

As the omicron variant continues to spread rapidly throughout the country, Arkansas' Republican governor is praising President Biden's efforts to respond to the coronavirus pandemic. Gov. Asa Hutchinson joined White House officials and other governors to discuss the pandemic on a conference call yesterday. Hutchinson praised Biden for his work on combatting the virus, and particularly his address to the nation last week.

"...for the governors."

Biden last week thanked former President Trump for saying he got his booster shot against COVID-19. Hutchinson made his comments on a conference call to discuss the White House response to the latest coronavirus variant known as omicron, which has led to large increases in new cases and caused delays in testing.
