Government/Politics	GOP support for Beshear key to reelection, Kentucky turnout data shows	Sonka	Justin Hicks, KPR Data Reporter	Kentucky Public Radio's Joe Sonka and Justin Hicks take a look at voter turnout data from last month's general election...and how that could have impacted the results of the gubernatorial race.	3:40	12/13/2023	4:45:00 PM	12/14/2023	7:45:00 AM
Women's Healthcare	Delivering Our Story: Surrogacy, Health Insurance, and Our Personal Politics	Lavery	Samantha Stanley Evans and others	Host Ariel Lavery's mail carrier is a cheerful, everyday woman who has walked roads less traveled when it comes to her reproductive journey. From her son's disabilities, to becoming a surrogate, to choosing to sterilize herself, her experience with the U.S. healthcare system has been diverse and frustrating. Yet, her outlook on solutions to issues she has faced may surprise you.	37:48:00	10/19/2023	11:00 AM
Women's Healthcare	Conjuring Nancy	Lavery	Author Tamara Dean and others	What do you know about the history of abortion in rural America? What about the women who relied on it? Imagine reaching into the past and conjuring the spirit of a woman who lived this history. In this episode, we'll hear writer, Tamara Dean, discuss her essay "Safer Than Childbirth", in which she wrote about discovering the history of, and the many lives that relied on abortion.	28:34:00	10/19/2023	12:00 PM
Women's Healthcare	Becoming Me	Lavery	JoAnn Wheeler Bland & others	Legislation is taking effect across the country that restricts transgender kids and their parents regarding gender-affirming healthcare. How will these bills affect trans kids' long-term health? While we can't predict the outcomes for these kids, we can look to the people who lived most of their lives without gender-affirming care to understand the repercussions. While access to trans-focused healthcare has increased in recent years, it is still very difficult for people to find, especially in rural areas. The cause of those difficulties isn't simply geographic; stigma against gender-affirming care plagues rural areas in particular.	39:39:00	10/20/2023	11:00 AM

Women's Healthcare	Angels in a Desert	Lavery	Darren Foreman & others	In this episode, we're featuring an innovative new program out of rural Indiana, that has taken steps toward decreasing the maternal and infant mortality and morbidity in their county, which has been declared an OB desert. And it's all headed up by the fire department.	34:04:00	10/20/2023	12:00 PM
Women's Healthcare	The Beautiful Cherry Tree from the Depths of Despair	Lavery	Holly Cherry & others	Women and girls in rural communities across the United States are being forever changed by substance misuse. Why are women in rural places being incarcerated for substances at such high rates? What can communities do to intervene and help? What resources are available? We explore these troublesome questions and find some equally troubling answers. We hear from a former substance misuser who shares a solution that helped change her life, and how her struggle with substances is a required background for her becoming a care provider to women currently trying to stay sober. And we learn how her affliction has impacted other care providers in her community.	43:55:00	10/21/2023	11:00 AM
Women's Healthcare	Who Will Be With Me at the End?	Lavery	Lis Jones & Others	Hospice care is a somewhat misunderstood medical practice in this country. People often think it's all about dying, or the opposite-keeping a dying patient alive. Neither of these perceptions are accurate. In this episode, we are focusing on what hospice care entails by sitting down with the people who provide it – hospice nurses.		10/21/2023	12:00 PM
