(Aired on GPB Knowledge)

Death Penalty and All-White Juries: On November 2, the Supreme Court hears arguments about race and juror selection in a Georgia death penalty case in which an African-American man was tried, convicted, and sentenced to die by an all-white jury. "What the court says about jury selection, and what it says about the reasons that prosecutors have to give for striking people of color from juries, that's going to affect every case from now on," says Stephen Bright, president of the Southern Center for Human Rights, who will argue the plaintiff's case before the court.

PBS Newshour #11395

PBS

Wednesday, December 9, 6:00 – 7:00 PM

What's different about the latest challenge to affirmative action? Should race be a consideration in college admissions? For the second time in three years, the Supreme Court justices are considering the constitutionality of that question. Gwen Ifill examines the opposing viewpoints with Richard Kahlenberg of the Century Foundation and Janai Nelson of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

Quality of Education

Football Fridays

LOCAL

Fridays, October 2 through December 4, 7:30 – 10:00 PM

Stop the Drop interstitials aired during the high school football games. Stop the Drop is an initiative created by GPB that's dedicated to preventing high school dropouts. Currently, Georgia's graduation rate is less than 70 percent, well below the national average. Stop the Drop works with organizations across the state, as well as schools, educators and communities to help bring students the resources and encouragement they need to be successful throughout their high school careers. GPB's initiative aims to decrease the dropout rate by raising awareness and supporting students throughout the state of Georgia.

PBS Newshour Weekend #427

PBS

Saturday, October 3, 6:00 – 6:30 PM

On Saturday, as part of 2015 American Graduate Day that focuses on keeping students on the path to graduation, NewsHour Weekend explores the education of teachers. As the U.S. grapples with public education reform. NewsHour's Christopher Booker reports. Also on Saturday, NewsHour Weekend examines another approach to education, known as blended learning. This technique replaces a portion of traditional face-to-face instruction with web-based online learning. In particular, the computerized curriculum helps at-risk students learn at the own pace with the aim of inspiring more confidence toward scholastic achievement. NewsHour's Hari Sreenivasan reports.

Personal Health

Alzheimer's: Hope for Tomorrow, Help for Today

LOCAL

Tuesday, November 3, 7:00 – 8:00 PM

While millions of Dementia patients hope for possible cures for the myriad forms of the disease, their care givers are faced with the daily job of helping them, in quite literally every way imaginable, to live as well as possible. That is a huge responsibility. But the care givers are not alone.

There is help available. This program details where that help can be found, and how it can be applied, to make things better for everybody.
