weather this economic storm." But as big firms post new profits, some economists wonder if there really is a life at tunnel's end. Plus, a controversial plan to assassinate al Qaeda terrorists runs afoul of Congress. Covering the week: Joan Biskupic of USA Today, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, and Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times.

Gambling with Health Care: Losing your job is a blow not just to your income, but also to your health insurance. Many can't afford high COBRA premiums, much less private insurance. And the sputtering economy is making a bad situation tragic. NOW travels to Nevada, where a huge budget deficit, spiking unemployment, and cuts in Medicaid and other public services are forcing people to gamble with their own lives. Recently, the only public hospital in Las Vegas had to shut its doors to cancer patients and pregnant women. Should the government be helping out? NOW shares the human stories behind the distressing numbers, and investigates possible solutions and responses with insight from Dr. Howard Dean, former Vermont governor and chairman of the Democratic National Committee. With the economic disaster blowing holes in society's health care safety net, who's left to catch our fall?

Power Struggle: Will the green energy dream come to fruition? This week NOW explores obstacles to the promise of renewables--energy generated from natural resources such as sunlight, wind, and rain. NOW travels to California, which has the most ambitious clean energy plan in the nation. But the state's efforts face stiff opposition from property owners and conservationists who prefer renewable energy from "local sources," such as photovoltaic rooftop solar panels. Complicating the matter are claims that the transmission lines are not actually carrying renewable energy at all, but represent a thinly-disguised strategy to stick to old energy practices.

A surprise report on unemployment, the debate of health care reform begins in earnest across America, and Bill Clinton's excellent adventure. I'm John Dickerson, sitting in for Gwen Ifill, tonight on Washington Week. Tempered optimism on the economy. Pres. Barack Obama, said, "This morning we received additional signs that the worst may be behind us." From brighter unemployment news, to showrooms conducting commerce again, the economy seems to be on the rebound, but is it the president's doing? The debate over health care moves from Washington. Sen. Jim Demint said, "The Democrats are fighting any real health care reform. They're insistent on a single-payer government takeover." To the heartland, where it's gotten noisy. Sen. Harry Reid said, "In spite of those loud, shrill voices trying to interrupt town hall meetings and just throwing a monkey wrench into everything, we're going to continue to be positive and work hard." Is August make or break time for health care reform? And the secret mission to North Korea by Bill Clinton. Does the release of two captured journalists signal a thaw with the reclusive Korean leader? Covering these stories this week John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

Gambling with Health Care: Losing your job is a blow not just to your income, but also to your health insurance. Many can't afford high COBRA premiums, much less private insurance. And the sputtering economy is making a bad situation tragic. NOW travels to Nevada, where a huge budget deficit, spiking unemployment, and cuts in Medicaid and other public services are forcing people to gamble with their own lives. Recently, the only public hospital in Las Vegas had to shut its doors to cancer patients and pregnant women. Should the government be helping out? NOW shares the human stories behind the distressing numbers, and investigates possible solutions and responses with insight from Dr. Howard Dean, former Vermont governor and chairman of the Democratic National Committee. With the economic disaster blowing holes in society's health care safety net, who's left to catch our fall?

A surprise report on unemployment, the debate of health care reform begins in earnest across America, and Bill Clinton's excellent adventure. I'm John Dickerson, sitting in for Gwen Ifill, tonight on Washington Week. Tempered optimism on the economy. Pres. Barack Obama, said, "This morning we received additional signs that the worst may be behind us." From brighter unemployment news, to showrooms conducting commerce again, the economy seems to be on the rebound, but is it the president's doing? The debate over health care moves from Washington. Sen. Jim Demint said, "The Democrats are fighting any real health care reform. They're insistent on a single-payer government takeover." To the heartland, where it's gotten noisy. Sen. Harry Reid said, "In spite of those loud, shrill voices trying to interrupt town hall meetings and just throwing a monkey wrench into everything, we're going to continue to be positive and work hard." Is August make or break time for health care reform? And the secret mission to North Korea by Bill Clinton. Does the release of two captured journalists signal a thaw with the reclusive Korean leader? Covering these stories this week John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

Power Struggle: Will the green energy dream come to fruition? This week NOW explores obstacles to the promise of renewables--energy generated from natural resources such as sunlight, wind, and rain. NOW travels to California, which has the most ambitious clean energy plan in the nation. But the state's efforts face stiff opposition from property owners and conservationists who prefer renewable energy from "local sources," such as photovoltaic rooftop solar panels. Complicating the matter are claims that the transmission lines are not actually carrying renewable energy at all, but represent a thinly-disguised strategy to stick to old energy practices.

Presidential rumor control in the health care debate, calling the shots in the battle against swine flu, Hillary Clinton's mission to Africa, and what's next for Afghanistan. I'm Pete Williams sitting in for Gwen Ifill, tonight on Washington Week. The president takes to the road to put out wildfires over health care reform. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The way politics works sometimes is that people who want to keep things the way they are will try to scare the heck out of folks." How fear about an end-of-life provision has become the viral talking point in the reform debate. The start of the school year also means flu season is just around the corner. The younger individuals and pregnant women appear to be much more vulnerable to serious disease. The government's plan to get ahead of the swine flu virus. Hillary Clinton spends 11 days in Africa, but was it a lost-in-translation moment that overshadowed her mission? Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "Wait, you want me to tell you what my husband thinks? My husband is not the secretary of state. I am." Questions of substance and standing for the secretary of state. And while U.S. troops drawdown in Iraq, the fighting intensifies in Afghanistan on the eve of presidential elections there. Secretary of Defense Robert Gates said, "They're obviously holding an election in adverse circumstances. How the Taliban is forcing changes in U.S. strategy. Covering these stories this week: Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Janine Zacharia of Bloomberg News, and James Kitfield of National Journal.

This film focuses not just on Cole's celebrity, but on the Civil Rights Movement and how this performer uniquely broke through major racial barriers in the entertainment industry -- he was the first black American to have his own national radio show, in 1948, and he was the first black American to have his own television show, in 1956. His musical origins were as a young Chicago jazz pianist but he became known as -- and accepted as, even in those turbulent times -- a melodious, smooth singer of such popular songs as Mona Lisa, Too Young, It's Only a Paper Moon, Unforgettable and the Christmas season perennial Chestnuts Roasting on an Open Fire. With open access to the Cole family -- including, of course, his daughter Natalie -- and his record label (EMI) archives, a picture of great courage is painted.

"Objects and Memory" examines the response to items recovered or offered after 9/11 and other national tragedies. The film uses objects and accounts of people whose lives were affected, interviews with historians and poignant, powerful photographic images. Why do people value objects? What is it about a piece of paper, a chunk of metal or a small coin that provokes such powerful memories? Without the objects, the stories would lack vibrancy; without the stories, the objects would lack significance. Taken together, images of these objects, the memories they evoke and the accounts of their collection lead viewers on a path where the commonplace is transformed into the remarkable and the stuff of history is highly personalized. The program, set to the music of Philip Glass, is narrated by Frank Langella.

In this special presentation from the United Kingdom's groundbreaking archaeology series, Time Team takes viewers on an expedition to Jamestown, where a British company's commercial enterprise planted the seeds of the United States. There have been nearly a million finds from the site's trenches, but this anniversary special is far more than just an excavation. The team retrieves piles of perfectly preserved 17th-century pieces, traces the names and life stories of the early American pioneers, and learns why a third of them died within months of arrival. The colonists at Jamestown went looking for gold and silver. Instead, they found fertile soil, tough conditions, and the beginnings of the world's most powerful nation. Then, in part two of this two hour special, we travel back to England, where Britain's most famous archaeologists discover what secrets lie buried beneath several of the world's most famous residences. Time Team tears into The Queen's gardens in an unprecedented opportunity to unearth the secrets of Windsor Castle and Buckingham Palace, where the royal finds include the foundation of a fourteenth century building where Edward III honored the legendary Arthurian knights.

The loss of a liberal lion, plus the Justice Department versus the CIA and the good news-bad news economy, tonight, on Washington Week. Thousands of mourners paid respects today to a man who lived the past and looked to the future. Sen. Ted Kennedy (D-MA) said, "This November, the torch will be passed again to a new generation of Americans." Pres. Barack Obama noted, "His ideas and ideals are stamped on scores of laws and reflected in millions of lives." Ted Kennedy's passing was not unexpected, but it leaves a void on domestic issues like health care. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "My hope is that this will maybe cause people to take a breath, step back, and start talking with each other again in more civil tones about what needs to be done." And on bipartisanship. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "He was never small. And in the process of his doing, he made everybody he worked with bigger." As Massachusetts and the nation mourns, what comes next? In other news, Attorney General Eric Holder goes toe-to-toe with CIA Director Leon Panetta over detainee interrogations. "If threatening a prisoner with an electric drill isn't torture, I'm not sure what is." How far will the investigation go? And as Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke wins reappointment, stocks gain but deficit projections explode. Is there a silver lining anywhere? Covering the week, David Broder of the Washington Post, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Pete Williams of NBC News, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

"Objects and Memory" examines the response to items recovered or offered after 9/11 and other national tragedies. The film uses objects and accounts of people whose lives were affected, interviews with historians and poignant, powerful photographic images. Why do people value objects? What is it about a piece of paper, a chunk of metal or a small coin that provokes such powerful memories? Without the objects, the stories would lack vibrancy; without the stories, the objects would lack significance. Taken together, images of these objects, the memories they evoke and the accounts of their collection lead viewers on a path where the commonplace is transformed into the remarkable and the stuff of history is highly personalized. The program, set to the music of Philip Glass, is narrated by Frank Langella.

In this special presentation from the United Kingdom's groundbreaking archaeology series, Time Team takes viewers on an expedition to Jamestown, where a British company's commercial enterprise planted the seeds of the United States. There have been nearly a million finds from the site's trenches, but this anniversary special is far more than just an excavation. The team retrieves piles of perfectly preserved 17th-century pieces, traces the names and life stories of the early American pioneers, and learns why a third of them died within months of arrival. The colonists at Jamestown went looking for gold and silver. Instead, they found fertile soil, tough conditions, and the beginnings of the world's most powerful nation. Then, in part two of this two hour special, we travel back to England, where Britain's most famous archaeologists discover what secrets lie buried beneath several of the world's most famous residences. Time Team tears into The Queen's gardens in an unprecedented opportunity to unearth the secrets of Windsor Castle and Buckingham Palace, where the royal finds include the foundation of a fourteenth century building where Edward III honored the legendary Arthurian knights.

The story of the sycamore fig and its tiny pollinator describes one of the most remarkable relationships in the natural world - between a tree and a wasp. It is a relationship of utter dependency and a triumph of co-evolution. The detailed behavioral intrigue of the wasps that live hidden inside each fig contrasts with the tree's prominence in the African bush, where it is central to the lives of many animals - from elephants and ants, to birds and crocodiles. It provides for all, in ways which are diverse yet connected. Ultra-macro photography makes it possible to tell a wildlife story which has never been told before.

The waters off the tip of Southern Africa are a haven for sharks. Roughly 140 different species inhabit the cold waters along the western coast of the continent and the temperate seas along the east--huge, but harmless whale sharks, and predators like the fearsome Great White, 15-foot-long tiger sharks, swift short fin makos, and the sand tiger shark, one of a surprisingly large number of cannibalistic members of the animal kingdom, in which sibling rivalry reaches murderous extremes.

This film focuses not just on Cole's celebrity, but on the Civil Rights Movement and how this performer uniquely broke through major racial barriers in the entertainment industry -- he was the first black American to have his own national radio show, in 1948, and he was the first black American to have his own television show, in 1956. His musical origins were as a young Chicago jazz pianist but he became known as -- and accepted as, even in those turbulent times -- a melodious, smooth singer of such popular songs as Mona Lisa, Too Young, It's Only a Paper Moon, Unforgettable and the Christmas season perennial Chestnuts Roasting on an Open Fire. With open access to the Cole family -- including, of course, his daughter Natalie -- and his record label (EMI) archives, a picture of great courage is painted.

A special program this week--your questions, our answers, all on the hot topic of this hot month: health care, tonight, on Washington Week. The questions are coming fast and furious. One man asked, "Why are we inviting 50 million illegal invaders, who broke federal law, into our health care system?" Then, a woman asked, "Why do you continue to support a Nazi policy as Obama has expressly supported this policy, why are you supporting it?" Rep. Barney Frank (D-MA) said, "On what planet do you spend most of your time?" But who do you trust to give you the answers. The president is trying. Pres. Barack Obama said, "We're going to have to cut through a lot of nonsense out there, a lot of absurd claims that have been made about health insurance reform." But is it too little too late? One woman said, "Call your senator. Stop the government takeover of health care." We asked for your questions and hundreds of you responded. Tonight's answers come from the reporters who have been covering the story--Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

The loss of a liberal lion, plus the Justice Department versus the CIA and the good news-bad news economy, tonight, on Washington Week. Thousands of mourners paid respects today to a man who lived the past and looked to the future. Sen. Ted Kennedy (D-MA) said, "This November, the torch will be passed again to a new generation of Americans." Pres. Barack Obama noted, "His ideas and ideals are stamped on scores of laws and reflected in millions of lives." Ted Kennedy's passing was not unexpected, but it leaves a void on domestic issues like health care. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "My hope is that this will maybe cause people to take a breath, step back, and start talking with each other again in more civil tones about what needs to be done." And on bipartisanship. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "He was never small. And in the process of his doing, he made everybody he worked with bigger." As Massachusetts and the nation mourns, what comes next? In other news, Attorney General Eric Holder goes toe-to-toe with CIA Director Leon Panetta over detainee interrogations. "If threatening a prisoner with an electric drill isn't torture, I'm not sure what is." How far will the investigation go? And as Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke wins reappointment, stocks gain but deficit projections explode. Is there a silver lining anywhere? Covering the week, David Broder of the Washington Post, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Pete Williams of NBC News, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

This film focuses not just on Cole's celebrity, but on the Civil Rights Movement and how this performer uniquely broke through major racial barriers in the entertainment industry -- he was the first black American to have his own national radio show, in 1948, and he was the first black American to have his own television show, in 1956. His musical origins were as a young Chicago jazz pianist but he became known as -- and accepted as, even in those turbulent times -- a melodious, smooth singer of such popular songs as Mona Lisa, Too Young, It's Only a Paper Moon, Unforgettable and the Christmas season perennial Chestnuts Roasting on an Open Fire. With open access to the Cole family -- including, of course, his daughter Natalie -- and his record label (EMI) archives, a picture of great courage is painted.

A special program this week--your questions, our answers, all on the hot topic of this hot month: health care, tonight, on Washington Week. The questions are coming fast and furious. One man asked, "Why are we inviting 50 million illegal invaders, who broke federal law, into our health care system?" Then, a woman asked, "Why do you continue to support a Nazi policy as Obama has expressly supported this policy, why are you supporting it?" Rep. Barney Frank (D-MA) said, "On what planet do you spend most of your time?" But who do you trust to give you the answers. The president is trying. Pres. Barack Obama said, "We're going to have to cut through a lot of nonsense out there, a lot of absurd claims that have been made about health insurance reform." But is it too little too late? One woman said,

"Call your senator. Stop the government takeover of health care." We asked for your questions and hundreds of you responded. Tonight's answers come from the reporters who have been covering the story--Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

The loss of a liberal lion, plus the Justice Department versus the CIA and the good news-bad news economy, tonight, on Washington Week. Thousands of mourners paid respects today to a man who lived the past and looked to the future. Sen. Ted Kennedy (D-MA) said, "This November, the torch will be passed again to a new generation of Americans." Pres. Barack Obama noted, "His ideas and ideals are stamped on scores of laws and reflected in millions of lives." Ted Kennedy's passing was not unexpected, but it leaves a void on domestic issues like health care. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "My hope is that this will maybe cause people to take a breath, step back, and start talking with each other again in more civil tones about what needs to be done." And on bipartisanship. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "He was never small. And in the process of his doing, he made everybody he worked with bigger." As Massachusetts and the nation mourns, what comes next? In other news, Attorney General Eric Holder goes toe-to-toe with CIA Director Leon Panetta over detainee interrogations. "If threatening a prisoner with an electric drill isn't torture, I'm not sure what is." How far will the investigation go? And as Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke wins reappointment, stocks gain but deficit projections explode. Is there a silver lining anywhere? Covering the week, David Broder of the Washington Post, Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Pete Williams of NBC News, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

"Objects and Memory" examines the response to items recovered or offered after 9/11 and other national tragedies. The film uses objects and accounts of people whose lives were affected, interviews with historians and poignant, powerful photographic images. Why do people value objects? What is it about a piece of paper, a chunk of metal or a small coin that provokes such powerful memories? Without the objects, the stories would lack vibrancy; without the stories, the objects would lack significance. Taken together, images of these objects, the memories they evoke and the accounts of their collection lead viewers on a path where the commonplace is transformed into the remarkable and the stuff of history is highly personalized. The program, set to the music of Philip Glass, is narrated by Frank Langella.

The most thoroughly handcrafted instruments in the world, Steinway pianos are as unique and full of personality as the world-class musicians who play them. However, their makers are a dying breed: skilled cabinet-makers, gifted tuners, thorough handcrafters. NOTE BY NOTE follows the creation of a Steinway concert grand, #L1037, from forest floor to concert hall, in a process spanning 12 months, 12,000 parts, 450 craftsmen and countless hours of fine-tuned labor. It explores the relationship between musician and instrument, chronicles the manufacturing process and illustrates what makes each Steinway unique in this age of mass production. Viewers are treated to interviews and impromptu performances with a number of world-class artists – including Chinese phenom Lang Lang, Hélène Grimaud, Pierre-Laurent Aimard, contemporary singer Harry Connick Jr. and jazz greats Hank Jones, Marcus Roberts, Kenny Barron and Bill Charlap – as they shop for and test out pianos in the basement of the Steinway showroom in New York City.

After Guantanamo: Closing Guantanamo Bay's prison will do little to close the debate on what we should do with alleged terrorists. This week NOW, as part of a collaboration with the nonprofit investigative unit ProPublica, explores the controversial tactic of "preventative detention," a government plan that may detain suspects indefinitely without trial or even formal charges. Implementing such a plan may have far-reaching consequences on not just our fight against terrorism, but the integrity of the U.S. Constitution and the cause of human rights. Even with President Obama in office and Guantanamo's days numbered, we're still asking: What price will we pay for peace on the ground and peace of mind?

A raucous presidential speech and a grim anniversary, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "The time for bickering is over. The time for games has passed. Now is the season for action." Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "I think it's fair to say that the President's speech was really a game changer." However, Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "There was nothing new in the president's speech last night." Game changer or nothing new? The president's big health care speech sets off another round of debate and a fair bit of recrimination too. Whether it was the president declaring that his plan would not hurt senior citizens--Pres. Obama said, "It is a lie plain and simple." -- or Republican Joe Wilson (R-SC) using the same word to denounce the president stating, "You lie." Lively debates everywhere you look in Washington this week, even as the Supreme Court weighs in on campaign finance law. Justice Stephen Breyer said, "I am suggesting we'll make a hash of this statute." While today the nation pauses to consider the consequences of 9/11 eight years later. Covering the week: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

The most thoroughly handcrafted instruments in the world, Steinway pianos are as unique and full of personality as the world-class musicians who play them. However, their makers are a dying breed: skilled cabinet-makers, gifted tuners, thorough handcrafters. NOTE BY NOTE follows the creation of a Steinway concert grand, #L1037, from forest floor to concert hall, in a process spanning 12 months, 12,000 parts, 450 craftsmen and countless hours of fine-tuned labor. It explores the relationship between musician and instrument, chronicles the manufacturing process and illustrates what makes each Steinway unique in this age of mass production. Viewers are treated to interviews and impromptu performances with a number of world-class artists -- including Chinese phenom Lang Lang, Hélène Grimaud, Pierre-Laurent Aimard, contemporary singer Harry Connick Jr. and jazz greats Hank Jones, Marcus Roberts, Kenny Barron and Bill Charlap -- as they shop for and test out pianos in the basement of the Steinway showroom in New York City.

In Part 1 of WIDE ANGLE's unprecedented, award-winning 12-year documentary project, Time for School, returns in 2009 with visits to seven classrooms in seven countries to offer a glimpse into the lives of seven extraordinary children who are struggling to get what nearly all American kids take for granted: a basic education. We started filming in 2002, watching as kids first entered school in Afghanistan, Benin, Brazil, India, Japan, Kenya and Romania, many despite great odds. Several years later, in 2006, we returned to film an update--and now, three years later, we travel to check in on our young teenagers who are making the precarious transition to middle school. These children's stories put a human face on the shocking fact that more than 75 million children are currently out of school; of these, two thirds are girls. One in four children in developing countries does not complete five years of basic education, and there are nearly one billion illiterate adults--one-sixth of the world's people. WIDE ANGLE plans to continue revisiting all the children, and their peers and families, through 2015, the year they should graduate--and, not coincidentally, the U.N.'s target date for achieving universal education, a Millennium Development goal endorsed by all 191 members of the United Nations. While each child in Time for School 3 has a unique story, taken together their lives tell an epic tale, shedding light on one of the most urgent and under-reported stories of our time.

It is a visual wonderland, where imposing mountains rise almost two vertical miles above sprawling salt flats and canyons are painted in strokes of blue, pink, violet, and green from sunrise to sunset. This is Death Valley -- one of the most inhospitable places on the planet. Nowhere else is a landscape so exquisite yet brutal, stunning yet harsh. Here, temperatures spike into the 130s, the earth cracks like broken clay, and when the hot wind blows, all you can taste is dust and salt. But, ironically, it is water that has shaped this super-arid home of true survivors.

A remote lake in Southeast Asia conceals evidence of Earth's greatest volcanic cataclysm of the last 100,000 years. Miles beneath its placid surface lies a magma chamber that exploded so violently during the Ice Age that gases and ash may have encircled the globe and blotted out the sun for years on end. The Toba eruption may have helped kick the climate into an unprecedented freeze and perhaps even pushed ancestral human populations to the brink of extinction. In a classic science detective story, NOVA pieces together the clues about this great catastrophe and probes questions raised about human evolution and Earth's fragile ecosystems.

How is it that dinosaurs managed to survive and even thrive in the gloom of the dark and frigid polar regions? This is one of today's most intriguing, little-known enigmas in paleontology. Now, a unique field expedition, covered exclusively by NOVA, will set out for Alaska's North Slope to defrost a jackpot of new fossil clues. With the help of stunning CGI, NOVA will breathe life into the polar dinosaurs' lives and environment in vivid detail. The team of researchers will combine extreme engineering and perilous fossil hunting, including digging a tunnel into the permafrost in order to collect the dinosaur bones. With Alaska's spectacular wilderness as a backdrop, this program will reveal a prehistoric lost world for the first time on television.

Africa: House Calls and Health Care. In rural Rwanda, the simple and time-tested idea of medical house calls is not only improving the health of the community, but stimulating its economy as well. This week, NOW travels to the village of Rwinkwavu to meet the Rwandan doctors, nurses and villagers who are teaming up with Boston-based Partners in Health and the Rwandan government to deliver medicine and medical counseling door-to-door. Would such an innovation work in America? In the capital of Kigali, NOW's David Brancaccio sits down with Rwandan President Paul Kagame to talk about international aid and Kagame's ultimate vision for a healthy, financially-independent Rwanda. This show is part of Enterprising Ideas, NOW's continuing spotlight on social entrepreneurs working to improve the world through self-sustaining innovation.

Summer vacation's over -- and how. We'll talk about it all tonight on Washington Week. It fell to the vice president to make the week's most straightforward observation about the prospects for a health care reform. The president puts all his chips on the table next week with a back-in-business address to a joint session of Congress. Health care is priority number one, but other issues loom: an increasingly unpopular war in Afghanistan. Secretary of Defense Robert Gates said, "I absolutely do not think it is time to get out of Afghanistan." -- a still struggling economy and a slippery political environment, all signal a tough autumn ahead. Joining us tonight for our Labor Day preview: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

A raucous presidential speech and a grim anniversary, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "The time for bickering is over. The time for games has passed. Now is the season for action." Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "I think it's fair to say that the President's speech was really a game changer." However, Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "There was nothing new in the president's speech last night." Game changer or nothing new? The president's big health care speech sets off another round of debate and a fair bit of recrimination too. Whether it was the president declaring that his plan would not hurt senior citizens--Pres. Obama said, "It is a lie plain and simple." -- or Republican Joe Wilson (R-SC) using the same word to denounce the president stating, "You lie." Lively debates everywhere you look in Washington this week, even as the Supreme Court weighs in on campaign finance law. Justice Stephen Breyer said, "I am suggesting we'll make a hash of this statute." While today the nation pauses to consider the consequences of 9/11 eight years later. Covering the week: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

After Guantanamo: Closing Guantanamo Bay's prison will do little to close the debate on what we should do with alleged terrorists. This week NOW, as part of a collaboration with the nonprofit investigative unit ProPublica, explores the controversial tactic of "preventative detention," a government plan that may detain suspects indefinitely without trial or even formal charges. Implementing such a plan may have far-reaching consequences on not just our fight against terrorism, but the integrity of the U.S. Constitution and the cause of human rights. Even with President Obama in office and Guantanamo's days numbered, we're still asking: What price will we pay for peace on the ground and peace of mind?

Summer vacation's over -- and how. We'll talk about it all tonight on Washington Week. It fell to the vice president to make the week's most straightforward observation about the prospects for a health care reform. The president puts all his chips on the table next week with a back-in-business address to a joint session of Congress. Health care is priority number one, but other issues loom: an increasingly unpopular war in Afghanistan. Secretary of Defense Robert Gates said, "I absolutely do not think it is time to get out of Afghanistan." -- a still struggling economy and a slippery political environment, all signal a tough autumn ahead. Joining us tonight for our Labor Day preview: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

A raucous presidential speech and a grim anniversary, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "The time for bickering is over. The time for games has passed. Now is the season for action." Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "I think it's fair to say that the President's speech was really a game changer." However, Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "There was nothing new in the president's speech last night." Game changer or nothing new? The president's big health care speech sets off another round of debate and a fair bit of recrimination too. Whether it was the president declaring that his plan would not hurt senior citizens--Pres. Obama said, "It is a lie plain and simple." -- or Republican Joe Wilson (R-SC) using the same word to denounce the president stating, "You lie." Lively debates everywhere you look in Washington this week, even as the Supreme Court weighs in on campaign finance law. Justice Stephen Breyer said, "I am suggesting we'll make a hash of this statute." While today the nation pauses to consider the consequences of 9/11 eight years later. Covering the week: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

A remote lake in Southeast Asia conceals evidence of Earth's greatest volcanic cataclysm of the last 100,000 years. Miles beneath its placid surface lies a magma chamber that exploded so violently during the Ice Age that gases and ash may have encircled the globe and blotted out the sun for years on end. The Toba eruption may have helped kick the climate into an unprecedented freeze and perhaps even pushed ancestral human populations to the brink of extinction. In a classic science detective story, NOVA pieces together the clues about this great catastrophe and probes questions raised about human evolution and Earth's fragile ecosystems.

How is it that dinosaurs managed to survive and even thrive in the gloom of the dark and frigid polar regions? This is one of today's most intriguing, little-known enigmas in paleontology. Now, a unique field expedition, covered exclusively by NOVA, will set out for Alaska's North Slope to defrost a jackpot of new fossil clues. With the help of stunning CGI, NOVA will breathe life into the polar dinosaurs' lives and environment in vivid detail. The team of researchers will combine extreme engineering and perilous fossil hunting, including digging a tunnel into the permafrost in order to collect the dinosaur bones. With Alaska's spectacular wilderness as a backdrop, this program will reveal a prehistoric lost world for the first time on television.

More than four years after they landed on Mars, NASA's twin robot explorers, Spirit and Opportunity, have lasted 16 times longer and driven 20 times farther than expected. Along the way, they've endured the worst Martian storm ever recorded and survived near-fatal software glitches, a broken wheel and hair-raising climbs and descents on steep slopes. And since May 25, 2008, they've had new company on the red planet: NASA's Phoenix probe, which dramatically "tasted" water ice on the planet in July. NOVA "Is There Life on Mars?" showcases the latest scientific results from the rovers and Phoenix, which are poised to reveal provocative new clues in the tantalizing search for water and life on the Red Planet.

Africa: House Calls and Health Care. In rural Rwanda, the simple and time-tested idea of medical house calls is not only improving the health of the community, but stimulating its economy as well. This week, NOW travels to the village of Rwinkwavu to meet the Rwandan doctors, nurses and villagers who are teaming up with Boston-based Partners in Health and the Rwandan government to deliver medicine and medical counseling door-to-door. Would such an innovation work in America? In the capital of Kigali, NOW's David Brancaccio sits down with Rwandan President Paul Kagame to talk about international aid and Kagame's ultimate vision for a healthy, financially-independent Rwanda. This show is part of Enterprising Ideas, NOW's continuing spotlight on social entrepreneurs working to improve the world through self-sustaining innovation.

This week NOW, as part of a collaboration with the nonprofit investigative unit ProPublica, explores the controversial tactic of "preventative detention," a government plan that may detain suspects indefinitely without trial or even formal charges. Implementing such a plan may have far-reaching consequences on not just our fight against terrorism, but the integrity of the U.S. Constitution and the cause of human rights. Even with President Obama in office and Guantanamo's days numbered, we're still asking: What price will we pay for peace on the ground and peace of mind?

Summer vacation's over -- and how. We'll talk about it all tonight on Washington Week. It fell to the vice president to make the week's most straightforward observation about the prospects for a health care reform. The president puts all his chips on the table next week with a back-in-business address to a joint session of Congress. Health care is priority number one, but other issues loom: an increasingly unpopular war in Afghanistan. Secretary of Defense Robert Gates said, "I absolutely do not think it is time to get out of Afghanistan." -- a still struggling economy and a slippery political environment, all signal a tough autumn ahead. Joining us tonight for our Labor Day preview: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

A raucous presidential speech and a grim anniversary, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "The time for bickering is over. The time for games has passed. Now is the season for action." Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "I think it's fair to say that the President's speech was really a game changer." However, Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "There was nothing new in the president's speech last night." Game changer or nothing new? The president's big health care speech sets off another round of debate and a fair bit of recrimination too. Whether it was the president declaring that his plan would not hurt senior citizens--Pres. Obama said, "It is a lie plain and simple." -- or Republican Joe Wilson (R-SC) using the same word to denounce the president stating, "You lie." Lively debates everywhere you look in Washington this week, even as the Supreme Court weighs in on campaign finance law. Justice Stephen Breyer said, "I am suggesting we'll make a hash of this statute." While today the nation pauses to consider the consequences of 9/11 eight years later. Covering the week: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

In Part 1 of WIDE ANGLE's unprecedented, award-winning 12-year documentary project, Time for School, returns in 2009 with visits to seven classrooms in seven countries to offer a glimpse into the lives of seven extraordinary children who are struggling to get what nearly all American kids take for granted: a basic education. We started filming in 2002, watching as kids first entered school in Afghanistan, Benin, Brazil, India, Japan, Kenya and Romania, many despite great odds. Several years later, in 2006, we returned to film an update--and now, three years later, we travel to check in on our young teenagers who are making the precarious transition to middle school. These children's stories put a human face on the shocking fact that more than 75 million children are currently out of school; of these, two thirds are girls. One in four children in developing countries does not complete five years of basic education, and there are nearly one billion illiterate adults--one-sixth of the world's people. WIDE ANGLE plans to continue revisiting all the children, and their peers and families, through 2015, the year they should graduate--and, not coincidentally, the U.N.'s target date for achieving universal education, a Millennium Development goal endorsed by all 191 members of the United Nations. While each child in Time for School 3 has a unique story, taken together their lives tell an epic tale, shedding light on one of the most urgent and under-reported stories of our time.

NOW ON PBS, NIGHTLY BUSINESS REPORT and TAVIS SMILEY collaborate on this examination of health care reform. As Congress weighs legislation to provide universal health care in the U.S., correspondents will provide analysis, discussion, insight and engagement. NOW ON PBS correspondents consider how reform may change the way we live and take a close look at how portability of health care coverage might change the job sphere. And how would life change for the "sandwich" generation -- boomers who may have their own health care coverage, but are also responsible for aging parents and for grown children? NIGHTLY BUSINESS REPORT examines the costs and controversies of employer-provided health care and the new coverage requirements many companies are adopting as a means of controlling health care. TAVIS SMILEY investigates the issue of childhood obesity, particularly within communities of color. This reporting frames the debate between the current "sickness" model of care and the proposed "wellness" model, with new incentives for families, caregivers and the medical profession to keep people healthy. How would this work, and it is possible to change the behavior of hundreds of millions of Americans-to eat healthier food, exercise more and live healthier lives?

Surrogacy: Wombs for Rent? Commercial surrogacy--when women are paid to carry and deliver babies for people who cannot conceive them biologically--is banned in almost every developed country in the world except the U.S., making it a land of opportunity for parents around the world. In June, celebrity parents Matthew Broderick and Sarah Jessica Parker announced publicly they had twins delivered via surrogate. But surrogacy services and their oversight vary from state to state, creating a strong potential for deceit and fraud. This week, NOW's Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa follows the surrogate pregnancy of a single mother over the course of several months. When she was 14 weeks pregnant, the surrogate agency that brokered the deal between her and the future parents vanished, leaving the woman stranded without health insurance and nowhere to turn. NOW investigates how shady surrogacy services and a lack of regulation in the U.S. may be defrauding hopeful parents and victimizing mothers trying to help them.

Republicans and Democrats grow even further apart on healthcare, on defense, on just about everything. We explore why, tonight on Washington Week. The healthcare fight brings out the big guns. Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "This is our chance to reform healthcare in America. We cannot let this opportunity pass." President Barack Obama said, "I will not waste time with those who've made the calculation it's better to kill health reform than to improve our healthcare system." Rep. Anthony Weiner (D-NY) said, "What we are saying to the United States Senate, to the Gang of Six, is thanks but no thanks." First Lady Michelle Obama said, "The status quo is unacceptable. It is holding women and families back." And the fight morphs into a larger cultural debate. Former President Jimmy Carter stated, "An overwhelming portion of the intensely demonstrated animosity towards President Barack Obama is based on the fact that he is a black man." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "I believe we are on the brink of a great American awakening and it will begin here, and begin now, and begin with you." The U.S. reverses course on missile defense abroad and immediately goes on the defensive at home. Robert Gates (Secretary of Defense) said, "Those who say we are scrapping missile defense in Europe are either misinformed or misrepresenting the reality of what we are doing." While one year after a giant financial meltdown some see signs of hope. Ben Bernanke (Fed Chairman) said, "Prospects for a return to growth in the near term appear good." We go to the reporters covering the week: Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBS and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Greg Ip of the Economist.

NOW ON PBS, NIGHTLY BUSINESS REPORT and TAVIS SMILEY collaborate on this examination of health care reform. As Congress weighs legislation to provide universal health care in the U.S., correspondents will provide analysis, discussion, insight and engagement. NOW ON PBS correspondents consider how reform may change the way we live and take a close look at how portability of health care coverage might change the job sphere. And how would life change for the "sandwich" generation -- boomers who may have their own health care coverage, but are also responsible for aging parents and for grown children? NIGHTLY BUSINESS REPORT examines the costs and controversies of employer-provided health care and the new coverage requirements many companies are adopting as a means of controlling health care. TAVIS SMILEY investigates the issue of childhood obesity, particularly within communities of color. This reporting frames the debate between the current "sickness" model of care and the proposed "wellness" model, with new incentives for families, caregivers and the medical profession to keep people healthy. How would this work, and it is possible to change the behavior of hundreds of millions of Americans-to eat healthier food, exercise more and live healthier lives?

In a provocative report from the frontiers of biology, NOVA explores new findings that call into question the long-held belief that all inherited traits are passed on by our genes. The fast-growing field of epigenetics investigates hidden influences that could affect not only our health today but that of our descendants far into the future. It now seems that our environment makes small chemical changes to our DNA without affecting the gene's overall makeup. To put it another way, epigenetics adds to our DNA another layer that acts as a control system of "switches." Experiential factors such as nutrition or stress may trigger these switches and turn genes on or off. These subtle changes can then be "remembered" and passed on from generation to generation, altering inherited traits. This means the lives of our grandparents - the air they breathed, the food they ate, even the things they saw - could have directly affected us, and that what we do could, in turn, affect our grandchildren. NOVA explores this fascinating new idea, interviewing top scientists in the field and following what could be a paradigm shift in the way we think about inheritance and genes.

Surrogacy: Wombs for Rent? Commercial surrogacy--when women are paid to carry and deliver babies for people who cannot conceive them biologically--is banned in almost every developed country in the world except the U.S., making it a land of opportunity for parents around the world. In June, celebrity parents Matthew Broderick and Sarah Jessica Parker announced publicly they had twins delivered via surrogate. But surrogacy services and their oversight vary from state to state, creating a strong potential for deceit and fraud. This week, NOW's Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa follows the surrogate pregnancy of a single mother over the course of several months. When she was 14 weeks pregnant, the surrogate agency that brokered the deal between her and the future parents vanished, leaving the woman stranded without health insurance and nowhere to turn. NOW investigates how shady surrogacy services and a lack of regulation in the U.S. may be defrauding hopeful parents and victimizing mothers trying to help them.

In a provocative report from the frontiers of biology, NOVA explores new findings that call into question the long-held belief that all inherited traits are passed on by our genes. The fast-growing field of epigenetics investigates hidden influences that could affect not only our health today but that of our descendants far into the future. It now seems that our environment makes small chemical changes to our DNA without affecting the gene's overall makeup. To put it another way, epigenetics adds to our DNA another layer that acts as a control system of "switches." Experiential factors such as nutrition or stress may trigger these switches and turn genes on or off. These subtle changes can then be "remembered" and passed on from generation to generation, altering inherited traits. This means the lives of our grandparents - the air they breathed, the food they ate, even the things they saw - could have directly affected us, and that what we do could, in turn, affect our grandchildren. NOVA explores this fascinating new idea, interviewing top scientists in the field and following what could be a paradigm shift in the way we think about inheritance and genes.

Surrogacy: Wombs for Rent? Commercial surrogacy--when women are paid to carry and deliver babies for people who cannot conceive them biologically--is banned in almost every developed country in the world except the U.S., making it a land of opportunity for parents around the world. In June, celebrity parents Matthew Broderick and Sarah Jessica Parker announced publicly they had twins delivered via surrogate. But surrogacy services and their oversight vary from state to state, creating a strong potential for deceit and fraud. This week, NOW's Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa follows the surrogate pregnancy of a single mother over the course of several months. When she was 14 weeks pregnant, the surrogate agency that brokered the deal between her and the future parents vanished, leaving the woman stranded without health insurance and nowhere to turn. NOW investigates how shady surrogacy services and a lack of regulation in the U.S. may be defrauding hopeful parents and victimizing mothers trying to help them.

As Congress weighs legislation to provide universal health care in the U.S., correspondents will provide analysis, discussion, insight and engagement. NOW ON PBS correspondents consider how reform may change the way we live and take a close look at how portability of health care coverage might change the job sphere. And how would life change for the "sandwich" generation -- boomers who may have their own health care coverage, but are also responsible for aging parents and for grown children? NIGHTLY BUSINESS REPORT examines the costs and controversies of employer-provided health care and the new coverage requirements many companies are adopting as a means of controlling health care. TAVIS SMILEY investigates the issue of childhood obesity, particularly within communities of color. This reporting frames the debate between the current "sickness" model of care and the proposed "wellness" model, with new incentives for families, caregivers and the medical profession to keep people healthy. How would this work, and it is possible to change the behavior of hundreds of millions of Americans-to eat healthier food, exercise more and live healthier lives?

Stress. It's always been there to save our lives. It's what made us run from predators and enabled us to take down prey. But today, humans are turning on that same stress response to deal with 30-year mortgages, difficult bosses, teenagers and traffic jams. Some of us are wallowing in corrosive hormones; for the first time, scientists can reveal just how measurable and dangerous that exposure can be. MacArthur "Genius Grant" recipient and Stanford University neurobiologist Robert Sapolsky and National Geographic search for answers to why stress seems to be killing us.

Republicans and Democrats grow even further apart on healthcare, on defense, on just about everything. We explore why, tonight on Washington Week. The healthcare fight brings out the big guns. Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "This is our chance to reform healthcare in America. We cannot let this opportunity pass." President Barack Obama said, "I will not waste time with those who've made the calculation it's better to kill health reform than to improve our healthcare system." Rep. Anthony Weiner (D-NY) said, "What we are saying to the United States Senate, to the Gang of Six, is thanks but no thanks." First Lady Michelle Obama said, "The status quo is unacceptable. It is holding women and families back." And the fight morphs into a larger cultural debate. Former President Jimmy Carter stated, "An overwhelming portion of the intensely demonstrated animosity towards President Barack Obama is based on the fact that he is a black man." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "I believe we are on the brink of a great American awakening and it will begin here, and begin now, and begin with you." The U.S. reverses course on missile defense abroad and immediately goes on the defensive at home. Robert Gates (Secretary of Defense) said, "Those who say we are scrapping missile defense in Europe are either misinformed or misrepresenting the reality of what we are doing." While one year after a giant financial meltdown some see signs of hope. Ben Bernanke (Fed Chairman) said, "Prospects for a return to growth in the near term appear good." We go to the reporters covering the week: Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBS and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Greg Ip of the Economist.

On the world stage--nuclear threats in Iran, terror threats at home, turning points in Afghanistan, and the health care standoff on Capitol Hill, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Those who used to chastise America for acting alone in the world cannot now stand by and wait for America to solve the world's problems alone." And what problems they are. World leaders reveal Iran's new nuclear ambitions. Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "America, the United Kingdom, and France are at one. Iran's nuclear program is the most urgent proliferation challenge that the world faces today." Generals and bureaucrats search for common ground in the Afghanistan war debate. President Obama stated, "The most important thing I wanted was us to refocus on why we're there." And a new domestic terror plot reveals al Qaeda's continuing influence. Meanwhile, lawmakers on Capitol Hill duel to a standoff on health care reform. Sen. John Kyl (R-AZ) said, "Mr. Chairman, let me just complete my thought here." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "In about one minute, you'll complete your thought. Okay, we've got..." Sen. Kyl then stated, "I'll complete my thought, and then make another point, Mr. Chairman." "It's just you're delaying, Senator, and we just have to move on," Sen. Baucus said. Sen. Kyl said, "Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chairman, I am not delaying. I'm making an extremely important point." Sen. Baucus, "It's a very, very important point, but you're also delaying." Bad blood everywhere. We look at why with the reporters covering the week Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Nancy Youssef of McClatchy newspapers, Pete Williams of NBC News, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

NOW ON PBS, NIGHTLY BUSINESS REPORT and TAVIS SMILEY collaborate on this examination of health care reform. As Congress weighs legislation to provide universal health care in the U.S., correspondents will provide analysis, discussion, insight and engagement. NOW ON PBS correspondents consider how reform may change the way we live and take a close look at how portability of health care coverage might change the job sphere. And how would life change for the "sandwich" generation -- boomers who may have their own health care coverage, but are also responsible for aging parents and for grown children? NIGHTLY BUSINESS REPORT examines the costs and controversies of employer-provided health care and the new coverage requirements many companies are adopting as a means of controlling health care. TAVIS SMILEY investigates the issue of childhood obesity, particularly within communities of color. This reporting frames the debate between the current "sickness" model of care and the proposed "wellness" model, with new incentives for families, caregivers and the medical profession to keep people healthy. How would this work, and it is possible to change the behavior of hundreds of millions of Americans-to eat healthier food, exercise more and live healthier lives?

Republicans and Democrats grow even further apart on healthcare, on defense, on just about everything. We explore why, tonight on Washington Week. The healthcare fight brings out the big guns. Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "This is our chance to reform healthcare in America. We cannot let this opportunity pass." President Barack Obama said, "I will not waste time with those who've made the calculation it's better to kill health reform than to improve our healthcare system." Rep. Anthony Weiner (D-NY) said, "What we are saying to the United States Senate, to the Gang of Six, is thanks but no thanks." First Lady Michelle Obama said, "The status quo is unacceptable. It is holding women and families back." And the fight morphs into a larger cultural debate. Former President Jimmy Carter stated, "An overwhelming portion of the intensely demonstrated animosity towards President Barack Obama is based on the fact that he is a black man." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "I believe we are on the brink of a great American awakening and it will begin here, and begin now, and begin with you." The U.S. reverses course on missile defense abroad and immediately goes on the defensive at home. Robert Gates (Secretary of Defense) said, "Those who say we are scrapping missile defense in Europe are either misinformed or misrepresenting the reality of what we are doing." While one year after a giant financial meltdown some see signs of hope. Ben Bernanke (Fed Chairman) said, "Prospects for a return to growth in the near term appear good." We go to the reporters covering the week: Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Greg Ip of the Economist.

On the world stage--nuclear threats in Iran, terror threats at home, turning points in Afghanistan, and the health care standoff on Capitol Hill, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Those who used to chastise America for acting alone in the world cannot now stand by and wait for America to solve the world's problems alone." And what problems they are. World leaders reveal Iran's new nuclear ambitions. Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "America, the United Kingdom, and France are at one. Iran's nuclear program is the most urgent proliferation challenge that the world faces today." Generals and bureaucrats search for common ground in the Afghanistan war debate. President Obama stated, "The most important thing I wanted was us to refocus on why we're there." And a new domestic terror plot reveals al Qaeda's continuing influence. Meanwhile, lawmakers on Capitol Hill duel to a standoff on health care reform. Sen. John Kyl (R-AZ) said, "Mr. Chairman, let me just complete my thought here." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "In about one minute, you'll complete your thought. Okay, we've got..." Sen. Kyl then stated, "I'll complete my thought, and then make another point, Mr. Chairman." "It's just you're delaying, Senator, and we just have to move on," Sen. Baucus said. Sen. Kyl said, "Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chairman, I am not delaying. I'm making an extremely important point." Sen. Baucus, "It's a very, very important point, but you're also delaying." Bad blood everywhere. We look at why with the reporters covering the week Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Nancy Youssef of McClatchy newspapers, Pete Williams of NBC News, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

In a provocative report from the frontiers of biology, NOVA explores new findings that call into question the long-held belief that all inherited traits are passed on by our genes. The fast-growing field of epigenetics investigates hidden influences that could affect not only our health today but that of our descendants far into the future. It now seems that our environment makes small chemical changes to our DNA without affecting the gene's overall makeup. To put it another way, epigenetics adds to our DNA another layer that acts as a control system of "switches." Experiential factors such as nutrition or stress may trigger these switches and turn genes on or off. These subtle changes can then be "remembered" and passed on from generation to generation, altering inherited traits. This means the lives of our grandparents - the air they breathed, the food they ate, even the things they saw - could have directly affected us, and that what we do could, in turn, affect our grandchildren. NOVA explores this fascinating new idea, interviewing top scientists in the field and following what could be a paradigm shift in the way we think about inheritance and genes.

Republicans and Democrats grow even further apart on healthcare, on defense, on just about everything. We explore why, tonight on Washington Week. The healthcare fight brings out the big guns. Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "This is our chance to reform healthcare in America. We cannot let this opportunity pass." President Barack Obama said, "I will not waste time with those who've made the calculation it's better to kill health reform than to improve our healthcare system." Rep. Anthony Weiner (D-NY) said, "What we are saying to the United States Senate, to the Gang of Six, is thanks but no thanks." First Lady Michelle Obama said, "The status quo is unacceptable. It is holding women and families back." And the fight morphs into a larger cultural debate. Former President Jimmy Carter stated, "An overwhelming portion of the intensely demonstrated animosity towards President Barack Obama is based on the fact that he is a black man." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "I believe we are on the brink of a great American awakening and it will begin here, and begin now, and begin with you." The U.S. reverses course on missile defense abroad and immediately goes on the defensive at home. Robert Gates (Secretary of Defense) said, "Those who say we are scrapping missile defense in Europe are either misinformed or misrepresenting the reality of what we are doing." While one year after a giant financial meltdown some see signs of hope. Ben Bernanke (Fed Chairman) said, "Prospects for a return to growth in the near term appear good." We go to the reporters covering the week: Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBS and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Greg Ip of the Economist.

On the world stage--nuclear threats in Iran, terror threats at home, turning points in Afghanistan, and the health care standoff on Capitol Hill, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Those who used to chastise America for acting alone in the world cannot now stand by and wait for America to solve the world's problems alone." And what problems they are. World leaders reveal Iran's new nuclear ambitions. Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "America, the United Kingdom, and France are at one. Iran's nuclear program is the most urgent proliferation challenge that the world faces today." Generals and bureaucrats search for common ground in the Afghanistan war debate. President Obama stated, "The most important thing I wanted was us to refocus on why we're there." And a new domestic terror plot reveals al Qaeda's continuing influence. Meanwhile, lawmakers on Capitol Hill duel to a standoff on health care reform. Sen. John Kyl (R-AZ) said, "Mr. Chairman, let me just complete my thought here." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "In about one minute, you'll complete your thought. Okay, we've got..." Sen. Kyl then stated, "I'll complete my thought, and then make another point, Mr. Chairman." "It's just you're delaying, Senator, and we just have to move on," Sen. Baucus said. Sen. Kyl said, "Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chairman, I am not delaying. I'm making an extremely important point." Sen. Baucus, "It's a very, very important point, but you're also delaying." Bad blood everywhere. We look at why with the reporters covering the week Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Nancy Youssef of McClatchy newspapers, Pete Williams of NBC News, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

Surrogacy: Wombs for Rent? Commercial surrogacy--when women are paid to carry and deliver babies for people who cannot conceive them biologically--is banned in almost every developed country in the world except the U.S., making it a land of opportunity for parents around the world. In June, celebrity parents Matthew Broderick and Sarah Jessica Parker announced publicly they had twins delivered via surrogate. But surrogacy services and their oversight vary from state to state, creating a strong potential for deceit and fraud. This week, NOW's Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa follows the surrogate pregnancy of a single mother over the course of several months. When she was 14 weeks pregnant, the surrogate agency that brokered the deal between her and the future parents vanished, leaving the woman stranded without health insurance and nowhere to turn. NOW investigates how shady surrogacy services and a lack of regulation in the U.S. may be defrauding hopeful parents and victimizing mothers trying to help them.

NOW ON PBS, NIGHTLY BUSINESS REPORT and TAVIS SMILEY collaborate on this examination of health care reform. As Congress weighs legislation to provide universal health care in the U.S., correspondents will provide analysis, discussion, insight and engagement. NOW ON PBS correspondents consider how reform may change the way we live and take a close look at how portability of health care coverage might change the job sphere. And how would life change for the "sandwich" generation -- boomers who may have their own health care coverage, but are also responsible for aging parents and for grown children? NIGHTLY BUSINESS REPORT examines the costs and controversies of employer-provided health care and the new coverage requirements many companies are adopting as a means of controlling health care. TAVIS SMILEY investigates the issue of childhood obesity, particularly within communities of color. This reporting frames the debate between the current "sickness" model of care and the proposed "wellness" model, with new incentives for families, caregivers and the medical profession to keep people healthy. How would this work, and it is possible to change the behavior of hundreds of millions of Americans-to eat healthier food, exercise more and live healthier lives?

Life Panel? Death Panel?: How did private discussions between seniors and their doctors about end-of-life choices for the very ill or dying become a flash point in the national health care debate? This week, NOW travels to Wisconsin to sit in on some of these sessions and see how health care reform could profoundly affect the lives of American seniors. The not-for-profit Gundersen Lutheran Hospital has two decades of experience in this area. Their "Respecting Choices" initiative has become one of the most comprehensive end-of-life planning programs in the country. Two families grappling with the most difficult and complex life and death issues gave NOW on PBS extraordinary access to their discussions and their decisions.

A Nobel Peace Prize shocker, plus, Afghanistan, health care, and the Supreme Court tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama SAID, "I am both surprised and deeply humbled by the decision of the Nobel Committee." President Obama was not the only one surprised, but the global endorsement was welcomed, even as it sparked new questions like how and why, especially as the president decides whether to escalate the war in Afghanistan as Republicans and Democrats debate. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "It's pretty clear that time is not on our side. Speaker Nancy Pelosi: Let me just say that there was agreement that it's a difficult decision for the president to make." On Capitol Hill, good news for health care reform? Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The result is a balanced, common sense plan that takes the best ideas from both sides." But what will it cost? And at the Supreme Court, free speech, religion, and a brand new justice. Covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

Life Panel? Death Panel?: How did private discussions between seniors and their doctors about end-of-life choices for the very ill or dying become a flash point in the national health care debate? This week, NOW travels to Wisconsin to sit in on some of these sessions and see how health care reform could profoundly affect the lives of American seniors. The not-for-profit Gundersen Lutheran Hospital has two decades of experience in this area. Their "Respecting Choices" initiative has become one of the most comprehensive end-of-life planning programs in the country. Two families grappling with the most difficult and complex life and death issues gave NOW on PBS extraordinary access to their discussions and their decisions.

A Nobel Peace Prize shocker, plus, Afghanistan, health care, and the Supreme Court tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama SAID, "I am both surprised and deeply humbled by the decision of the Nobel Committee." President Obama was not the only one surprised, but the global endorsement was welcomed, even as it sparked new questions like how and why, especially as the president decides whether to escalate the war in Afghanistan as Republicans and Democrats debate. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "It's pretty clear that time is not on our side. Speaker Nancy Pelosi: Let me just say that there was agreement that it's a difficult decision for the president to make." On Capitol Hill, good news for health care reform? Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The result is a balanced, common sense plan that takes the best ideas from both sides." But what will it cost? And at the Supreme Court, free speech, religion, and a brand new justice. Covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

Life Panel? Death Panel?: How did private discussions between seniors and their doctors about end-of-life choices for the very ill or dying become a flash point in the national health care debate? This week, NOW travels to Wisconsin to sit in on some of these sessions and see how health care reform could profoundly affect the lives of American seniors. The not-for-profit Gundersen Lutheran Hospital has two decades of experience in this area. Their "Respecting Choices" initiative has become one of the most comprehensive end-of-life planning programs in the country. Two families grappling with the most difficult and complex life and death issues gave NOW on PBS extraordinary access to their discussions and their decisions.

A Nobel Peace Prize shocker, plus, Afghanistan, health care, and the Supreme Court tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama SAID, "I am both surprised and deeply humbled by the decision of the Nobel Committee." President Obama was not the only one surprised, but the global endorsement was welcomed, even as it sparked new questions like how and why, especially as the president decides whether to escalate the war in Afghanistan as Republicans and Democrats debate. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "It's pretty clear that time is not on our side. Speaker Nancy Pelosi: Let me just say that there was agreement that it's a difficult decision for the president to make." On Capitol Hill, good news for health care reform? Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The result is a balanced, common sense plan that takes the best ideas from both sides." But what will it cost? And at the Supreme Court, free speech, religion, and a brand new justice. Covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

In the spring of 2009, NASA sent a shuttle crew on a risky mission to service the Hubble Space Telescope for the last time. Hubble has enthralled scientists and the public by capturing deep views of the cosmos and a wealth of data from distant galaxies. It has helped lead the search for alien planets and is a key tool in cosmology's quest to investigate and map the universe's mysterious dark matter. The astronaut servicing team carried out the first-ever in-space repairs of Hubble's defective instruments, a task that required ingenious engineering fixes and the most intensive NASA spacewalk ever. From training to launch, NOVA presents the inside story of the mission and the extraordinary challenges faced by the rescue crew.

A Nobel Peace Prize shocker, plus, Afghanistan, health care, and the Supreme Court tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama SAID, "I am both surprised and deeply humbled by the decision of the Nobel Committee." President Obama was not the only one surprised, but the global endorsement was welcomed, even as it sparked new questions like how and why, especially as the president decides whether to escalate the war in Afghanistan as Republicans and Democrats debate. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "It's pretty clear that time is not on our side. Speaker Nancy Pelosi: Let me just say that there was agreement that it's a difficult decision for the president to make." On Capitol Hill, good news for health care reform? Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The result is a balanced, common sense plan that takes the best ideas from both sides." But what will it cost? And at the Supreme Court, free speech, religion, and a brand new justice. Covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

Round two on the health care public option, executive compensation, Afghan elections, and an Iranian nuclear deal. Plus, we remember our friend Jack Nelson, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "We're leaning towards talking about a public option. No decision has been made." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "Healthcare reform has moved out of the public eye and into the smoke-filled rooms here on Capitol Hill." What once was thought dead, lives again. But can Harry Reid and Nancy Pelosi really revive a plan many Americans worry gives the government too much power? And will another plan, this one to limit what companies can pay their own employees, fly?" Kenneth Feinberg said, "There is a gap between Wall Street and Main Street in terms of the perception concerning compensation." TUBA U: BASSO PROFUNDO follows an unusual 22-piece musical ensemble into the recording studio, across the U.S. and onto the stage of renowned Carnegie Hall. Featuring the career of tuba maestro Winston Morris, the compositions of Pulitzer Prize-winning composer Gunther Schuller, a visit to German tuba makers and the 100-member Tubas of Mass Destruction, this is the anatomy of one instrument that speaks to the dedication and discipline shared by players of all instruments. The program examines the value of the individual within the context of the ensemble and assures viewers that some unexpected and unusual things are indeed worthy of a lifetime of commitment. TUBA U dispels assumptions of size, value and ability, addressing prejudice - even if a very quirky one. Filled with "who knew?" moments, the documentary takes a look at the history, physicality and personalities of the tuba.

Round two on the health care public option, executive compensation, Afghan elections, and an Iranian nuclear deal. Plus, we remember our friend Jack Nelson, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "We're leaning towards talking about a public option. No decision has been made." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "Healthcare reform has moved out of the public eye and into the smoke-filled rooms here on Capitol Hill." What once was thought dead, lives again. But can Harry Reid and Nancy Pelosi really revive a plan many Americans worry gives the government too much power? And will another plan, this one to limit what companies can pay their own employees, fly?" Kenneth Feinberg said, "There is a gap between Wall Street and Main Street in terms of the perception concerning compensation." On foreign policy, will a runoff election in Afghanistan change the balance of power there and here? Sen. John Kerry (D-MA) said, "This is a very tough environment in which to hold an election." The economy rebounds--somewhat, but progress on health care, Afghanistan and swine flu slows. Tonight on Washington Week. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "We're moving in the right direction, we're starting to make real progress on the road to recovery." Finally, good economic news. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The 3.5 percent growth in the third quarter is the largest three-month gain we have seen in two years." With at least one big exception. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "I'm pleased that the GDP numbers this morning were up. But the question is where are the jobs?" The numbers tell the story as Wall Street heads up then down. While on Capitol Hill, the health care two-step continues with new Democratic plans. Sen. Sherrod Brown (D-OH) said, "I think people don't want to be on the wrong side of history on this." And new hesitations. Joseph Lieberman (I-CN) said, "If at the end it's not what I think is good for our country and most people living in our country, then I'll vote against cloture, I'll join a filibuster and I'll try to stop the bill from passing." Meanwhile, worries mount about the availability of the H1N1 flu vaccine. Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "This is not a situation that is cause for panic." But what to do? And along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border, fresh casualties complicate the U.S. effort as Secretary Clinton talks tough to old allies. The economy rebounds--somewhat, but progress on health care, Afghanistan and swine flu slows. Tonight on Washington Week. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "We're moving in the right direction, we're starting to make real progress on the road to recovery." Finally, good economic news. Pres. Barack Obama said,

"The 3.5 percent growth in the third quarter is the largest three-month gain we have seen in two years." With at least one big exception. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "I'm pleased that the GDP numbers this morning were up. But the question is where are the jobs?" The numbers tell the story as Wall Street heads up then down. While on Capitol Hill, the health care two-step continues with new Democratic plans. Sen. Sherrod Brown (D-OH) said, "I think people don't want to be on the wrong side of history on this." And new hesitations. Joseph Lieberman (I-CN) said, "If at the end it's not what I think is good for our country and most people living in our country, then I'll vote against cloture, I'll join a filibuster and I'll try to stop the bill from passing." Meanwhile, worries mount about the availability of the H1N1 flu vaccine. Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "This is not a situation that is cause for panic." But what to do? And along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border, fresh casualties complicate the U.S. effort as Secretary Clinton talks tough to old allies. Covering the week: Greg Ip of the Economist, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Marilyn Werber Serafini of National Journal, and Nancy Youssef of McClatchy News Service.

Nurses Needed: By the year 2020, a nationwide shortage of up to 500,000 trained nurses could mean that hundreds of thousands of patients will receive less attention and substandard treatment. Just as alarming, fewer nurses are choosing to teach the next generation of professionals, resulting in tens of thousands of applicants being turned away from the nation's nursing schools. This week, NOW on PBS takes a hard look at the strains this crisis is placing on the entire medical system, as well as innovative efforts to reverse the trend.

The economy rebounds--somewhat, but progress on health care, Afghanistan and swine flu slows. Tonight on Washington Week. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "We're moving in the right direction, we're starting to make real progress on the road to recovery." Finally, good economic news. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The 3.5 percent growth in the third quarter is the largest three-month gain we have seen in two years." With at least one big exception. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "I'm pleased that the GDP numbers this morning were up. But the question is where are the jobs?" The numbers tell the story as Wall Street heads up then down. While on Capitol Hill, the health care two-step continues with new Democratic plans. Sen. Sherrod Brown (D-OH) said, "I think people don't want to be on the wrong side of history on this." And new hesitations. Joseph Lieberman (I-CN) said, "If at the end it's not what I think is good for our country and most people living in our country, then I'll vote against cloture, I'll join a filibuster and I'll try to stop the bill from passing." Meanwhile, worries mount about the availability of the H1N1 flu vaccine. Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "This is not a situation that is cause for panic." But what to do? And along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border, fresh casualties complicate the U.S. effort as Secretary Clinton talks tough to old allies. Covering the week: Greg Ip of the Economist, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Marilyn Werber Serafini of National Journal, and Nancy Youssef of McClatchy News Service.

Electric Car Dreams: Will green energy and electric cars drive a new global climate change plan? Home to a worldwide summit on climate change in early December, Denmark is setting a global example in creating clean power, storing it, and using it responsibly. Their reliance on wind power to produce electricity without contributing to global warming is well known, but now they're looking to drive the point home with electric cars. To do this, they've partnered with social entrepreneur Shai Agassi and his company Better Place. This week, NOW investigates how the Danish government and Better Place are working together to put electric cars into the hands of as many Danish families as possible. The idea is still having trouble getting out of the garage here in America, but Denmark could be an inspiration.

Though they may look like dragons and inspire stories of man-eating, fire-spitting monsters with long claws, razor-sharp teeth and muscular, whip-like tails, these creatures are actually monitor lizards, the largest lizards to walk the planet. With their acute intelligence-including the ability to plan ahead-these lizards are a very different kind of reptile, blurring the line between reptiles and mammals. And even though these bizarre reptiles haven't changed all that much since the dinosaurs, they are a very successful species, versatile at adapting to all kinds of settings. Lizard Kings will look at what makes these tongued reptiles so similar to mammals and what has allowed them to become such unique survivors. But while the creatures can find their way around many different habitats, finding them is no easy task. Natural loners, and always on guard, they sense anything or anyone from hundreds of feet away. NOVA will follow expert lizard hunter Dr. Eric Pianka as he tracks the elusive creatures through Australia's heartland with cutting-edge "lizard cam" technology for an unparalleled close encounter with these amazingly versatile "living dragons."

Water World: Is a coastal catastrophe approaching, and what should we be doing about it? Imagine you lived in a world of water. Your home is two-feet under. You wade through it, cook on it, and sleep above it. This is the reality for hundreds of thousands of people around the world, coastal populations on the front lines of climate change. Only weeks before world leaders meet in Copenhagen to discuss climate change, NOW senior correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels to Bangladesh to examine some innovative solutions--from floating schools to rice that can "hold its breath" underwater--being implemented in a country where entire communities are inundated by water, battered by cyclones, and flooded from their homes. The Denmark conference can't come soon enough. Scientists' project global seas will flood 20 percent of Bangladesh by 2030, stranding some 35 million climate refugees. Some are proposing that industrial nations who contribute to global warming should open their doors to displaced Bangladeshis.

Since bipedality has long been considered one of the defining characteristics of modern humans, such a discovery raises fascinating questions about genetics, society and the evolutionary history of our species. Is this the anthropological find of the millennium or simply a unique medical case? In this moving documentary, NOVA sets out to unravel the controversy and meet the individuals who have captured the imagination of scientists around the world.

Nurses Needed: By the year 2020, a nationwide shortage of up to 500,000 trained nurses could mean that hundreds of thousands of patients will receive less attention and substandard treatment. Just as alarming, fewer nurses are choosing to teach the next generation of professionals, resulting in tens of thousands of applicants being turned away from the nation's nursing schools. This week, NOW on PBS takes a hard look at the strains this crisis is placing on the entire medical system, as well as innovative efforts to reverse the trend.

Decisions, decisions on health care, Afghanistan, and garden variety politics. We look at a pivotal week tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Olympia Snowe (R-ME) said, "Is this bill all that I would want? Far from it. Is it all that can be? No." But when history calls, history calls. And with that the health care bill lived to fight another day. And what a fight it's turning out to be as insurance companies, labor unions, Democrats, and Republicans prepare to make it a fight to the finish. Rep. Jim Cooper (D-TN) said, "It is kind of a Super Bowl of lobbying on health care reform and the lobbyists are winning so far, but the game's not over yet." Sen. Chuck Grassley (R-IA) said, "Everybody knows that things need to be changed in our health care system. It's just how do you do it?" And how will the administration do Afghanistan? Rep. Jim McGovern (D-MA) said, "My advice to the president would be that our national security interests and the future of Afghanistan are better served with a smaller U.S. military footprint." Sen. Linsey Graham (R-SC) asked, "Can we turn it around? I think so. I pray that we can." Plus, the president as politico in chief as he travels the country, campaigning for other Democrats. Can he recapture the magic of 2008? Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Charles Babington of the Associated Press, James Kitfield of National Journal and John Harris of Politico.

Round two on the health care public option, executive compensation, Afghan elections, and an Iranian nuclear deal. Plus, we remember our friend Jack Nelson, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "We're leaning towards talking about a public option. No decision has been made." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "Healthcare reform has moved out of the public eye and into the smoke-filled rooms here on Capitol Hill." What once was thought dead, lives again. But can Harry Reid and Nancy Pelosi really revive a plan many Americans worry gives the government too much power? And will another plan, this one to limit what companies can pay their own employees, fly?" Kenneth Feinberg said, "There is a gap between Wall Street and Main Street in terms of the perception concerning compensation." On foreign policy, will a runoff election in Afghanistan change the balance of power there and here? Sen. John Kerry (D-MA) said, "This is a very tough environment in which to hold an election." And will Iran yield to international pressure for a new nuclear deal? Sec. Hillary Clinton said, "The door is open to a better future for Iran, but the process of engagement cannot be open-ended." Critical tests all around. Plus we remember Jack Nelson. Covering the week, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

The economy rebounds--somewhat, but progress on health care, Afghanistan and swine flu slows. Tonight on Washington Week. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "We're moving in the right direction, we're starting to make real progress on the road to recovery." Finally, good economic news. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The 3.5 percent growth in the third quarter is the largest three-month gain we have seen in two years." With at least one big exception. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "I'm pleased that the GDP numbers this morning were up. But the question is where are the jobs?" The numbers tell the story as Wall Street heads up then down. While on Capitol Hill, the health care two-step continues with new Democratic plans. Sen. Sherrod Brown (D-OH) said, "I think people don't want to be on the wrong side of history on this." And new hesitations. Joseph Lieberman (I-CN) said, "If at the end it's not what I think is good for our country and most people living in our country, then I'll vote against cloture, I'll join a filibuster and I'll try to stop the bill from passing." Meanwhile, worries mount about the availability of the H1N1 flu vaccine. Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "This is not a situation that is cause for panic." But what to do? And along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border, fresh casualties complicate the U.S. effort as Secretary Clinton talks tough to old allies. Covering the week: Greg Ip of the Economist, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Marilyn Werber Serafini of National Journal, and Nancy Youssef of McClatchy News Service.

Decisions, decisions on health care, Afghanistan, and garden variety politics. We look at a pivotal week tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Olympia Snowe (R-ME) said, "Is this bill all that I would want? Far from it. Is it all that can be? No." But when history calls, history calls. And with that the health care bill lived to fight another day. And what a fight it's turning out to be as insurance companies, labor unions, Democrats, and Republicans prepare to make it a fight to the finish. Rep. Jim Cooper (D-TN) said, "It is kind of a Super Bowl of lobbying on health care reform and the lobbyists are winning so far, but the game's not over yet." Sen. Chuck Grassley (R-IA) said, "Everybody knows that things need to be changed in our health care system. It's just how do you do it?" And how will the administration do Afghanistan? Rep. Jim McGovern (D-MA) said, "My advice to the president would be that our national security interests and the future of Afghanistan are better served with a smaller U.S. military footprint." Sen. Linsey Graham (R-SC) asked, "Can we turn it around? I think so. I pray that we can." Plus, the president as politico in chief as he travels the country, campaigning for other Democrats. Can he recapture the magic of 2008? Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Charles Babington of the Associated Press, James Kitfield of National Journal and John Harris of Politico.

Round two on the health care public option, executive compensation, Afghan elections, and an Iranian nuclear deal. Plus, we remember our friend Jack Nelson, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "We're leaning towards talking about a public option. No decision has been made." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "Healthcare reform has moved out of the public eye and into the smoke-filled rooms here on Capitol Hill." What once was thought dead, lives again. But can Harry Reid and Nancy Pelosi really revive a plan many Americans worry gives the government too much power? And will another plan, this one to limit what companies can pay their own employees, fly?" Kenneth Feinberg said, "There is a gap between Wall Street and Main Street in terms of the perception concerning compensation." On foreign policy, will a runoff election in Afghanistan change the balance of power there and here? Sen. John Kerry (D-MA) said, "This is a very tough environment in which to hold an election." And will Iran yield to international pressure for a new nuclear deal? Sec. Hillary Clinton said, "The door is open to a better future for Iran, but the process of engagement cannot be open-ended." Critical tests all around. Plus we remember Jack Nelson. Covering the week, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

The economy rebounds--somewhat, but progress on health care, Afghanistan and swine flu slows. Tonight on Washington Week. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "We're moving in the right direction, we're starting to make real progress on the road to recovery." Finally, good economic news. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The 3.5 percent growth in the third quarter is the largest three-month gain we have seen in two years." With at least one big exception. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "I'm pleased that the GDP numbers this morning were up. But the question is where are the jobs?" The numbers tell the story as Wall Street heads up then down. While on Capitol Hill, the health care two-step continues with new Democratic plans. Sen. Sherrod Brown (D-OH) said, "I think people don't want to be on the wrong side of history on this." And new hesitations. Joseph Lieberman (I-CN) said, "If at the end it's not what I think is good for our country and most people living in our country, then I'll vote against cloture, I'll join a filibuster and I'll try to stop the bill from passing." Meanwhile, worries mount about the availability of the H1N1 flu vaccine. Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "This is not a situation that is cause for panic." But what to do? And along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border, fresh casualties complicate the U.S. effort as Secretary Clinton talks tough to old allies. Covering the week: Greg Ip of the Economist, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Marilyn Werber Serafini of National Journal, and Nancy Youssef of McClatchy News Service.

An intense scientific debate has ignited around a quiet but extraordinary family living in rural Turkey -- a family with five adults who walk on all fours. Since bipedality has long been considered one of the defining characteristics of modern humans, such a discovery raises fascinating questions about genetics, society and the evolutionary history of our species. Is this the anthropological find of the millennium or simply a unique medical case? In this moving documentary, NOVA sets out to unravel the controversy and meet the individuals who have captured the imagination of scientists around the world.

Electric Car Dreams: Will green energy and electric cars drive a new global climate change plan? Home to a worldwide summit on climate change in early December, Denmark is setting a global example in creating clean power, storing it, and using it responsibly. Their reliance on wind power to produce electricity without contributing to global warming is well known, but now they're looking to drive the point home with electric cars. To do this, they've partnered with social entrepreneur Shai Agassi and his company Better Place. This week, NOW investigates how the Danish government and Better Place are working together to put electric cars into the hands of as many Danish families as possible. The idea is still having trouble getting out of the garage here in America, but Denmark could be an inspiration.

Decisions, decisions on health care, Afghanistan, and garden variety politics. We look at a pivotal week tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Olympia Snowe (R-ME) said, "Is this bill all that I would want? Far from it. Is it all that can be? No." But when history calls, history calls. And with that the health care bill lived to fight another day. And what a fight it's turning out to be as insurance companies, labor unions, Democrats, and Republicans prepare to make it a fight to the finish. Rep. Jim Cooper (D-TN) said, "It is kind of a Super Bowl of lobbying on health care reform and the lobbyists are winning so far, but the game's not over yet." Sen. Chuck Grassley (R-IA) said, "Everybody knows that things need to be changed in our health care system. It's just how do you do it?" And how will the administration do Afghanistan? Rep. Jim McGovern (D-MA) said, "My advice to the president would be that our national security interests and the future of Afghanistan are better served with a smaller U.S. military footprint." Sen. Linsey Graham (R-SC) asked, "Can we turn it around? I think so. I pray that we can." Plus, the president as politico in chief as he travels the country, campaigning for other Democrats. Can he recapture the magic of 2008? Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, Charles Babington of the Associated Press, James Kitfield of National Journal and John Harris of Politico.

Round two on the health care public option, executive compensation, Afghan elections, and an Iranian nuclear deal. Plus, we remember our friend Jack Nelson, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "We're leaning towards talking about a public option. No decision has been made." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "Healthcare reform has moved out of the public eye and into the smoke-filled rooms here on Capitol Hill." What once was thought dead, lives again. But can Harry Reid and Nancy Pelosi really revive a plan many Americans worry gives the government too much power? And will another plan, this one to limit what companies can pay their own employees, fly?" Kenneth Feinberg said, "There is a gap between Wall Street and Main Street in terms of the perception concerning compensation." On foreign policy, will a runoff election in Afghanistan change the balance of power there and here? Sen. John Kerry (D-MA) said, "This is a very tough environment in which to hold an election." And will Iran yield to international pressure for a new nuclear deal? Sec. Hillary Clinton said, "The door is open to a better future for Iran, but the process of engagement cannot be open-ended." Critical tests all around. Plus we remember Jack Nelson. Covering the week, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

The economy rebounds--somewhat, but progress on health care, Afghanistan and swine flu slows. Tonight on Washington Week. Vice Pres. Joe Biden said, "We're moving in the right direction, we're starting to make real progress on the road to recovery." Finally, good economic news. Pres. Barack Obama said, "The 3.5 percent growth in the third quarter is the largest three-month gain we have seen in two years." With at least one big exception. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "I'm pleased that the GDP numbers this morning were up. But the question is where are the jobs?" The numbers tell the story as Wall Street heads up then down. While on Capitol Hill, the health care two-step continues with new Democratic plans. Sen. Sherrod Brown (D-OH) said, "I think people don't want to be on the wrong side of history on this." And new hesitations. Joseph Lieberman (I-CN) said, "If at the end it's not what I think is good for our country and most people living in our country, then I'll vote against cloture, I'll join a filibuster and I'll try to stop the bill from passing." Meanwhile, worries mount about the availability of the H1N1 flu vaccine. Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "This is not a situation that is cause for panic." But what to do? And along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border, fresh casualties complicate the U.S. effort as Secretary Clinton talks tough to old allies. Covering the week: Greg Ip of the Economist, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Marilyn Werber Serafini of National Journal, and Nancy Youssef of McClatchy News Service.

Fallout from 9/11 and Guantanamo, on Afghanistan, on the Fort Hood shooting and on health care. Tonight on Washington Week. Attorney General Eric Holder said, "After eight years of delay, those allegedly responsible for the attacks of September will finally face justice." Khalid Sheikh Mohammed headed for trial in New York as the Obama administration moves toward closing Guantanamo. Even as the president narrows and expands his choices on Afghanistan. Gen. David Petraeus said, "I think that we are indeed nearing a decision on this very important topic." A decision shadowed by the sacrifice of the war's veterans and of the victims at Fort Hood. Col. John Rossi: Fort Hood has gotten its breath back and we continue to move forward. Meanwhile, Congress leaves town with another explosive issue on its health care plate: abortion. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "I expect the bill that will be brought to the floor will ensure that no federal funding for abortion." What are Democrats willing to give up to get a health care bill passed? Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal.

In March 1933, within weeks of his inauguration, President Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed. He proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests and parks, planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting fires and maintaining roads and trails. Corps workers lived in camps under quasi-military discipline, and received a wage of 30 dollars per month, 25 of which they were required to send home to their families. This film tells the story of one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, positioning it as a pivotal moment in the emergence of modern environmentalism and federal unemployment relief.

David Sirota On The 2009 Elections: What do the 2009 election results say about America's future? Only one year after a historic election rerouted the course of America's political culture, do the 2009 election results show momentum swinging in the opposite direction? This week, NOW's David Brancaccio talks to political author and columnist David Sirota about populist anger, the Obama administration's successes and failures, and how this week's election results foreshadow the state of politics in 2010.

A world of uncertainty on unemployment, Afghanistan, health care, and domestic politics, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Although it will take time and it will take patience, I am confident that our economy will recover." Rep. Kevin Brady (R-TX) said, "Today's numbers are further proof that the Obama economic policies are a failure." Cool optimism and hot pessimism on display as the unemployment rate makes a sudden jump. Nervousness at the ballot box too as Obama Democrats in two big states go down to defeat. Gov. Jon Corzine said, "There is some little sadness." Will the election results rattle the health care debate on Capitol Hill? Speaker Nancy Pelosi said, "We're right on the brink of passing historic legislation to provide quality, affordable, accessible health care for all Americans." Rep. Eric Cantor (R-VA) said, "Not one Republican will vote for this bill." And will violence at home -- and abroad -- change the course in Afghanistan? Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "It is not just the U.S. that is being tested in Afghanistan, nor is it just Britain. It is the whole international community." Covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, James Barnes of National Journal, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

Elizabeth Warren on the Economy: What exactly is going on with the economy? Stocks are up and big bonuses are back, but while they're throwing parties on Wall Street, there's pain on Main Street. One out of every six workers is unemployed or underemployed, according to government statistics -- the highest figure since the Great Depression. This week NOW gets answers and insight from Harvard professor Elizabeth Warren, who's been heading up the congressional panel overseeing how the bailout money is being spent. NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa talks with Warren about how we got to this point, and where we go from here. What will it take to put both bankers and American businesses on the same road to recovery?

In March 1933, within weeks of his inauguration, President Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed. He proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests and parks, planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting fires and maintaining roads and trails. Corps workers lived in camps under quasi-military discipline, and received a wage of 30 dollars per month, 25 of which they were required to send home to their families. This film tells the story of one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, positioning it as a pivotal moment in the emergence of modern environmentalism and federal unemployment relief.

A world of uncertainty on unemployment, Afghanistan, health care, and domestic politics, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Although it will take time and it will take patience, I am confident that our economy will recover." Rep. Kevin Brady (R-TX) said, "Today's numbers are further proof that the Obama economic policies are a failure." Cool optimism and hot pessimism on display as the unemployment rate makes a sudden jump. Nervousness at the ballot box too as Obama Democrats in two big states go down to defeat. Gov. Jon Corzine said, "There is some little sadness." Will the election results rattle the health care debate on Capitol Hill? Speaker Nancy Pelosi said, "We're right on the brink of passing historic legislation to provide quality, affordable, accessible health care for all Americans." Rep. Eric Cantor (R-VA) said, "Not one Republican will vote for this bill." And will violence at home -- and abroad -- change the course in Afghanistan? In March 1933, within weeks of his inauguration, President Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed. He proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests and parks, planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting fires and maintaining roads and trails. Corps workers lived in camps under quasi-military discipline, and received a wage of 30 dollars per month, 25 of which they were required to send home to their families. This film tells the story of one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, positioning it as a pivotal moment in the emergence of modern environmentalism and federal unemployment relief.

From the moment of their birth, baby animals in the wild can face almost anything -- from a large social group of interested caregivers, to a potentially deadly group of relatives, to one or two devoted parents, to complete abandonment and no available help at all. Yet they all have something in common. They must learn whom to trust, what to fear, and when to act -- all in the first days of life. Child care involves instinct, but also experience and choices, some of which can be devastatingly hard. Find out how being born in the wild has evolved over time, and how animals interacting with their young, wrestling with the feelings and dilemmas that come with raising a baby, can mirror our own experiences.

NOVA presents a comprehensive three-part, three-hour special-investigating explosive new discoveries that are transforming the picture of how we became human. The first program explores fresh clues about our earliest ancestors in Africa, including the stunningly complete fossil nicknamed "Lucy's Child." These three-million-year-old bones from Ethiopia reveal humanity's oldest and most telltale trait-upright walking rather than a big brain. The second program tackles the mysteries of how our ancestors managed to survive in a savannah teeming with vicious predators, and when and why we first left our African cradle to colonize every corner of the Earth. In the final program, NOVA probes a wave of dramatic new evidence, based partly on cutting-edge DNA analysis, that reveals new insights into how we became the creative and "behaviorally modern" humans of today, and what really happened to the enigmatic Neanderthals who faded into extinction. Shot "in the trenches" as discoveries were unearthed throughout Africa and Europe, each hour of Becoming Human unfolds with a forensic investigation into the life and death of a specific hominid ancestor, such as Lucy's Child. Dry bones spring back to vivid life with stunning animation, the product of a unique NOVA collaboration between top anthropologists and a talented team of movie animators.

Filmmaker John Grabowska presents a lyrical interpretation of the sweeping geologic story of Yellowstone, the world's first and most famous national park. Formation of glaciers, mountain ranges and the gigantic caldera of a supervolcano provide the saga of this special place. Filmed over two years through all seasons, the film delves deeply into the significance behind the scenery and illuminates the intimate bonds between the landscape and biology - how Yellowstone's geology influences where life exists and how it evolves. A short concluding film, "Yellowstone's Cascade Corner," features the portion of Yellowstone extending across the southwestern border of Montana into Idaho.

Ten years ago, stimulants like Ritalin and Adderall were the drugs of choice to treat behavioral issues in children. Today children as young as four years old are being prescribed more powerful anti-psychotic medications that are much less understood. The drugs can cause serious side effects, and virtually nothing is known about their long-term impact. The increase in the use of anti-psychotics is directly tied to the rising incidence of one particular diagnosis - bipolar disorder. Experts estimate that the number of kids with the diagnosis is now more than a million and rising. As the debate over medicating children continues to grow, FRONTLINE producer Marcela Gaviria confronts psychiatrists, researchers and big pharma about the risks and benefits of prescription drugs for troubled children.

A world of uncertainty on unemployment, Afghanistan, health care, and domestic politics, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Although it will take time and it will take patience, I am confident that our economy will recover." Rep. Kevin Brady (R-TX) said, "Today's numbers are further proof that the Obama economic policies are a failure." Cool optimism and hot pessimism on display as the unemployment rate makes a sudden jump. Nervousness at the ballot box too as Obama Democrats in two big states go down to defeat. Gov. Jon Corzine said, "There is some little sadness." Will the election results rattle the health care debate on Capitol Hill? Speaker Nancy Pelosi said, "We're right on the brink of passing historic legislation to provide quality, affordable, accessible health care for all Americans." Rep. Eric Cantor (R-VA) said, "Not one Republican will vote for this bill." And will violence at home -- and abroad -- change the course in Afghanistan? Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "It is not just the U.S. that is being tested in Afghanistan, nor is it just Britain. It is the whole international community." Covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, James Barnes of National Journal, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

Fallout from 9/11 and Guantanamo, on Afghanistan, on the Fort Hood shooting and on health care. Tonight on Washington Week. Attorney General Eric Holder said, "After eight years of delay, those allegedly responsible for the attacks of September will finally face justice." Khalid Sheikh Mohammed headed for trial in New York as the Obama administration moves toward closing Guantanamo. Even as the president narrows and expands his choices on Afghanistan. Gen. David Petraeus said, "I think that we are indeed nearing a decision on this very important topic." A decision shadowed by the sacrifice of the war's veterans and of the victims at Fort Hood. Col. John Rossi: Fort Hood has gotten its breath back and we continue to move forward. Meanwhile, Congress leaves town with another explosive issue on its health care plate: abortion. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "I expect the bill that will be brought to the floor will ensure that no federal funding for abortion." What are Democrats willing to give up to get a health care bill passed? Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal.

Four in five Americans say the U.S. health-care system needs "fundamental" change. Can the U.S. learn anything from the rest of the world about how to run a health-care system, or are these nations so culturally different from us that their solutions would simply not be acceptable to Americans? FRONTLINE correspondent T.R. Reid examines first-hand the health-care systems of other advanced capitalist democracies -- UK, France, Germany, Switzerland, Japan, and Taiwan -- to see what tried and tested ideas might help us reform our broken health-care system.

A world of uncertainty on unemployment, Afghanistan, health care, and domestic politics, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Although it will take time and it will take patience, I am confident that our economy will recover." Rep. Kevin Brady (R-TX) said, "Today's numbers are further proof that the Obama economic policies are a failure." Cool optimism and hot pessimism on display as the unemployment rate makes a sudden jump. Nervousness at the ballot box too as Obama Democrats in two big states go down to defeat. Gov. Jon Corzine said, "There is some little sadness." Will the election results rattle the health care debate on Capitol Hill? Speaker Nancy Pelosi said, "We're right on the brink of passing historic legislation to provide quality, affordable, accessible health care for all Americans."

Rep. Eric Cantor (R-VA) said, "Not one Republican will vote for this bill." And will violence at home -- and abroad -- change the course in Afghanistan? Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "It is not just the U.S. that is being tested in Afghanistan, nor is it just Britain. It is the whole international community." Covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, James Barnes of National Journal, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

Fallout from 9/11 and Guantanamo, on Afghanistan, on the Fort Hood shooting and on health care. Tonight on Washington Week. Attorney General Eric Holder said, "After eight years of delay, those allegedly responsible for the attacks of September will finally face justice." Khalid Sheikh Mohammed headed for trial in New York as the Obama administration moves toward closing Guantanamo. Even as the president narrows and expands his choices on Afghanistan. Gen. David Petraeus said, "I think that we are indeed nearing a decision on this very important topic." A decision shadowed by the sacrifice of the war's veterans and of the victims at Fort Hood. Col. John Rossi: Fort Hood has gotten its breath back and we continue to move forward. Meanwhile, Congress leaves town with another explosive issue on its health care plate: abortion. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "I expect the bill that will be brought to the floor will ensure that no federal funding for abortion." What are Democrats willing to give up to get a health care bill passed? Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, and Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal.

In March 1933, within weeks of his inauguration, President Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed. He proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests and parks, planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting fires and maintaining roads and trails. Corps workers lived in camps under quasi-military discipline, and received a wage of 30 dollars per month, 25 of which they were required to send home to their families. This film tells the story of one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, positioning it as a pivotal moment in the emergence of modern environmentalism and federal unemployment relief.

NOVA presents a comprehensive three-part, three-hour special-investigating explosive new discoveries that are transforming the picture of how we became human. The first program explores fresh clues about our earliest ancestors in Africa, including the stunningly complete fossil nicknamed "Lucy's Child." These three-million-year-old bones from Ethiopia reveal humanity's oldest and most telltale trait-upright walking rather than a big brain. The second program tackles the mysteries of how our ancestors managed to survive in a savannah teeming with vicious predators, and when and why we first left our African cradle to colonize every corner of the Earth. In the final program, NOVA probes a wave of dramatic new evidence, based partly on cutting-edge DNA analysis, that reveals new insights into how we became the creative and "behaviorally modern" humans of today, and what really happened to the enigmatic Neanderthals who faded into extinction. Shot "in the trenches" as discoveries were unearthed throughout Africa and Europe, each hour of Becoming Human unfolds with a forensic investigation into the life and death of a specific hominid ancestor, such as Lucy's Child. Dry bones spring back to vivid life with stunning animation, the product of a unique NOVA collaboration between top anthropologists and a talented team of movie animators.

This program investigates a fantastic WWII tale of jungle ambushes, extreme engineering, blow darts defenses, and enemy headhunting. In 1945, an American B24 bomber is shot down over Japanese-controlled Borneo. The airmen bail out and survive, only to find themselves isolated and lost in the impenetrable jungle. Briefed to fear the "savage" Dayak inhabitants, the Americans are instead taken in by these tribes and become witness to a compassionate, resourceful people who shatter stereotypes, protect them from the Japanese, and eventually deliver them safely into the hands of an eccentric British Major who orchestrates their rescue by building a bamboo runway deep in the Borneo interior.

A world of uncertainty on unemployment, Afghanistan, health care, and domestic politics, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Although it will take time and it will take patience, I am confident that our economy will recover." Rep. Kevin Brady (R-TX) said, "Today's numbers are further proof that the Obama economic policies are a failure." Cool optimism and hot pessimism on display as the unemployment rate makes a sudden jump. Nervousness at the ballot box too as Obama Democrats in two big states go down to defeat. Gov. Jon Corzine said, "There is some little sadness." Will the election results rattle the health care debate on Capitol Hill? Speaker Nancy Pelosi said, "We're right on the brink of passing historic legislation to provide quality, affordable, accessible health care for all Americans." Rep. Eric Cantor (R-VA) said, "Not one Republican will vote for this bill." And will violence at home -- and abroad -- change the course in Afghanistan? Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "It is not just the U.S. that is being tested in Afghanistan, nor is it just Britain. It is the whole international community." Covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, James Barnes of National Journal, Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

Fallout from 9/11 and Guantanamo, on Afghanistan, on the Fort Hood shooting and on health care. Tonight on Washington Week. Attorney General Eric Holder said, "After eight years of delay, those allegedly responsible for the attacks of September will finally face justice." Khalid Sheikh Mohammed headed for trial in New York as the Obama administration moves toward closing Guantanamo. Even as the president narrows and expands his choices on Afghanistan. Gen. David Petraeus said, "I think that we are indeed nearing a decision on this very important topic." A decision shadowed by the sacrifice of the war's veterans and of the victims at Fort Hood. Col. John Rossi: Fort Hood has gotten its breath back and we continue to move forward. Meanwhile, Congress leaves town with another explosive issue on its health care plate: abortion. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "I expect the bill that will be brought to the floor will ensure that no federal funding for abortion." What are Democrats willing to give up to get a health care bill passed? Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Tom

Ten years ago, stimulants like Ritalin and Adderall were the drugs of choice to treat behavioral issues in children. Today children as young as four years old are being prescribed more powerful anti-psychotic medications that are much less understood. The drugs can cause serious side effects, and virtually nothing is known about their long-term impact. The increase in the use of anti-psychotics is directly tied to the rising incidence of one particular diagnosis - bipolar disorder. Experts estimate that the number of kids with the diagnosis is now more than a million and rising. As the debate over medicating children continues to grow, FRONTLINE producer Marcela Gaviria confronts psychiatrists, researchers and big pharma about the risks and benefits of prescription drugs for troubled children.

He was boxy, with stumpy legs that wouldn't completely straighten, a short straggly tail and an ungainly gait, but though he didn't look the part, Seabiscuit was one of the most remarkable thoroughbred racehorses in history. In the 1930s, when Americans longed to escape the grim realities of the Depression-era life, four men turned Seabiscuit into a national hero. They were his fabulously wealthy owner Charles Howard, his famously silent and stubborn trainer Tom Smith, and the two hard-bitten, gifted jockeys who rode him to glory. By following the paths that brought these four together and in telling the story of Seabiscuit's unlikely career, this film illuminates the precarious economic conditions that defined America in the 1930s and explores the fascinating behind-the-scenes world of thoroughbred racing.

Narrated by Richard Gere, "Mustang - Journey of Transformation," tells the story of a Tibetan culture pulled back from the brink of extinction through the restoration of its most sacred sites. The Himalayan kingdom of Mustang lies on a windswept plateau between Nepal and Tibet in one of the most remote regions in the world. Isolated both by geography and politics, Mustang -- known as the Forbidden Kingdom -- has been completely off limits to westerners for 50 years. Although Mustang is culturally and ethnically Tibetan, politically it is part of Nepal. At a time when Tibetan culture in Tibet is in danger of disappearing under China's occupation, Mustang remains uniquely preserved. This starkly beautiful place is home to one of the last surviving repositories of Tibetan sacred art from the 15th century. To travel here is to journey into the past where one can witness the ancient ways of life. In 1991 Nepal opened Mustang's border to the outside world. What the first visitors found was shocking -- the ancient monasteries were on the verge of collapse; the Buddhist wall paintings were disintegrating; the community was deeply impoverished. The people needed health care, education, and jobs. Surprisingly, the King's first plea to outsiders offering help was to save the monasteries. The King understood that saving the art would save the people, because without cultural identity there is nothing. This program is a tale of hope and rebirth told by the people who helped save the Forbidden Kingdom. The film features interviews with the Dalai Lama; the King of Mustang; Luigi Fieni, the chief art restorer; and Richard Blum, founder of the American Himalayan Foundation, the NGO that worked closely with the community to restore the monasteries and bring essential social services to the people.

As credit card companies face rising public anger, new regulation from Washington, and a potential perfect storm of economic bad news, FRONTLINE correspondent Lowell Bergman examines the future of the massive consumer loan industry and its impact on a fragile national economy. In a joint project with the New York Times-a follow-up to the Secret History of the Credit Card-Bergman and the Times talk to industry insiders, lobbyists, politicians, and consumer advocates as they square off over new regulation and the possible creation of a consumer finance protection agency. How are the credit, debit, and pre-paid card industries repositioning themselves to maintain high profits under the new rules? The stakes couldn't be higher as many fear the consumer loan industry could be at the center of the next crisis.

After the turkey and the stuffing, President Obama still has a lot on his plate. I'm Pete Williams sitting in for Gwen Ifill. We'll digest it all, tonight on Washington Week. The registers are ringing. Mr. Tod Marks of Consumer Reports said, "Now matter how bad the economy is, even though people tell us they're cutting back, they're still going to be spending." But does that mean Americans think the worst is over or will high anxiety about jobs dampen the holiday spirit? And can the president do anything to help? President Barack Obama said, "I will not rest until businesses are investing again and businesses are hiring again and people have work again." After weeks of briefings and deliberation, the President prepares to reveal his plan for sending more troops to Afghanistan but even some members of his own party are already skeptical. Rep. David Obey (D-WI) said, "On the merits I think it's a mistake to deepen our involvement." Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "The ayes are 60, the nays are 39." And then there's healthcare. As the Senate prepares to debate the Democrats' plan, opponents are hoping to defeat it. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I don't think Americans really understand the scam that's going on here." Covering these stories these week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Charles Babington of the Associated Press, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

As credit card companies face rising public anger, new regulation from Washington, and a potential perfect storm of economic bad news, FRONTLINE correspondent Lowell Bergman examines the future of the massive consumer loan industry and its impact on a fragile national economy. In a joint project with the New York Times-a follow-up to the Secret History of the Credit Card-Bergman and the Times talk to industry insiders, lobbyists, politicians, and consumer advocates as they square off over new regulation and the possible creation of a consumer finance protection agency. How are the credit, debit, and pre-paid card industries repositioning themselves to maintain high profits under the new rules? The stakes couldn't be higher as many fear the consumer loan industry could be at the center of the next crisis.

After the turkey and the stuffing, President Obama still has a lot on his plate. I'm Pete Williams sitting in for Gwen Ifill. We'll digest it all, tonight on Washington Week. The registers are ringing. Mr. Tod Marks of Consumer Reports said, "Now matter how bad the economy is, even though people tell us they're cutting back, they're still going to be spending." But does that mean Americans think the worst is over or will high anxiety about jobs dampen the holiday spirit? And can the president do anything to help? President Barack Obama said, "I will not rest until businesses are investing again and businesses are hiring again and people have work again." After weeks of briefings and deliberation, the President prepares to reveal his plan for sending more troops to Afghanistan but even some members of his own party are already skeptical. Rep. David Obey (D-WI) said, "On the merits I think it's a mistake to deepen our involvement." Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "The ayes are 60, the nays are 39." And then there's healthcare. As the Senate prepares to debate the Democrats' plan, opponents are hoping to defeat it. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I don't think Americans really understand the scam that's going on here." Covering these stories these week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Charles Babington of the Associated Press, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

They were called "Black Blizzards," dark clouds reaching miles into the sky, churning millions of tons of dirt into torrents of destruction. For ten years beginning in 1930, dust storms ravaged the parched and overplowed southern plains, turning bountiful wheat fields into desert. Disease, hardship and death followed, yet the majority of people stayed on, steadfastly refusing to give up on the land and a way of life.

Despite dire warnings for our endangered planet, Jane Goodall says all is not yet lost - we can change course if we act now. And she should know. Her tough-minded optimism comes from her work as the world's foremost authority on chimpanzees in Tanzania's Gombe National Park. As a scientist and naturalist she has produced landmark studies of animal behavior that led to revolutionary insights into the evolution of human life. Now, traveling 300 days a year, she has become a global advocate for all life, challenging everyone to see ourselves as caretakers of the planet. Her new book Hope for the Animals and Their World features the heroic work of men and women working around the world to protect and preserve the Earth.

Crunch time for health care reform, plus Asia, Afghanistan and Sarah, tonight on Washington Week. Yet another big vote looming on health care. Senator Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "It's an incredible work. And the momentum has now shifted to us." Sen. Lamar Alexander (R-TN) said, "It's the same turkey you didn't like in August and it's not going to taste any better on Thanksgiving." The Senate Saturday night special. Will Democrats have enough votes? Will the GOP be able to stop them? Congress debates as the administration grapples with foreign policy in Asia. President Barack Obama said, "The United States does not seek to contain China. On the contrary, the rise of a strong and a prosperous China can be a source of strength for the community of nations." And in Afghanistan...Secretary Hillary Clinton said, "There is now a clear window of opportunity for President Karzai and his government to make a new compact with the people of Afghanistan." While on the home front, Sarah Palin turns best selling author. Former Governor Sarah Palin said, "Alaska and Michigan have so much in common with the hunting and the fishing and the hockey moms." But what else does she have in mind? Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, David Sanger of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News.

After the turkey and the stuffing, President Obama still has a lot on his plate. I'm Pete Williams sitting in for Gwen Ifill. We'll digest it all, tonight on Washington Week. The registers are ringing. Mr. Tod Marks of Consumer Reports said, "Now matter how bad the economy is, even though people tell us they're cutting back, they're still going to be spending." But does that mean Americans think the worst is over or will high anxiety about jobs dampen the holiday spirit? And can the president do anything to help? President Barack Obama said, "I will not rest until businesses are investing again and businesses are hiring again and people have work again." After weeks of briefings and deliberation, the President prepares to reveal his plan for sending more troops to Afghanistan but even some members of his own party are already skeptical. Rep. David Obey (D-WI) said, "On the merits I think it's a mistake to deepen our involvement." Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "The ayes are 60, the nays are 39." And then there's healthcare. As the Senate prepares to debate the Democrats' plan, opponents are hoping to defeat it. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I don't think Americans really understand the scam that's going on here." Covering these stories these week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Charles Babington of the Associated Press, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

As credit card companies face rising public anger, new regulation from Washington, and a potential perfect storm of economic bad news, FRONTLINE correspondent Lowell Bergman examines the future of the massive consumer loan industry and its impact on a fragile national economy. In a joint project with the New York Times-a follow-up to the Secret History of the Credit Card-

Bergman and the Times talk to industry insiders, lobbyists, politicians, and consumer advocates as they square off over new regulation and the possible creation of a consumer finance protection agency. How are the credit, debit, and pre-paid card industries repositioning themselves to maintain high profits under the new rules? The stakes couldn't be higher as many fear the consumer loan industry could be at the center of the next crisis.

Crunch time for health care reform, plus Asia, Afghanistan and Sarah, tonight on Washington Week. Yet another big vote looming on health care. Senator Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "It's an incredible work. And the momentum has now shifted to us." Sen. Lamar Alexander (R-TN) said, "It's the same turkey you didn't like in August and it's not going to taste any better on Thanksgiving." The Senate Saturday night special. Will Democrats have enough votes? Will the GOP be able to stop them? Congress debates as the administration grapples with foreign policy in Asia. President Barack Obama said, "The United States does not seek to contain China. On the contrary, the rise of a strong and a prosperous China can be a source of strength for the community of nations." And in Afghanistan...Secretary Hillary Clinton said, "There is now a clear window of opportunity for President Karzai and his government to make a new compact with the people of Afghanistan." While on the home front, Sarah Palin turns best selling author. Former Governor Sarah Palin said, "Alaska and Michigan have so much in common with the hunting and the fishing and the hockey moms." But what else does she have in mind? Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, David Sanger of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News.

After the turkey and the stuffing, President Obama still has a lot on his plate. I'm Pete Williams sitting in for Gwen Ifill. We'll digest it all, tonight on Washington Week. The registers are ringing. Mr. Tod Marks of Consumer Reports said, "Now matter how bad the economy is, even though people tell us they're cutting back, they're still going to be spending." But does that mean Americans think the worst is over or will high anxiety about jobs dampen the holiday spirit? And can the president do anything to help? President Barack Obama said, "I will not rest until businesses are investing again and businesses are hiring again and people have work again." After weeks of briefings and deliberation, the President prepares to reveal his plan for sending more troops to Afghanistan but even some members of his own party are already skeptical. Rep. David Obey (D-WI) said, "On the merits I think it's a mistake to deepen our involvement." Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "The ayes are 60, the nays are 39." And then there's healthcare. As the Senate prepares to debate the Democrats' plan, opponents are hoping to defeat it. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I don't think Americans really understand the scam that's going on here." Covering these stories these week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Charles Babington of the Associated Press, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

He was boxy, with stumpy legs that wouldn't completely straighten, a short straggly tail and an ungainly gait, but though he didn't look the part, Seabiscuit was one of the most remarkable thoroughbred racehorses in history. In the 1930s, when Americans longed to escape the grim realities of the Depression-era life, four men turned Seabiscuit into a national hero. They were his fabulously wealthy owner Charles Howard, his famously silent and stubborn trainer Tom Smith, and the two hard-bitten, gifted jockeys who rode him to glory. By following the paths that brought these four together and in telling the story of Seabiscuit's unlikely career, this film illuminates the precarious economic conditions that defined America in the 1930s and explores the fascinating behind-the-scenes world of thoroughbred racing.

Narrated by Richard Gere, "Mustang - Journey of Transformation," tells the story of a Tibetan culture pulled back from the brink of extinction through the restoration of its most sacred sites. The Himalayan kingdom of Mustang lies on a windswept plateau between Nepal and Tibet in one of the most remote regions in the world. Isolated both by geography and politics, Mustang -- known as the Forbidden Kingdom -- has been completely off limits to westerners for 50 years. Although Mustang is culturally and ethnically Tibetan, politically it is part of Nepal. At a time when Tibetan culture in Tibet is in danger of disappearing under China's occupation, Mustang remains uniquely preserved. This starkly beautiful place is home to one of the last surviving repositories of Tibetan sacred art from the 15th century. To travel here is to journey into the past where one can witness the ancient ways of life. In 1991 Nepal opened Mustang's border to the outside world. What the first visitors found was shocking -- the ancient monasteries were on the verge of collapse; the Buddhist wall paintings were disintegrating; the community was deeply impoverished. The people needed health care, education, and jobs. Surprisingly, the King's first plea to outsiders offering help was to save the monasteries. The King understood that saving the art would save the people, because without cultural identity there is nothing. This program is a tale of hope and rebirth told by the people who helped save the Forbidden Kingdom. The film features interviews with the Dalai Lama; the King of Mustang; Luigi Fieni, the chief art restorer; and Richard Blum, founder of the American Himalayan Foundation, the NGO that worked closely with the community to restore the monasteries and bring essential social services to the people.

NOVA presents a comprehensive three-part, three-hour special-investigating explosive new discoveries that are transforming the picture of how we became human. The first program explores fresh clues about our earliest ancestors in Africa, including the stunningly complete fossil nicknamed "Lucy's Child." These three-million-year-old bones from Ethiopia reveal humanity's oldest and most telltale trait-upright walking rather than a big brain. The second program tackles the mysteries of how our ancestors managed to survive in a savannah teeming with vicious predators, and when and why we first left our African cradle to colonize every corner of the Earth. In the final program, NOVA probes a wave of dramatic new evidence, based partly on cutting-edge DNA analysis, that reveals new insights into how we became the creative and "behaviorally modern" humans of today, and what really happened to the enigmatic Neanderthals who faded into extinction. Shot "in the trenches" as discoveries were unearthed throughout Africa and Europe, each hour of Becoming Human unfolds with a forensic investigation into the life and death of a specific hominid ancestor, such as Lucy's Child. Dry bones spring back to vivid life with stunning animation, the product of a unique NOVA collaboration between top anthropologists and a talented team of movie animators.

For many, what began as a typical day in a bustling cosmopolitan city turned into a nightmarish 60 hours of orchestrated terrorism broadcast live to the world via cell phones and internet, text and twitter. The same social media tools used in consumer technology to relate vital real-time news of the escalating atrocities and information about victims' situations were also used by terrorists to coordinate and plan their attacks. In a fascinating yet fatal twist, news media relying on recycled information for their headlines played a central role in a deadly game of cat and mouse between the terrorists and the victims. Told completely from the perspective of victims in their own words, voicemail messages, texts and improvised user-group postings made during the ordeal, "Mumbai Massacre" places viewers inside the harrowing experience as it was lived by survivors caught up in a sudden and indescribable horror. This remarkable program captures the desperation and courage of ordinary people in the face of death and how social media became a silent witness and simultaneously transformed news as it happened.

After the turkey and the stuffing, President Obama still has a lot on his plate. I'm Pete Williams sitting in for Gwen Ifill. We'll digest it all, tonight on Washington Week. The registers are ringing. Mr. Tod Marks of Consumer Reports said, "Now matter how bad the economy is, even though people tell us they're cutting back, they're still going to be spending." But does that mean Americans think the worst is over or will high anxiety about jobs dampen the holiday spirit? And can the president do anything to help? President Barack Obama said, "I will not rest until businesses are investing again and businesses are hiring again and people have work again." After weeks of briefings and deliberation, the President prepares to reveal his plan for sending more troops to Afghanistan but even some members of his own party are already skeptical. Rep. David Obey (D-WI) said, "On the merits I think it's a mistake to deepen our involvement." Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "The ayes are 60, the nays are 39." And then there's healthcare. As the Senate prepares to debate the Democrats' plan, opponents are hoping to defeat it. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "I don't think Americans really understand the scam that's going on here." Covering these stories these week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Charles Babington of the Associated Press, and Gloria Borger of CNN.

Crunch time for health care reform, plus Asia, Afghanistan and Sarah, tonight on Washington Week. Yet another big vote looming on health care. Senator Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "It's an incredible work. And the momentum has now shifted to us." Sen. Lamar Alexander (R-TN) said, "It's the same turkey you didn't like in August and it's not going to taste any better on Thanksgiving." The Senate Saturday night special. Will Democrats have enough votes? Will the GOP be able to stop them? Congress debates as the administration grapples with foreign policy in Asia. President Barack Obama said, "The United States does not seek to contain China. On the contrary, the rise of a strong and a prosperous China can be a source of strength for the community of nations." And in Afghanistan...Secretary Hillary Clinton said, "There is now a clear window of opportunity for President Karzai and his government to make a new compact with the people of Afghanistan." While on the home front, Sarah Palin turns best selling author. Former Governor Sarah Palin said, "Alaska and Michigan have so much in common with the hunting and the fishing and the hockey moms." But what else does she have in mind? Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, David Sanger of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News.

For the first time on television, NOVA exposes the hidden world of the high-tech, 21st century eavesdropping carried out by the National Security Agency or NSA. Today, the NSA is the world's largest intelligence agency, three times the size of the CIA and far more secret. Its mission is to eavesdrop on the world - from cell phones in Europe to pay phones in Afghanistan to e-mail messages from Pakistan to Baghdad. But since 9/11, it has also turned its giant ear inward, listening in without warrant on thousands of American citizens, many of whom are on the government's secret watch list, now more than half-a-million names long. Based on the latest bestseller by journalist James Bamford, INSIDE THE SPY FACTORY is a gripping investigation of the NSA from its tragic failures leading up to the 9/11 attacks to its secret listening rooms currently installed in the nation's telecom networks.

Ramping up in Afghanistan, answering some questions, raising new ones, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "As commander-in-chief I have determined that it is in our vital national interests to send an additional 30,000 U.S. troops to Afghanistan. After 18 months our troops will begin to come home." Question number one, will the president's build-up/drawdown work? Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "The date for withdrawal sends exactly the wrong message to both our friends and our enemies." Question number two, might it be too much? Sec. of Defense Robert Gates said, "There are no great choices in this situation. There rarely are when you're in war." Question number three? Will Hamid Karzai do his part? Daoud Sultanzoy, Member of the Afghan National Assembly said, "In the 262 years of our modern history, we have never been governed, basically. We have been ruled or misruled." And question number four, will an expanded war keep the president's eye off the distressed economy? We'll get to the bottom of these and other issues tonight with the Washington Week roundtable: Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, James Kitfield of National Journal, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

War and peace, cost and consequence, getting to the bottom of it all, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Part of our challenge is reconciling these two seemingly in reconcilable truths: that war is sometimes necessary and war at some level is an expression of human folly." The president's Nobel Peace Prize tightrope-- what does it tell us about where he and we now we stand on the world stage. And how does that widely praised speech help him with all of the other problems on his agenda, chief among them rescuing the economy and reforming healthcare. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) [Senate Majority Leader] said, "We can't disclose the details of what we've done, but believe me, it's something that's good." Sen. Charles Grassley (R-IA) said, "The last thing you want to think about when the Titanic is sinking is put grandma and more of your family on the boat." The challenges and the opportunities, we examine them all with the reporters covering the week: Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times; Dan Balz of the Washington Post; Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Pre-existing Conditions. Can your health insurance coverage still leave you uncovered? Gripping stories from America's heartland. As Congress hammers out legislation that will determine the future of health care in this country, NOW travels to the nation's heartland to see what reform could mean for the middle class. This week, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa meets two tight-knit Oklahoma families whose problems with private health insurance left them unable to get proper medical care -- and on the brink of financial ruin. One of those families - the O'Reillys -- grapples with the issue of how to cover needed respiratory therapy treatment for their eight-year-old daughter, Sophie, who was denied coverage for what the insurance company labeled a "pre-existing condition."

War and peace, cost and consequence, getting to the bottom of it all, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Part of our challenge is reconciling these two seemingly in reconcilable truths: that war is sometimes necessary and war at some level is an expression of human folly." The president's Nobel Peace Prize tightrope-- what does it tell us about where he and we now we stand on the world stage. And how does that widely praised speech help him with all of the other problems on his agenda, chief among them rescuing the economy and reforming healthcare. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) [Senate Majority Leader] said, "We can't disclose the details of what we've done, but believe me, it's something that's good." Sen. Charles Grassley (R-IA) said, "The last thing you want to think about when the Titanic is sinking is put grandma and more of your family on the boat." The challenges and the opportunities, we examine them all with the reporters covering the week: Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times; Dan Balz of the Washington Post; Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Pre-existing Conditions. Can your health insurance coverage still leave you uncovered? Gripping stories from America's heartland. As Congress hammers out legislation that will determine the future of health care in this country, NOW travels to the nation's heartland to see what reform could mean for the middle class. This week, NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa meets two tight-knit Oklahoma families whose problems with private health insurance left them unable to get proper medical care -- and on the brink of financial ruin. One of those families - the O'Reillys -- grapples with the issue of how to cover needed respiratory therapy treatment for their eight-year-old daughter, Sophie, who was denied coverage for what the insurance company labeled a "pre-existing condition."

Ramping up in Afghanistan, answering some questions, raising new ones, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "As commander-in-chief I have determined that it is in our vital national interests to send an additional 30,000 U.S. troops to Afghanistan. After 18 months our troops will begin to come home." Question number one, will the president's build-up/drawdown work? Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "The date for withdrawal sends exactly the wrong message to both our friends and our enemies." Question number two, might it be too much? Sec. of Defense Robert Gates said, "There are no great choices in this situation. There rarely are when you're in war." Question number three? Will Hamid Karzai do his part? Daoud Sultanzoy, Member of the Afghan National Assembly said, "In the 262 years of our modern history, we have never been governed, basically. We have been ruled or misruled." And question number four, will an expanded war keep the president's eye off the distressed economy? We'll get to the bottom of these and other issues tonight with the Washington Week roundtable: Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, James Kitfield of National Journal, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

War and peace, cost and consequence, getting to the bottom of it all, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Part of our challenge is reconciling these two seemingly in reconcilable truths: that war is sometimes necessary and war at some level is an expression of human folly." The president's Nobel Peace Prize tightrope-- what does it tell us about where he and we now we stand on the world stage. And how does that widely praised speech help him with all of the other problems on his agenda, chief among them rescuing the economy and reforming healthcare. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) [Senate Majority Leader] said, "We can't disclose the details of what we've done, but believe me, it's something that's good." Sen. Charles Grassley (R-IA) said, "The last thing you want to think about when the Titanic is sinking is put grandma and more of your family on the boat." The challenges and the opportunities, we examine them all with the reporters covering the week: Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times; Dan Balz of the Washington Post; Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Hour one examines how Judaism and the Roman empire shaped Jesus' life. Jesus was an ordinary Jewish resident of his time, but new archaeological findings show that Jesus was probably not the humble village peasant often portrayed. Nazareth, where he grew up, was about four miles from the cosmopolitan urban center of Sepphoris, one of the Roman provincial cities. While Rome defined one dimension of Jesus' world, the other was symbolized by the great Temple in Jerusalem. Jesus was born, lived, and died a Jew, and he was influenced by the diversity and tensions of Judaism at that time. Jesus was most likely arrested and executed by Roman authorities whose principal concern was to keep peace in the empire. Rome had little tolerance for those it judged disruptive of the Pax Romana (Roman peace), punishing them in many ways, including crucifixion. The death of Jesus was a Roman act; there was little if any notice taken by Jewish people. Jesus was another victim of the Pax Romana.

For the first time on television, NOVA exposes the hidden world of the high-tech, 21st century eavesdropping carried out by the National Security Agency or NSA. Today, the NSA is the world's largest intelligence agency, three times the size of the CIA and far more secret. Its mission is to eavesdrop on the world - from cell phones in Europe to pay phones in Afghanistan to e-mail messages from Pakistan to Baghdad. But since 9/11, it has also turned its giant ear inward, listening in without warrant on thousands of American citizens, many of whom are on the government's secret watch list, now more than half-a-million names long. Based on the latest bestseller by journalist James Bamford, INSIDE THE SPY FACTORY is a gripping investigation of the NSA from its tragic failures leading up to the 9/11 attacks to its secret listening rooms currently installed in the nation's telecom networks.

The Marines Are Landing. Over the next five years, as many as 30,000 servicemembers and their families will descend on the small island of Guam, nearly tripling its presence there. It's part of a larger agreement that the U.S. signed with Japan to realign American forces in the Pacific, but how will this multi-billion dollar move impact the lives and lifestyle of Guam's nearly 180,000 residents? This week, NOW on PBS travels to the U.S. territory of Guam to find out whether their environment and infrastructure can support such a large and quick infusion of people, and why the buildup is vital to our national security.

Ramping up in Afghanistan, answering some questions, raising new ones, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "As commander-in-chief I have determined that it is in our vital national interests to send an additional 30,000 U.S. troops to Afghanistan. After 18 months our troops will begin to come home." Question number one, will the president's build-up/drawdown work? Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "The date for withdrawal sends exactly the wrong message to both our friends and our enemies." Question number two, might it be too much? Sec. of Defense Robert Gates said, "There are no great choices in this situation. There rarely are when you're in war." Question number three? Will Hamid Karzai do his part? Daoud Sultanzoy, Member of the Afghan National Assembly said, "In the 262 years of our modern history, we have never been governed, basically. We have been ruled or misruled." And question number four, will an expanded war keep the president's eye off the distressed economy? We'll get to the bottom of these and other issues tonight with the Washington Week roundtable: Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, James Kitfield of National Journal, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

War and peace, cost and consequence, getting to the bottom of it all, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Part of our challenge is reconciling these two seemingly in reconcilable truths: that war is sometimes necessary and war at some level is an expression of human folly." The president's Nobel Peace Prize tightrope-- what does it tell us about where he and we now we stand on the world stage. And how does that widely praised speech help him with all of the other problems on his agenda, chief among them rescuing the economy and reforming healthcare. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) [Senate Majority Leader] said, "We can't disclose the details of what we've done, but believe me, it's something that's good." Sen. Charles Grassley (R-IA) said, "The last thing you want to think about when the Titanic is sinking is put grandma and more of your family on the boat." The challenges and the opportunities, we examine them all with the reporters covering the week: Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times; Dan Balz of the Washington Post; Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Shot over 11 years by renowned fashion photographer Steven Sebring, Patti Smith: Dream of Life is an intimate portrait of the legendary rocker, poet and artist. Following Smith's personal reflections over a decade, the film explores her many art forms and the friends and poets who inspired her - William Burroughs, Allen Ginsberg, Bob Dylan, Robert Mapplethorpe and Michael Stipe. She emerges as a crucial, contemporary link between the Beats, punks and today's music. Shot in lush, dark tones, featuring rare performance clips and narrated by the artist herself, Patti Smith: Dream of Life is an impressionistic journal of a multi-faceted artist that underscores her unique place in American culture. Winner of the 2008 Sundance Film Festival Excellence in Cinematography Award: Documentary. A production of Clean Socks and THIRTEEN. Produced by Steven Sebring, Margaret Smilow and Scott Vogel.

The author of Little Women is an almost universally recognized name. Her reputation as a morally upstanding New England spinster, reflecting the conventional propriety of late 19th-century Concord, is firmly established. However, raised among reformers, Transcendentalists and skeptics, the intellectual protégé of Emerson and Hawthorne and Thoreau, Alcott was actually a free thinker with democratic ideals and progressive ideas about women - a worldly careerist of sorts. Most surprising is that she led, under the pseudonym A.M. Barnard, a literary double life, undiscovered until the 1940s. As Barnard, Alcott penned scandalous, sensational works with characters running the gamut from murderers and revolutionaries to cross-dressers and opium addicts - a far cry from her familiar fatherly mentors, courageous mothers and appropriately impish children.

This feature documentary traces the life and work of American sculptor Augustus Saint-Gaudens (1848-1907) from his birth in Dublin, Ireland, to his work in New York City and Paris to his death in Cornish, New Hampshire. Trained in Paris and Rome, Saint-Gaudens is considered America's premier sculptor of the 19th and early 20th centuries. During a career that spanned three decades, Saint-Gaudens created nearly 150 works of art, including a number of major public monuments to heroes of the Civil War. The story of his personal life is woven around in-depth studies of five of his major works of art, including the contemplative Standing Lincoln in Lincoln Park, Chicago; the moving Shaw Memorial on Boston Common; the powerful Sherman Monument in Central Park; the serene Diana in the Philadelphia Museum of Art; and the stirring Adams Memorial in Washington, DC. Actor Victor Garber narrates.

Racing to beat the clock on healthcare reform while the president plays bad cop to bankers and returns from Copenhagen with a deal -- sort of -- on climate change. I'm Karen Tumulty sitting in for Gwen Ifill. What it all means, tonight on "Washington Week." President Barack Obama said, "It's clear that we are on the precipice of an achievement that's eluded Congresses and presidents for generations, an achievement that will touch the lives of nearly every American." But is it the right reform? Some big name Democrats don't think so. Gov. Howard Dean (D-VT) said, "This is essentially the collapse of healthcare reform in the United States' Senate. And honestly, the best thing to do right now is kill the Senate bill." And the dash to the finish line for healthcare reform. Could the Democrats be setting themselves up for a fall? The American taxpayer bailed out big banks but have the banks done enough in return? The president has asked for more. Is there anything he can do to get it? And the climate change issue on the world stage. Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger (R-CA) said, "I think the key thing is that we continue campaigning and continue communicating that there is global warming and this is an enormous obstacle to the future of the world." World leaders wrap up in Denmark. What did they accomplish and where do they go from here? Covering these stories these week: Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate magazine and CBS News, Greg Ip of the Economist, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Today, American teenage girls compete on the athletic field and regularly outperform the boys in their classroom. But research shows that once girls reach puberty, their self-confidence can take a nose-dive. In this documentary from the producers of RAISING CAIN, best-selling author and girls expert Rachel Simmons embeds herself in the lives of four remarkable teenage girls - Analuz, Libby, Carla and Sonia - to explore their most personal thoughts and experiences as they face new challenges posed by cyber-bullying, increased violence, poor body image and the often rocky transition from girlhood to womanhood. Simmons reaches out to parents, psychologists, teachers and social workers to find out the best ways to nurture girls into capable, resilient adults.

The author of Little Women is an almost universally recognized name. Her reputation as a morally upstanding New England spinster, reflecting the conventional propriety of late 19th-century Concord, is firmly established. However, raised among reformers, Transcendentalists and skeptics, the intellectual protégé of Emerson and Hawthorne and Thoreau, Alcott was actually a free thinker with democratic ideals and progressive ideas about women - a worldly careerist of sorts. Most surprising is that she led, under the pseudonym A.M. Barnard, a literary double life, undiscovered until the 1940s. As Barnard, Alcott penned scandalous, sensational works with characters running the gamut from murderers and revolutionaries to cross-dressers and opium addicts - a far cry from her familiar fatherly mentors, courageous mothers and appropriately impish children.

Racing to beat the clock on healthcare reform while the president plays bad cop to bankers and returns from Copenhagen with a deal -- sort of -- on climate change. I'm Karen Tumulty sitting in for Gwen Ifill. What it all means, tonight on "Washington Week." President Barack Obama said, "It's clear that we are on the precipice of an achievement that's eluded Congresses and presidents for generations, an achievement that will touch the lives of nearly every American." But is it the right reform? Some big name Democrats don't think so. Gov. Howard Dean (D-VT) said, "This is essentially the collapse of healthcare reform in the United States' Senate. And honestly, the best thing to do right now is kill the Senate bill." And the dash to the finish line for healthcare reform. Could the Democrats be setting themselves up for a fall? The American taxpayer bailed out big banks but have the banks done enough in return? The president has asked for more. Is there anything he can do to get it? And the climate change issue on the world stage. Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger (R-CA) said, "I think the key thing is that we continue campaigning and continue communicating that there is global warming and this is an enormous obstacle to the future of the world." World leaders wrap up in Denmark. What did they accomplish and where do they go from here? Covering these stories these week: Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate magazine and CBS News, Greg Ip of the Economist, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Africa: House Calls and Health Care. Can a breakthrough health care innovation in Rwanda work in the U.S.? In rural Rwanda, the simple and time-tested idea of medical house calls is not only improving the health of the community, but stimulating its economy as well. This week, NOW travels to the village of Rwinkwavu to meet the Rwandan doctors, nurses and villagers who are teaming up with Boston-based Partners in Health and the Rwandan government to deliver medicine and medical counseling door-to-door. Would such an innovation work in America? In the capital of Kigali, NOW's David Brancaccio sits down with Rwandan President Paul Kagame to talk about international aid and Kagame's ultimate vision for a healthy, financially-independent Rwanda.

Racing to beat the clock on healthcare reform while the president plays bad cop to bankers and returns from Copenhagen with a deal -- sort of -- on climate change. I'm Karen Tumulty sitting in for Gwen Ifill. What it all means, tonight on "Washington Week." President Barack Obama said, "It's clear that we are on the precipice of an achievement that's eluded Congresses and presidents for generations, an achievement that will touch the lives of nearly every American." But is it the right reform? Some big name Democrats don't think so. Gov. Howard Dean (D-VT) said, "This is essentially the collapse of healthcare reform in the United States' Senate. And honestly, the best thing to do right now is kill the Senate bill." And the dash to the finish line for healthcare reform. Could the Democrats be setting themselves up for a fall? The American taxpayer bailed out big banks but have the banks done enough in return? The president has asked for more. Is there anything he can do to get it? And the climate change issue on the world stage. Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger (R-CA) said, "I think the key thing is that we continue campaigning and continue communicating that there is global warming and this is an enormous obstacle to the future of the world." World leaders wrap up in Denmark. What did they accomplish and where do they go from here? Covering these stories these week: Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate magazine and CBS News, Greg Ip of the Economist, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Today, American teenage girls compete on the athletic field and regularly outperform the boys in their classroom. But research shows that once girls reach puberty, their self-confidence can take a nose-dive. In this documentary from the producers of RAISING CAIN, best-selling author and girls expert Rachel Simmons embeds herself in the lives of four remarkable teenage girls - Analuz, Libby, Carla and Sonia - to explore their most personal thoughts and experiences as they face new challenges posed by cyber-bullying, increased violence, poor body image and the often rocky transition from girlhood to womanhood. Simmons reaches out to parents, psychologists, teachers and social workers to find out the best ways to nurture girls into capable, resilient adults.

Racing to beat the clock on healthcare reform while the president plays bad cop to bankers and returns from Copenhagen with a deal -- sort of -- on climate change. I'm Karen Tumulty sitting in for Gwen Ifill. What it all means, tonight on "Washington Week." President Barack Obama said, "It's clear that we are on the precipice of an achievement that's eluded Congresses and presidents for generations, an achievement that will touch the lives of nearly every American." But is it the right reform? Some big name Democrats don't think so. Gov. Howard Dean (D-VT) said, "This is essentially the collapse of healthcare reform in the United States' Senate. And honestly, the best thing to do right now is kill the Senate bill." And the dash to the finish line for healthcare reform. Could the Democrats be setting themselves up for a fall? The American taxpayer bailed out big banks but have the banks done enough in return? The president has asked for more. Is there anything he can do to get it? And the climate change issue on the world stage. Gov.

Arnold Schwarzenegger (R-CA) said, "I think the key thing is that we continue campaigning and continue communicating that there is global warming and this is an enormous obstacle to the future of the world." World leaders wrap up in Denmark. What did they accomplish and where do they go from here? Covering these stories these week: Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate magazine and CBS News, Greg Ip of the Economist, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Hour three follows the story of the first attempts to write the life of Jesus - The Gospels. The Gospels were products of social and religious reconstruction in the period after the war, ranging from roughly 70 to after 100 C.E. The program looks at how these stories were passed down before they were written and how the writing of each Gospel reflects the experiences and circumstances of early Christians. They do not all tell the same story of Jesus because each one is responding to a different audience and circumstances. For example, Matthew's gospel is clearly written for a Jewish Christian audience; it is the most Jewish of all the gospels. During this time, a growing tension appeared between the emergent Christian groups and their Jewish neighbors. The result was a process of debate, identity, and separation that shaped both religious traditions forever. And there were still other external forces, including a second, devastating Jewish war, the Bar Kochbah revolt, which erupted in 132 C.E.

On the 150th anniversary of the publication of Darwin's famous On the Origin of Species, NOVA reveals answers to the riddles that Darwin couldn't explain. Stunning breakthroughs in a new science - nicknamed "evo devo" - are linking the enigma of origins to another of nature's great mysteries: the development of an embryo. To explore this exciting new idea, NOVA takes viewers on a journey from the Galapagos Islands to the Arctic, from the Cambrian explosion of animal forms half a billion years ago to the research labs of today. Here, scientists are finally beginning to crack nature's biggest secrets at the genetic level. And, as NOVA shows in this absorbing detective story, the results are confirming the brilliance of Darwin's insights, while exposing clues to life's breathtaking diversity in ways he could scarcely have imagined.

The author of Little Women is an almost universally recognized name. Her reputation as a morally upstanding New England spinster, reflecting the conventional propriety of late 19th-century Concord, is firmly established. However, raised among reformers, Transcendentalists and skeptics, the intellectual protégé of Emerson and Hawthorne and Thoreau, Alcott was actually a free thinker with democratic ideals and progressive ideas about women - a worldly careerist of sorts. Most surprising is that she led, under the pseudonym A.M. Barnard, a literary double life, undiscovered until the 1940s. As Barnard, Alcott penned scandalous, sensational works with characters running the gamut from murderers and revolutionaries to cross-dressers and opium addicts - a far cry from her familiar fatherly mentors, courageous mothers and appropriately impish children.
