

Abortion TW

MEH

12/1 (Wed PM – 4:44)

The U.S. Supreme Court today (Wed) heard what are being called historic arguments regarding abortion. KUAR's Michael Hibblen has reaction from an Arkansas abortion opponent who says he will defy the governor when the legislature gets together next week.

(Self-contained for KUAR)

News15

5:57

SOC

During the nearly two-hour hearing, justices who members of the conservative majority suggested they might be willing to make sweeping changes to limit abortion rights.

In Arkansas, one state lawmaker who has introduced many bills over the years to further limit abortion and has said he wants a Texas-style ban considered when the legislature convenes next week for a special session. State Senator Jason Rapert...

The court is hearing a case about a Mississippi ban on abortion after 15 weeks... thoughts...

On Tuesday, governor Asa Hutchinson announced plans for a special session and wants it primarily to address a tax cut package. You said in our last interview a few weeks ago you want to introduce legislation for a Texas-style abortion bill. The governor said he would rather wait to hear what action the Supreme Court on this case. What do you think?

Will it get the needed two-thirds support since not on the governor's call?